

T. MACCI PLAVTI

MENAECHMI

Lu

N 4/6

plus
T. M A C C I P L A V T I

LL
P7217mJ M E N A E C H M I

EDITED, WITH INTRODUCTION AND NOTES

BY

P. THORESBY JONES

SOMETIME SCHOLAR OF CHRIST CHURCH, OXFORD

OXFORD

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

1918

164066
17/8/21

7
MP
7

1751579

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

LONDON EDINBURGH GLASGOW NEW YORK

TORONTO MELBOURNE CAPE TOWN BOMBAY

HUMPHREY MILFORD

PUBLISHER TO THE UNIVERSITY

CONTENTS

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION	7
1. THE PLAY	7
2. LIFE AND WORKS OF PLAUTUS	9
3. DATE OF PLAY AND AUTHORSHIP OF ORIGINAL	12
4. THE STAGING OF THE PLAY	16
5. MODERN DERIVATIVES	21
6. METRES	25
7. PROSODY: GENERAL REMARKS	34
I. SHORTENING OF LONG SYLLABLES	42
II. SYNIZESIS	46
III. LENGTHENING OF SHORT SYLLABLES	48
IV. HIATUS	49
8. SOURCES OF THE TEXT	58
SYMBOLS	61
TEXT	62
NOTES	118
APPENDIX: ADDITIONAL NOTE ON LL. 590-5	211
SCHEMA METRORUM	213
INDEX TO NOTES	215

PREFACE

IN preparing this edition of the Menaechmi I have derived much assistance from Brix's fifth edition, revised by Niemeyer, and have found Hildyard's edition, though antiquated, not without value. Among other authorities consulted I may mention Lindsay's Latin Language and Syntax of Plautus; contributions to the Journal of Philology and other periodicals by Lindsay, Onions, and Sonnenschein; Havet's Observations sur Plaute in the Revue de Philologie (1908); Sonnenschein's Rudens; Lindsay's Captivi; and Gray's Asinaria.

My best thanks for valuable corrections and suggestions are due to Mr. H. W. Garrod, who read this work in manuscript; to Mr. C. E. Freeman, who read it in proof; and to the Reader to the Clarendon Press. The text and apparatus criticus are by permission taken from the edition of Professor Lindsay in the Scriptorum Classicorum Bibliotheca Oxoniensis.

It is hoped that the Index to the Notes may prove of some slight value to scholars.

P. T. J.

INTRODUCTION

I. THE PLAY

THE plot of the Menaechmi turns upon the extraordinary resemblance of twin brothers bearing the same name, who have been separated in infancy, and of whom one, prosecuting a search for his brother in manhood, accidentally arrives at the town where the other dwells. Such a situation naturally gives rise to an abundance of comic errors and laughable incidents; and as their power to amuse largely depends upon their unexpectedness, it is not proposed to anticipate the reading of the play by giving here any detailed outline of it. The remarks which follow in this section are therefore intended to supplement the study of the actual text.

First, then, as regards the play generally, the plot is thin and improbable, merely affording a background for ludicrous situations and for a highly diverting game of cross-purposes. Apart from the unlikelihood of a resemblance, even between twin brothers, so close as to deceive the most familiar intimates, Menaechmus of Syracuse, seeing that he was actually searching for his brother when he found himself accosted by strangers as Menaechmus and obviously mistaken for some one else, would surely in real life have correctly guessed the identity of his unknown double—more especially as he knew that his brother was the original owner of the name (cf. II. ii and iii, esp. 406-13, with 1122-8). Again, it is surprising that the wife's suspicions are not aroused by the answers she receives from her supposed husband, the real Menaechmus being normally such a timid henpecked creature (see V. i, esp. 710-11). Lastly, the recognition scene is lengthened out far beyond the bounds of probability.

On the other hand these improbabilities are postulated by the incidents which form the staple of the play; and, granted those improbabilities, they follow necessarily. The weakness of the plot, therefore, detracts but little from the merit of the play, the excellence of which lies first in its atmosphere of high spirits, comic roguery, and perplexed bewilderment, and secondly in its skilful if not subtle characterization. The horse-play of I. ii, the supposed madman's antics in V. ii, and the scuffle with the lorarii in V. vii, would doubtless tickle the schoolboy-like fancy of the average Roman spectator; scenes like the baiting of Menaechmus of Epidamnus by his wife and the parasite (IV. ii), or the doctor's cross-examination of his patient (V. v), have a slightly more intellectual appeal; and such episodes as the Syracusan's cunning evasion of the results of his own mistakes (418-21, 531-7), or his brother's assumption of injured innocence, culminating in his childlike and bland Quis is Menaechmus? (651), are irresistibly humorous.

Of the characters in the play, the two Menaechmi are merely a pair of self-indulgent rogues; if any distinction is to be drawn between them, perhaps Menaechmus of Syracuse is the robuster villain. This difference seems to have been noted and developed in the Comedy of Errors by Shakespeare, whose Antipholus of Syracuse offers a strong contrast to the solemn and cantankerous Antipholus of Ephesus. Shakespeare has also drawn upon the characteristics of Messenio for his portrait of the younger Dromio twin. Just as the latter is a foil for his master, so Messenio, in comparison with Menaechmus of Syracuse, is a model of propriety (cf. 258 seq., 338-45) and of self-satisfied respectability (cf. V. vi). The last scene of the play would be tedious but for the pompous fussiness with which Messenio conducts the investigation. Of the remaining characters, the Physician is perhaps the most skilfully drawn, and the scenes in which he appears are among the most amusing (see V. iii-v). He represents a type not yet extinct. The scolding wife, the parasite, the courtesan, and the grey beard are drawn on obvious lines. Peniculus's soliloquy on the moral value of good feeding (I. i), and the courtesan's philosophy (353-6), her blarney (I. iii, II. iii), and spite under disappointment (IV. iii), are in accordance with convention, yet show a certain novelty of treatment. More subtle touches are the Parasite's anxiety to prevent over-extravagance on his patron's part (204-6), and the delicate hint of the courtesan's maid (543). Finally, the play is rich in the more hackneyed devices of the comic stage—in puns, dramatic 'irony', and swift repartee. Though the Menaechmi is not ranked highest of Plautus's productions, the opinion of most critics gives it a place among the first five or six; and perhaps the young and unspoiled will derive more entertainment from it than from more subtle plays such as the Captivi or the Trinummus.

2. LIFE AND WORKS OF PLAUTUS

T. Maccius Plautus was born about 254 B.C. at Sarsina in Umbria. Thus, like the majority of great Roman writers, he was of provincial origin. Little is known about his life; such information as we possess is mainly derived from traditions collected by Aulus Gellius. He is said to have migrated to the capital early in life, and there to have found work first as a stage-carpenter, an employment which enabled him to save a little money, and doubtless turned his attention towards his true métier. His small nest-egg, however, vanished as the result of a rash investment, and he was reduced to such straits as to seek employment with a miller as a common labourer. His duty consisted in working a treadmill, and it has been conjectured that hence he derived that deformity of the feet which, according to Festus, won him the nickname of Plautus (Flatfoot). As the word, however, is Umbrian, it was more probably a patronymic derived from an ancestor who suffered from this malformation (cf. the surnames Varus, Scaurus, &c.). During the brief intervals of leisure he enjoyed from this uncongenial work, he began to arrange plays for the comic stage. It is probable that as soon as moderate success seemed to be assured, he left the mill for the greenroom and became, like Shakespeare, at once an actor and an adapter or composer of plays. His dramatic career extended from about 224 B.C. till his death in 184 B.C.

A very large number of plays was originally ascribed to him,¹ but it is probable that the majority of these were in no sense Plautine, while many of the rest were merely adaptations of existing plays, both Latin and rough translations from Greek, carried out by Plautus as an experienced actor-manager. The case of Shakespeare again presents a parallel. At the same time several plays were early recognized as owing their Latin dress to Plautus alone, and Varro fixed the canon by enumerating twenty-one as indisputably of Plautine authorship (i.e. as adapted by Plautus from the Greek at first hand). These include the twenty still extant, together with the Vidularia, of which fragments remain in the Ambrosian palimpsest.

The plays of Plautus and Terence were fabulae palliatae, i. e. plays adapted from Greek originals, in which both the setting and the dresses were Greek (pallium = ἱμάτιον).² The Greek dramatists whose plots they borrowed were those representing the 'New' Comedy, which portrayed the contemporary social life of Athens, and which consisted mainly of variations on the same theme, with the same set of characters—fathers and sons, wives, parasites, slaves, courtesans, and panders. The prohibition of politics and personalities on the Roman stage made it impossible to adapt plays of the 'Old' or Aristophanic

¹ The public, encouraged by managers, came to regard as Plautine all comedies of the palliata class and of Plautus's time.

² Original Latin plays representing Italian provincial life (fabulae togatae) had little vogue.

Comedy or even of the transitional or 'Middle' Comedy. Thus most of Terence's plays are reproductions of Menander, the leading dramatist of the New Comedy; of Plautus's plays, three (Bacch., Cist., Poen.) are based upon plays of Menander, four (Cas., Merc., Most., Trin.) are drawn from Philemon, and the Rudens and Asinaria from lesser-known dramatists of the same school.

While, however, Terence's plays are faithful translations of his models and reproduce the delicacy and subtlety of the Attic spirit, Plautus's productions bear the unmistakable impress of the adapter's hand. Not only does he sprinkle his plays with allusions to Roman history, customs, and institutions, and with Latin puns, jokes, and turns of speech, but the more boisterous humour which is their distinguishing feature is peculiarly his own. Employed about the stage in early life, he had had opportunities of gauging the taste of the Roman populace, and knew what broad comic effects were needed to keep a Roman audience from strolling off to a rope-walking display or a dog-fight; cf. Ter. Hec. prol. 4, 33-42. His importance for us, indeed, lies in the fact that, reflecting as he did a Roman audience's well-fed jollity, coarseness, and appreciation of the obvious, he was the most truly Roman of the Roman dramatists. Terence had a more limited number of admirers—chiefly the rich and cultivated Scipionic circle. In spite of this Plautus enjoyed but moderate success during his lifetime; Terence, on the other hand, was the petted favourite of the few. In the Rome of those days, as in our own country down to the time of Pope, it was more profitable to court the patronage of the great than to win the favour of the mutable rank-scented many.

But that Plautus's work gained general, if posthumous, appreciation is evident from the numerous revivals of his plays during the period 150-50 B.C. The harsh criticisms of Horace¹ seem to reflect the estimate of a rather 'precious' circle of superior persons—cf. Pollio's depreciation of Livy. Cicero both praises Plautus directly, and flatters him indirectly by the numerous reminiscences of Plautine phrase and usage which find place in his Letters; and it may be conjectured that Caesar recognized in the more popular playwright that comica uis of which he deplores the lack in Terence. The average Roman's sentiments were probably voiced by the epitaph which Varro quotes :

¹ Epist. ii. 1. 170 seq.; A. P. 270-4.

Postquam est mortem aptus Plautus, Comoedia luget, Scaena est deserta, dein Risus, Ludus, Iocusque, Et Numeri innumeri simul omnes conlacrimarunt.

3. DATE OF PLAY AND AUTHORSHIP OF ORIGINAL

It is impossible to arrive at any certain conclusion with regard to the date at which the Menaechmi was first produced. The only passage on which even a doubtful theory can be based is ll. 408–12 Syracusis . . . ubi . . . regnator . . . nunc Hiero est. If this passage is an original addition, it was probably inserted by Plautus as a compliment to Hiero II, whose valuable assistance in 216 B.C., during Hannibal's invasion, made him a persona grata to the Romans, and who died in 215 or 214 B.C. On this hypothesis, then, the play must have been produced between 216 and 214 B.C., and is one of Plautus's earliest efforts. On the other hand, the excellence of the play seems to postulate long practice and experience on the part of the playwright, and it is unlikely that the Romans had much stomach for light farce during the early years of the Second Punic War. We are left then with the probability that Plautus took the passage as it stands from his original, which must have been either (i) a drama of the New Comedy produced between 270 and 215 B.C. (the period of Hiero II's reign), or (ii) a play of Epicharmus; in this case the reference in l. 412 would be to Hiero I, tyrant of Syracuse in the fifth century B.C.; but the mention in l. 410 of Agathocles, Hiero II's immediate predecessor, seems to be conclusive against this, and other objections may be urged against the view that Epicharmus provided the model (see below). It may be said in conclusion that the passage 408-12 is not sufficiently serious to base a theory upon (see 409-12, note), and that internal evidence seems to point to a date at which the poet's powers were fully developed.

From what Greek original Plautus derived the outline of the Menaechmi is not known. A now exploded theory ascribed his model to Epicharmus, the founder of Greek comedy proper, who lived at the court of Hiero I of Syracuse, a patron of literature, during the fifth century B.C. This view was founded on the statement made in ll. 11-12 of the Prologue, hoc argumentum . . . sicilicissitat, and seemed to derive further support from Horace's remark in Epp. ii. 1. 58 (dicitur) Plautus ad exemplar Siculi properare Epicharmi. But in the latter passage the point of comparison lies merely in the ease and rapidity with which either author developed his plot; and the words quoted from the Prologue mean nothing more than that the story has a Sicilian background or concerns Sicilian folk. Lastly, although Epicharmus, in spite of his early date, had more in common with the New Comedy than with Aristophanes, such fragments of his plays—mostly burlesques of mythological legends—as we possess afford no support to this theory, nor is there any certain instance of a Latin play based on any work of his.

A more probable, though equally hypothetical view attributes the original to Poseidippus, a dramatist of the New Comedy. This theory is based upon a remark made by a character in Athenaeus (Deipn. xiv. 658-9), οὐκ ἂν εὔροι τις δοῦλον μάγειρόν τινα ἐν κωμῳδίᾳ πλὴν παρὰ Ποσειδίππῳ μόνῳ. In Plautus's plays cooks are as a rule definitely represented as hired from the forum; but in the Menaechmi Erotium's cook appears as an ordinary domestic slave (cf. 218 note), while the cooks in the Aulularia, hired from the forum (Aul. 280-1), are evidently slaves kept for hiring out, their fees going to their owner (cf. Aul. 309-10, where Anthrax asks whether Euclio could be induced to purchase his and his fellow-cook's freedom); it has therefore been conjectured that the Menaechni and the Aulularia were derived from plays of Poseidippus. But seeing that Anthrax and Congrio are slaves, we may safely infer, what on general grounds we should naturally suspect, namely, that such hired cooks were almost invariably slaves (cf. the status of physicians, and see 951 note); and in the case of the Casina and the Mercator, where such cooks appear, the author of the originals is known to have been not Poseidippus but Philemon. Finally and conclusively, the statement in Athenaeus (which after all may not be intended seriously) is directly disproved by the appearance of a domestic slave-cook Syriscus in the newly-discovered Epitrepontes of Menander; in fragments, too, of other New Comedy dramatists cooks bear names, such as Syrus, Cario, &c., of the type given only to slaves (cf. note on Messenio under heading Personae). On other grounds, however, it is not unreasonable to suppose that Poseidippus, who wrote a play entitled Ὅμοιοι, and who was alive during Hiero II's reign, may have furnished the model from which Plautus derived the Menaechni.

The amusing errors arising from confusion of twins exactly resembling each other were evidently a favourite plot-basis with dramatists of the Middle and New Comedy; plays with the title of Δίδυμοι are ascribed by ancient authorities to six Greek comic dramatists, a Δίδυμαι to Menander, and an Αὐλητρὶς ἢ Δίδυμαι to Antiphanes. Of the six authors of Δίδυμοι, however, only one, namely, Euphron, was a New Comedy writer and flourished during Hiero II's reign. The central idea of this play and its predecessors is one rich in possibilities of comic incident; it is therefore not surprising to find it a favourite plot-basis of comic dramatists of many ages and countries (see § 5 below). Plautus himself bases the plot of the Amphitruo on a supernatural double resemblance; and Philocomasium's 'dream' in the Miles Gloriosus is a development of the same idea.

It has already been stated that Plautus adapted his models with a very free hand, introducing Roman features without much regard to consistency. The constant references to the infliction of cruel punishments on slaves are entirely at variance with the relations existing between Athenian masters and their slaves. Slave-punishments were a conventional joke, at it were, of the Roman comic stage, like mothers-in-law and drunkenness in our own music-halls. Mommsen remarks on this point: 'In the endless abundance of cudgelling and in the lash ever suspended over the back of the slaves we recognize very clearly the household-government inculcated by Cato, just as we recognize the Catonian opposition to women in the never-ending disparagement of wives'. The abuse levelled at physicians (see note on 885-6) and parasites is likewise probably due to Catonian influence. Plautus further constantly introduces allusions to Roman religion, to Roman customs, institutions and offices, and to Roman topography; the result is 'a patchwork of Roman local tints distributed over the Greek ground'.

The Menaechmi furnishes many illustrations of Plautus's method of treatment. To the Roman attitude towards slaves we have references in 79-93, 249-51, 943 (caesum . . . sub furca), 951 (pendentem fodiam), V. vi; self-assertive wives are depreciated in I. ii, 766-71, and elsewhere. Roman religion appears in the mention of the Cerealia 101, and of the proverbial stealing of Jove's crown 941; there are allusions to Roman legal and social institutions in 96-7 (enslavement for debt); 451-9 (contiones); 571-95 (clientes, and Roman legal procedure); 1028-33 and 1148-50 (manumission); notice also the metaphor from the legion and adscriptiui 183-8. Roman social customs are mentioned in 437, 445, &c. (aduorsitor), 1153 (auction), 160 (circus-games), 210-11 (Roman fondness for pork). Other features for which Plautus is responsible are puns such as those on geminus and gemere 257, on Epidamnus 263-7, on uerba and uerbera 978, on mōlitum and mōlitum 979, palla pallorem incutit 610; and comic Latin nicknames, such as Peniculus (cf. 77-8, 286, 391).

At the same time Plautus's title to originality does not rest merely upon such features and allusions as have been specified. To Terence, who however excellent a translator was little more, he offers a distinct contrast; and in dramatic instinct, spontaneity of humour, and power of characterization he may be regarded as the prototype of his far greater successor, our own—in spite of German claims—still British Shakespeare, whose plays, like those of Plautus, were original in all but plot.

4. THE STAGING OF THE PLAY

In Plautus's day the theatrical profession existed only on sufferance. No permanent theatre was built until 55 B.C., before which date dramatic representations took place on temporary stages of wood before audiences that had to bring their own chairs. While the general plan of the Roman theatre temporary or permanent, followed Greek models, the space occupied in the Greek theatre by the ὀρχήστρα (which formed a segment of a circle greater than a semicircle, and in which the chorus danced and sang) was in the Roman theatre reduced to an exact semicircle of which the front of the stage formed the diameter; and, in the absence of a chorus, this space was reserved (by law after 194 B.C.) for the senators, thus roughly corresponding to the stalls of a modern theatre. Round the edge of this semicircle, in the later permanent theatres, rose tiers of seats with gangways running down at intervals; in earlier times ground forming a natural amphitheatre was chosen for the site of a temporary theatre, and the spectators stood, or sat on their own camp-stools, in the space outside the orchestra.

The actual stage (proscenium, pulpitum) was extraordinarily long—some authorities say, 180 feet. Hence verisimilitude was given to 'asides', or to the failure of a hidden character to overhear soliloquies or conversations (cf. 478-9, 966 note), and an actor could deliver a speech of considerable length while passing from one end of the stage to the other (cf. 753 note). The scenery was primitive and conventional. The background usually represented two houses, with sometimes a passage (angiportum), which might serve as a hiding-place, running between them. The doors of these houses opened on to the stage, and served as extra stage-exits. The stage itself thus represented a street, and in the absence of any device, such as the Greek ἐκκύκλημα, whereby the interior of a room could be shown, every incident in a play had to be presented as taking place in the street, though sometimes a character spoke into a house from the doorstep (cf. 110, 351, 466). The same background served for a succession of different plays and a variety of different scenes (cf. Prologue 72-6). The main exits from the stage were by the wings, and by convention the left-hand exit (to the spectators' right) was supposed to lead to and from the forum and town proper, that on the right hand to and from the harbour. Characters arriving from foreign parts thus entered R.¹ (See also notes on ll. 226, 555, 562, 567, 700, 881, 966, 1049.) Subjoined is a plan showing the probable arrangement of the stage for a performance of the Menaechmi:—

¹ R. and L. in stage directions are right and left from the actors' point of view.

Such conventions helped the audience to follow the play, and partly did away with the necessity for a programme. Even the matter-of-fact Roman had sufficient imagination to be able to dispense with detailed explanations and elaborately realistic scenery and effects, aids without which the faculties of a modern audience would remain dormant and uncomprehending. The student is advised to re-read those prologues—among the most sonorous and noble poems in the English language—wherein Shakespeare apologizes for the deficiencies of the ‘unworthy scaffold’ on which, within the ‘wooden O’ of the Globe Theatre, the great national drama of Henry V was first played. In Plautus’s day, as in Shakespeare’s, the spectators were called upon to contribute their share of work, and to ‘piece out the imperfections’ of representation by exercise of the imagination. Shades of the commercial prison-house had not yet begun to obscure the traces of that love of make-believe, still conspicuous in bright and natural children, in which the thinker finds the psychological raison d’être of the drama. The play was the thing, not the scenery, nor the dresses—nor even the acting.

A Roman audience, however, was not required—nor had it the power—to exercise fancy in the same degree as an Elizabethan audience. The plots of Roman comedies had, for the most part, a family resemblance to one another, and mainly the same characters, with mere changes of name, did duty for each play. These stock characters could always be distinguished and identified by their dress and equipment. Young men like the Menaechmi wore black wigs and red pallia. Travellers arriving from abroad were decked in chlamys (ulster), petasus (wideawake), and sword. In this play, however, Menaechmus of Syracuse evidently leaves these articles at the harbour, and appears on the stage garbed and bewigged precisely as his brother (cf. 226 note). A parasite like Peniculus was known by his long grey or black pallium, and sometimes carried an oil-flask and strigil. Slaves were distinguished by red wigs; old men by white wigs (cf. 854), long white beards (cf. 838 hircus, 854), and walking-sticks (cf. 856). Respectable women wore pallae of plain material, white or dark-blue or green according to age, while courtesans were dressed in smart red or yellow tunics and white or yellow pallae with plenty of trimming (cf. 427 note), and in some cases wore still more elaborate attire, or appeared in an elegant déshabillé (cf. Most. 248 seq.). Wigs and paint alone served for facial disguise, masks not being used on the Roman public stage until after the time of Terence (cf. 609 note).

The division of plays by Plautus and Terence into Acts dates from the Renaissance. The Roman dramatist had perforce to observe the 'Unity of Time', and was careful to avoid pauses in the action; theatre-bars had not yet been thought of, and if any long wait had occurred, the actors would have been faced by empty benches on their reappearance. Where a short pause is unavoidable, as at Pseud. 573, an apology is made, and the interval filled with a selection of music. At the same time, owing to the exigencies of the plot, occasions would arise when the stage was momentarily empty; and in the Menaechmi at least the Renaissance editor has happily fixed the divisions between the Acts at the only four points where this occurs. Division into Scenes was of earlier date, and is a feature of all MSS. of Plautus and Terence; but here again the divisions do not correspond to any actual break, the exit of a character or entrance of a new speaker being sufficient to mark a change of Scene, which did not therefore involve change of scenery. Accordingly in some MSS. each 'Scene' bears as a heading the names of the characters taking part in it. It may be noted that in this play, instead of the existing breaks between Scenes at 875 and 888, there should be but a single break, namely, at 881.

On the other hand, Roman comedies fall into certain natural divisions, corresponding mainly to the various methods of delivery ; namely, prologus, diuerbia, and cantica. The Prologue, which was spoken, served partly to explain the plot and partly to enable the poet, through the medium of the actor, to address the audience directly and to defend himself against criticism. The Plautine prologues, few of which are original (see note under heading Prologus, p. 119), are mostly of the former variety (but cf. Men. prol. 7-12); Terence's prologues serve both purposes. The Prologue thus fulfilled the function partly of a modern programme and partly of the Parabasis of Old Greek Comedy. Diuerbia included all passages written continuously in iambic metres ; these marked the less exciting parts of the play, and were, like the Prologue, merely spoken, though necessarily in a loud tone. As on the one hand the earlier temporary theatres were uncovered, while the later permanent theatres were built without regard to the laws of acoustics, and as on the other hand the Romans did not until the time of the actor Roscius adopt the Greek fashion of wearing masks constructed on acoustic principles, the delivery of diuerbia was naturally fatiguing ; and it was chiefly owing to the strain thus entailed that cantica were interposed. Cantica proper were the lyrical monologues written in various metres (e. g. 110-34, 351-68, 571-603, 753-74, 966-89), which were sung to an air on the tibia and were accompanied by rude dancing or comic gait (see notes on 753, 754). Cantica in a wider sense included the more rapid and exciting scenes marked by the use of trochaic septenarii ; these corresponded to the recitative of a modern opera and were intoned to the accompaniment of a musical obbligato.

The functions of the Greek chorus were discharged partly by the cantica proper, which usually contained moral or social reflections—e. g. 353-6 (courtesans' philosophy), 571-95 (clientes and their drawbacks), 753-60 (evils of old age), 766-71 (masterful wives), 966-85 (the Whole Duty of Slaves)—, partly by γνῶμαι or sententious maxims scattered through the play (e. g. 87-8, 193, 249); and, in respect of the Parabasis, as has been mentioned, by the Prologue.

The strict dramatic rule nec quarta loqui persona laboret (Hor. A. P. 192) was disregarded on the comic stage; thus for the Menaechmi at least five actors (apart from κωφὰ πρόσωπα such as the lorarii and nauales pedes) were required, among whom Brix apportions the parts as follows: (1) Menaechmus I; (2) Menaechmus II, Medicus; (3) Peniculus, Messenio; (4) Cylindrus, Ancilla, Matrona; (5) Erotium, Senex.

5. MODERN DERIVATIVES

That comic dramatists were, from an early date in the history of the stage, alive to the humorous possibilities of a plot based upon the errors arising from mistaken identity, is evident from the number of plays entitled Δίδυμοι of which fragments by writers of New and Middle Greek Comedy are extant. The mediaeval drama contains numerous instances of comedies with a similar plot-basis; and, passing on to the beginnings of the modern world, we find that, in Elizabethan stage parlance, the name 'Errors' was attached to comedies of this stamp as a kind of generic term, from which we may infer that they were not uncommon. In our own day, too, we have seen numbers of ephemeral farces wherein such 'Errors' afforded the flimsy substratum of a so-called plot.

Of direct imitations of the Menaechmi there are, on the other hand, comparatively few. Hercules I, Duke of Ferrara at the end of the fifteenth century, had Italian versions of plays by Plautus and Terence performed at his court; among them was I Menecmi, produced in 1486. The earliest regular comedies, having any claim to originality of treatment, performed in mediaeval Italy (or, for that matter, in mediaeval Europe) were the plays of Cardinal Bibbiena. His Calandra, based upon the Menaechmi, was performed at Venice in 1508, and published in 1524. This was the first Italian comedy to be performed at the court of France, where it was acted by request of the sister of Henry II. Bibbiena made considerable changes in both plot and dialogue, among other alterations making the twins brother and sister; and the predilections of an Italian prelate of that age are manifest in a grossness happily absent from the original. The Calandra was rapidly followed by two more Italian adaptations of the Menaechmi, which do not call for more than passing mention: I Lucidi, by Agnolo Firenzuola, a courtly dramatist of considerable merit; and I Simillimi, by Giovanni Trissino, who is chiefly known for his rather prosaic tragedy of Sophonisba, and who also wrote an epic poem of remarkable badness. Both these writers flourished in the first half of the sixteenth century.

The next direct imitation of the Menaechmi appeared in England, where a Historie of Error was enacted 'by the children of Powles'—i. e. boys of St. Paul's School¹—'at Hampton Court on New Yere's daie at night, 1576-77'. Probably the same play (misnamed Historie of Ferrar) was performed at Windsor in 1582. A few years later, in 1594, a 'Comedy of Errors, like to Plautus his Menechmus' was performed at a Grand Night at Gray's Inn. This is identified by most Shakespearian scholars with Shakespeare's play, which is shown by internal evidence to have been first produced about 1591-2. Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors, in dramatic skill, in characterization, and above all in dialogue, towers above all other derivatives of the Menaechmi; and a reading of his play will show that his debt to Plautus is a very modest one, since even the plot, beyond which his borrowing extended but little, was by his skill recast in a far more elaborate mould. It is not here proposed to enter into a detailed account of the differences between the plot of the Comedy and that of the Menaechmi; suffice it to say that Shakespeare doubles the confusion by the introduction of a second pair of twin brothers—the two Dromios,¹ slaves to the two Antipholuses (whose originals are the Menaechmus brethren)—and introduces a pathetic background for the story in the separation by shipwreck of Aegeon and his wife, parents of the Antipholuses. The final ἀναγνώρισις is thus a triple one. The student is advised to read, side by side with this play, Shakespeare's Comedy, or at least the substance thereof in Lamb's Tales.²

¹ The Queen employed regular companies of juvenile amateur actors, composed of boys from Windsor (i. e. Eton), Westminster, St. Paul's, and the Chapel Royal choir-school, who performed plays based on classical models on days of festival. For a professional comment on this unfair competition see Hamlet II. ii. 318-47 (ed. Verity; see also his Appendix on Elizabethan Stage-history, pp. 229-33).

It must be noted that Shakespeare derived his raw material, not direct from Plautus, but partly from the Historie of Error and partly from a translation of the Menaechmi by 'W. W.',³ published in 1595, but, as is clear from the considerable number of verbal resemblances between the Comedy and W. W.'s translation, evidently seen by Shakespeare in manuscript. The title-page of this work is reproduced overleaf.

This version, which was of course made from an inferior text, is very free, and in places contains gross errors; on the other hand, it is spirited and brisk and amusingly quaint, as may be seen from the few brief extracts for which there is space in the Notes to this edition. Comparison of this translation

¹ The introduction of two pairs of characters resembling each other—masters and slaves respectively—is evidently a reminiscence of the Amphitruo, to which Shakespeare is also partially indebted for that scene of the Comedy (III. i) in which Antipholus of Ephesus is locked out of his own house while his brother dines within.

² The subject of mistaken identity was also utilized by Shakespeare in Twelfth Night.

³ Probably William Warner, an Oxford man and an Attorney of Common Pleas. He wrote Albion's England (1586). It must be added that many Shakespearian scholars doubt Shakespeare's having had access to this translation.

MENAECHI.

¶ A pleafant and fine Conceited Comædie, taken out of the moft excellent wittie Poet Plautus :

Chofen purpofely from out the reſt, as leaſt harmefull, and yet moſt delightfull.

Written in Engliſh, by VV. VV.

L O N D O N

Printed by Tho. Creede, and are to be ſold by William Barley, at his ſhop in Gracious ſtreete.¹

I 5 9 5.

¹ Gracechurch Street.

both with the Menaechmi and with the Comedy will afford both instruction and entertainment.¹

Three plays produced subsequently to the Comedy call for brief mention. Towards the end of his life, about 1705, the French comic dramatist Regnard produced a play entitled Les Menèchmes ou les Jumeaux. Its plot was derived from the Menaechmi, but the handling is weak and the dialogue frothy. Another adaptation appeared in Holland, where De Gelyke Twélingen was acted at Amsterdam about 1715. Lastly, about the middle of the eighteenth century, Carlo Goldoni, a Venetian by birth and the founder of modern Italian Comedy, produced a play based upon the Menaechmi entitled I due gemelli Veneziani, which was, however, one of his less important pieces. It is curious to note that the plot of the Menaechmi has been utilized by several pioneers of changes in the comic drama—Hercules of Ferrara, Bibbiena, Shakespeare, Goldoni. It may be said, in conclusion, that none of the imitators of this play, save only our own poet, improved upon their original.

6. METRES

I (a). The metres employed by Plautus and Terence are borrowed from Greek dramatic poetry. Since Latin was a stressed, while Greek was an unstressed, language,² these metres in most cases required modification before they could be adapted to the Latin tongue. If we accept a theory which every fresh investigation tends to strengthen,³ it was the exception in Roman comic drama for ictus (verse-beat) to conflict with accent (word-stress); but, if the Greek metres had been reproduced therein without modification, such conflict must very frequently have occurred. By way of illustration let the Iambic Trimeter be taken. The Greek poets treated this verse of six feet as one of three¹ dipodies or double-feet ($\mu\epsilon\tau\rho\alpha$): strong ictus occurred once only in each dipody; and, though substitutes for the iambus ($\cup \text{ — }$) were allowed in the first foot of each dipody, yet in order to emphasize the iambic metrical basis the last foot of each dipody (i. e. every even foot) was kept invariably pure—nothing was allowed there but an iambus: since there was no word-stress for ictus to conflict with, this presented no difficulty. If the Roman comic dramatists had, in writing iambic verses, observed this dipodic law,² ictus must frequently have fallen on the last syllable of iambic words, though such words were in Latin normally pronounced with a stress on the penultimate.³ Plautus and Terence therefore allowed, under certain restrictions, substitutions for the metrical basis in every foot of a verse but the last, and reckoned a verse by feet instead of by double-feet: in other words they did not observe the dipodic law.

¹ W. W.'s version is printed in full as an Appendix to Henry Cuninghams' edition of Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors in the Alden Shakespeare (Methuen). It has also been edited by Rouse (1912) in the Shakespeare Classics Series.

² See Introd. 7, pp. 34-5.

³ See Introd. 7, pp. 35-40.

(b) Accordingly the Greek trimeter acatalectic⁴ (three-measure complete) became the Latin senarius (six-foot); the Greek tetrameter catalectic⁴ (four-measure incomplete) the Latin

¹ Hence its Greek name.

² The Augustan poets strictly observed the laws of Greek quantitative prosody, and therefore produced artificial verse which was at variance with the laws of Latin pronunciation. See Introd. 7, p. 35.

³ As it is, words frequently occur in Plautus and Terence bearing ictus on the final syllable: the explanation is that certain word-groups (e. g. voluptās mea) were pronounced as a single word, and bore stress accordingly. See Introd. 7, pp. 38–40.

⁴ Catalectic literally means ‘ceasing’, acatalectic ‘not ceasing’. A catalectic line stops short, so to speak, before it is metrically complete: e. g. in the trochaic line

Ūp and | dōwn the | Cīty | Roād

the last foot stops short after the first syllable; both that foot and the whole line are catalectic. Contrast an acatalectic trochaic line such as Bérried | bráke and | réedy | ísland.

In English poetry catalectic feet are very common, not only at the end of a verse, but also within it: contrast the anapaestic verse

I'm gó|ing óut | with the tíde, | lād ; | you'll díg | me a núm|ble gráve
(where the fourth foot is catalectic) with the acatalectic

And your voice | will bréak | as you trý | to speák | of the glór|ious
first | of Júné.

septenarius (seven-foot)¹; the Greek tetrameter acatalectic (four-measure complete) the Latin octonarius (eight-foot).

(c) The metres thus borrowed by Plautus and Terence are principally iambic and trochaic. In reckoning the metrical value of a foot, each short syllable counts as one mora or length-unit, each long syllable normally as two: strictly speaking, therefore, the only exact equivalent for the iambus (◡ —) or the trochee (— ◡) is the tribrach (◡ ◡ ◡).² But in the verse of Latin Comedy, as in all natural non-quantitative verse, a spondee pronounced rapidly may take the value merely of an iambus or trochee, the unstressed syllable not bearing ictus seeming to count as a single mora only. For this reason the spondee (— —) and its metrical equivalents, the dactyl (— ◡ ◡), anapaest (◡ ◡ —), and proceleusmatic (◡ ◡ ◡ ◡), are, under certain restrictions, admitted by Plautus and Terence as substitutes for iambs and trochees in those feet in which they allow substitution.

(d) In Greek poetry the trimeter had three, the tetrameter four, strong ictūs or main verse-beats, one in each of the odd feet (and so one only in each dipody); there was a weaker ictus in each of the even feet. The incidence of ictus in Latin iambic and trochaic verses is generally regarded as following the Greek rule: though it has also been conjectured that, as Plautus and Terence disregarded the dipodic arrangement, such verses, as written by them, bore a strong ictus in each foot. If the first of these two opinions is accepted as correct, the theory that strong ictus seldom conflicts with accent becomes almost self-evident; but the question is here left open,³ except that (as is reasonable) an ictus falling on the last syllable of a verse is regarded as distinctly weak.

¹ Strictly, seven feet and a half.

² Hence nominally a tribrach alone can be substituted for a trochee in the last foot of a trochaic octonarius: see below, II. E. b. ii.

³ Accordingly in this edition, wherever the scansion of a line is symbolized (as frequently in this section and the next of the Introduction, and in the Notes), ictus is marked in each foot for the sake of clearness.

II. The principal metres employed by Plautus are as follow :

A. The Iambic Senarius (= Greek Iambic Trimeter Acatalectic).

(a) This is a line of six feet, each of which is either an iambus (◡ ◡) or some foot reckoned as the metrical equivalent of an iambus and permitted as a substitute therefor.

(b) In every foot but the last Plautus freely allows such substitutes; namely, the tribrach (◡ ◡ ◡; the only exact metrical equivalent); the spondee¹ (— —); and the metrical equivalents of the spondee, namely, the anapaest (◡ ◡ ◡), the dactyl (— ◡ ◡), and (rarely) the proceleusmatic (◡ ◡ ◡ ◡).

(c) A dactyl is seldom followed by an anapaest: in other words, the concurrence of four short syllables is rare except in an actual proceleusmatic foot (for explanation of an apparent instance see 495 note).

(d) A dactyl is rare in the fifth foot; a proceleusmatic is rarely used, and occurs chiefly in the first foot (e.g. v. 229 of this play); an instance of a proceleusmatic in the second foot occurs in v. 253 of this play.

(e) The last foot is normally an iambus, but may be a pyrrhic (◡ ◡). In other words, literary convention permitted a doubtful syllable (syllaba anceps) to stand at the end of a verse of this kind, as of nearly every other kind.

(f) As the collocation of two iambic words would entail a twofold conflict of accent with ictus,² the line may not end with two iambic words³ except

- (i) when change of speaker occurs between the fifth foot and the sixth;
- (ii) when there is elision immediately before the fifth foot or the sixth (e.g. 480);

¹ How the spondee could be regarded as the metrical equivalent of the iambus has been explained above, I. (c).

² See above, I. (a).

³ See 487 note.

- (iii) when two iambic words occur together in a word-group accented as a single word; e. g. 328 *malám cruce*m, 750 patrém meum.¹

(g) Caesura² must occur either in the third foot (penthemimeral³) or in the fourth (hepthemimeral³); the penthemimeral is far the commoner.⁴ On the question of hiatus at caesura see Introd. 7. IV. C. b.

(h) The Iambic Senarius was used in Roman Comedy as the ordinary metre of Diverbia, i.e. narrative passages and spoken conversation or soliloquies of a quiet type (see Introd. 4). The action of the Menaechmi is so rapid that less than a third of it is written in this metre. Usually the proportion of Senarii is larger.

(i) Few whole poems or continuous passages of Iambic Senarii can be found in English poetry. On the other hand, the so-called Alexandrine which forms the last verse of a Spenserian stanza is written in this metre. An example is where the pause after Albion gives the effect of a penthemimeral caesura. Such a line as

They sóught, | O Álb|ion! néxt | thy seá- | encírcled coást

The greát | World-víc|tor's víc|tor wíll | be seén | no móre gives the effect of a line with hepthemimeral caesura.

B. The Iambic Septenarius (= Greek Iambic Tetrameter Catalectic).

(a) This is a line of seven and a half iambic or quasi-iambic feet.

(b) It is a general rule, to which there are very few exceptions, that a diaeresis⁵ must occur between the fourth foot and the fifth. In this case the line must be regarded as falling into

¹ See also note ad loc.; and on word-groups consult Introd. 7, pp. 38-40.

² A caesura is a break, occurring within a foot, between two words.

³ Penthemimeral = occurring after the fifth half-foot; hepthemimeral = occurring after the seventh half-foot.

⁴ A caesura might simultaneously occur in any other foot or feet.

⁵ A diaeresis is a break, occurring at the end of a foot, between two words.

two hemistichs¹ to the extent that the fourth foot must be a pure iambus; and may be so regarded to the extent that hiatus may occur at the diaeresis and that syllaba anceps may occur at the end of the fourth foot (i. e. a pyrrhic may in the fourth foot be reckoned as an iambus).

(c) In the rare cases where there is no such diaeresis caesura must occur in the fifth foot, and substitutes for the iambus are allowed in the fourth.

(d) With the exception mentioned in (b), any of the substitutes enumerated in A. (b) above is permitted in any of the complete feet, though a proceleusmatic is rare except in the first and fifth (i. e. the first foot of each hemistich).

(e) A dactyl is seldom followed by an anapaest; cf. A. (c).

(f) The final half-foot consists of a single syllable, long or short (syllaba anceps).

(g) In this play the Iambic Septenarius occurs but rarely, and only in Cantica proper (133-4, 980).

(h) As an example of this metre in English may be quoted The Brí|ton név|er tér|givér's'd, || but wàs | for ád|verse drúb|bín|g.

C. The Iambic Octonarius (= Greek Iambic Tetrameter Acatalectic).

(a) This is a line of eight iambic or quasi-iambic feet.

(b) The final foot must be a pure iambus, though syllaba anceps may occur at the end of the line (i. e. a pyrrhic may there be reckoned as an iambus).

(c) Otherwise the rules are the same as for the Iambic Septenarius (see B. b, c, d, e, above), except that neglect of the diaeresis is less rare.² Proceleusmatics occur, as there, chiefly in the first foot (as in 987) or in the fifth (as in 1001).

¹ i. e. as forming two separate half-lines. So in English such a line as is quoted in (h) below may be (and generally is) printed as two.

² The apparent spondees occurring before diaeresis in the fourth feet of lines 995 and 999 are probably to be scanned as iambs by disregarding final -s before an initial consonant. See Introd. 7. I. D. b.

(d) In the Menæchmi Iambic Octonarii occur either in Cantica proper (e.g. 121-2, 128-9, 131-2, 986-7) or in lively passages of recitative (quasi-Cantica; see Introd. 4) such as 995-1005, 1060-2.

(e) As specimens of this metre in English may be mentioned Campbell's Hohenlinden and Byron's Mazeppa.

D. The Trochaic Septenarius (= Greek Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic).

(a) This is a line of seven and a half feet, whereof each complete foot is either a trochee (— ∪) or some foot reckoned as the metrical equivalent of a trochee and permitted as a substitute therefor.

(b) In every complete foot except the fourth and seventh Plautus freely allows such substitutes; namely, the tribrach (∪ ∪ ∪, the only exact metrical equivalent); the spondee¹ (— —); and the metrical equivalents of the spondee, namely the dactyl (— ∪ ∪), the anapaest (∪ ∪ —), and (rarely) the proceleusmatic (∪ ∪ ∪ ∪).

(c) It is a general rule, to which there are very few exceptions, that a diaeresis must occur between the fourth foot and the fifth. In this case the line must be regarded as falling into two hemistichs to the extent that the fourth foot must be a trochee or its sole exact metrical equivalent, a tribrach; and may be so regarded to the extent that hiatus may occur at the diaeresis² and that syllaba anceps may occur at the end of the fourth foot (i.e. in the fourth foot a spondee may be reckoned as a trochee, and an anapaest as a tribrach). The practical result is that before a diaeresis any substitute for the trochee may be allowed except a dactyl³ or a proceleusmatic.

¹ How the spondee could be regarded as a metrical equivalent of the trochee has been explained above, I. (c).

² For examples of such hiatus, which is very common, see Introd. 7. IV. C. a.

³ The apparent exception in 152 may be due to the elision at the end of the fourth foot there, which renders the diaeresis impure; but the line is corrupt.

(d) In the rare cases where there is no such diaeresis, any of the substitutes mentioned in (b) is allowed in the fourth foot.

(e) The seventh foot must be either a trochee or a tribrach.

(f) A dactyl is seldom followed by an anapaest: see A. (c) above.

(g) A proceleusmatic is rare except in the first and fifth (i.e. the first foot of each hemistich). In this play, however, proceleusmatics occur twice in the second foot (618, 957), as well as in the fifth (1069).

(h) The final half-foot consists of a single syllable, long or short (syllaba anceps).

(i) With the exceptions mentioned in A. (f)—where the rule is explained—the line may not end with two iambic words, though endings of the permissible malám-crucem type occur often, e.g. 915, 1017.

(j) This is the metre ordinarily employed in passages of lively narrative or excited dialogue delivered in recitative (quasi-Cantica: see Introd. 4). More than half the Menaechmi is written in Trochaic Septenarii. It is curious that the first four continuous passages are of 97 lines each.

(k) In English this metre is frequently employed in comic verse; e.g.

Mány a | státely | hóme he's | éntered, || bùt, with | únob-|
trúrive | táct,

Hè has | né'er, in | páying | vísits, || cálléd at|téntion | tò the |
fáct.

E. The Trochaic Octonarius (= Greek Trochaic Tetrameter Acatalectic).

(a) This is a line of eight trochaic or quasi-trochaic feet.

(b) The rules governing the Trochaic Septenarius (see D. b, c, d, f, g), are observed in the Trochaic Octonarius with the following modifications:

(i) The substitutes mentioned in D. (b) are permitted in all feet but the fourth and eighth (they are allowed in the seventh).

- (ii) The rule stated in D. (c), regarding substitution in the fourth foot when followed by diaeresis, is observed in the eighth foot as well. In other words neither a dactyl nor a proceleusmatic is allowed in the final foot.

(c) Neglect of the diaeresis-rule is less rare. When it occurs there is a caesura in the fourth or fifth foot, as well as permission of any substitute in the fourth foot (cf. 977 in this play).

(d) A proceleusmatic is rare except in the first foot (cf. 119) and the fifth (e.g. in 773-4,¹ 978); it occurs in the second in 977.

(e) In this play, with the exception of a single line (1007) occurring in a boisterous passage, the Trochaic Octonarius appears only in Cantica proper (e.g. 119, 590-1, 594, 773-4, 977-8, 982).

(f) This metre is not often employed by English writers, but an example may be found in

Chárlotte, | háving | seén his | bódy || bórne be|fóre her | òn
a | shútter,
Like a | wéll-con|ductéd | pérsón, || wént on | cúttíng | bréád
and | búttér.

F. A detailed analysis of the metres employed in the Cantica proper is beyond the scope of the present edition; but a few remarks may be of use. Besides the Iambic Septenarius and the Iambic and Trochaic Octonarii, shorter iambic and trochaic metres are not uncommon in the Cantica, usually appearing in conjunction with other rhythms; but most frequent are systems of which the metrical basis is either

- (a) the Anapaest (∪ ∪ ∘); e.g. 357-8, 361-4, 367-8, ¹ If eiús is read there.

602-3, 983-4. The general effect of the rhythm may be illustrated by such lines as or (b) the Bacchius (∪ √ -); e. g. 571-9, 753-72, 966-71. An exact illustration can hardly be obtained from English verse. Less common are systems based upon the Cretic (√ ∪ -; cf. 112-13, 115-18, 580), or the Choriambus (√ ∪ ∪ -; cf. 110).

Who can sée | the green eárrh | any móre |
As she wás | by the sóur|ces of tíme ?

7. PROSODY

The apparent irregularities and inconsistencies of Plautine prosody are for the most part to be explained by reference to Plautus's chronological position. Early Latin verse—written in the native Saturnian metre¹—and Latin popular verse of all ages depended for its rhythm, like the verse of all Indo-European languages except Greek, upon word- and sentence-accent, and therefore upon quantity only indirectly. Greek prosody, on the other hand, is wholly based upon quantity² whether natural or artificial (i.e. determined by position). The reason why Greek verse holds this anomalous position is that, while all other Indo-European languages were and are stressed—one syllable or more in each word being emphasized in pronunciation—, Greek was unstressed and admitted only variations in

¹ Attempts have been made to prove that the Saturnian metre was quantitative; but the mass of authority, from Bartsch and Westphal down to Lindsay, is in favour of regarding it as accentual. According to the generally accepted view the Saturnian verse consisted of two hemistichs, the first containing three, the second two, stressed syllables, ictus coinciding with stress. The commonest forms were of the type or, dábunt málum Metélli || Naéuio poétæ

príma incédit Céreris || Prosérpina phér.

² By quantity is meant the time taken in pronouncing a syllable. Roughly speaking, a long syllable should take twice as long to pronounce as a short one.

voice-pitch or musical tone.¹ Furthermore, in the Latin tongue as spoken, quantity was considerably influenced by accent² or stress, while the absence of stress in Greek resulted in the retention of original quantities and therefore in a quantitative prosody governed by fixed and strict rules.

The Roman Comic Dramatists, feeling the need of some medium of expression more finished and artistic than the rough accentual metre of early Latin verse, turned naturally to their models, the plays of the New Greek Comedy, for their metres as well as for their plots and characters, and adopted in its broad outlines the Greek quantitative prosody. At the same time, however, in the determining of quantity they were influenced largely by the practice of every-day speech; they regulated quantity (especially the quantity of syllables long by position and of the final syllables of iambic words) rather by the natural word- and sentence-accent than by the strict rules followed by Greek poets. Ennius, who borrowed the Greek hexameter, approximated more closely, in his treatment of quantity, to Greek models.³ The final development is reached in the precise quantitative prosody of the Augustan poets and their imitators, who followed strict rules that were to some extent at variance with the natural rhythm of the Latin tongue.⁴ In this respect Plautus and Terence may be called more truly Latin poets than Virgil, Horace, or Ovid⁵; they were adapters rather than imitators of Greek prosody.

¹ The accents printed in our modern Greek texts denote such tone-variations only.

² The term 'accent', in respect of Latin and other I.-E. languages (except Greek), denotes stress.

³ Ennius himself, however, retains features of the older prosody in his iambic verse.

⁴ Strict quantitative prosody is alien to other I.-E. languages, e.g. our own; see for instances Tennyson's Attempts at Classic Metres in Quantity.

⁵ Virgil and Horace show traces of the earlier prosody, especially in their more colloquial poems, i.e. the Eclogues and the Satires and Epistles respectively. Similar traces appear in Catullus, Propertius, and Ovid.

The apparent anomalies of Plautine prosody are due, then, partly to his chronological position midway between the age of the native accentual prosody and that of the exotic strictly quantitative prosody, and partly to his endeavour to effect a compromise between the latter and the natural stressed pronunciation of Latin.¹ These important facts were not realized until a comparatively recent date. For long ages the prosody of Roman Comic drama remained a riddle apparently insoluble. Nor was the solution forthcoming as long as no canons were recognized except those of the Augustan age. Ritschl was the first scholar to put the metres of Plautus on a rational basis. He first pointed out that, though Plautus's metre was quantitative, some regard was taken of the accent which words bore in ordinary speech; and that the words which fall into the metrically unaccented parts of any line are generally 'sentence-enclitics', i.e. words of no special importance. Ritschl's theories were confirmed and further developed by his successors in the field of Plautine research, who demonstrated that the shortening of long syllables, the occurrence of hiatus,² and the other apparent irregularities of Plautine prosody, followed definite laws of their own; and that these laws were generally to be explained in part by the influence of ordinary pronunciation, in part by that of metrical ictus. Among the leading scholars of the Ritschelian school may be mentioned Langen and Klotz, whose conclusions, still further elaborated by Brix,³ were introduced to English students by the labours of Sonnenschein.⁴ Their explanation of the most striking peculiarity of

¹ The speech of his characters had of necessity to reflect that of everyday life.

² Ritschl himself failed to see that the frequency of hiatus in Plautus reflected a peculiarity of ordinary speech. One school of his followers strove to eliminate hiatus from the text of Plautus by indiscriminate emendation. Editors devoid of Bentley's knowledge, taste, or acumen strove to out-Bentley Bentley. W. Wagner is the worst offender.

³ See Einleitung to his edition of the Trinummus.

⁴ See his edition of the Cablini (Sonnenschein).

Plautine prosody is summed up in the so-called Law of Breves Breviantes, which is thus enunciated by Sonnenschein: 'A long syllable may be treated as short when it is both preceded by a short syllable and either preceded or followed by an ictus.'

Recent investigations tend to show that both the name—'Short (syllables) Making (others) Short'—and the wording of this Law are misleading: that accent, rather than either ictus or the presence of a preceding short syllable, was primarily the determining cause of shortening. And indeed, it was the chief and perhaps the only serious fault of Ritschl's immediate followers that they attributed too much influence to ictus. Further investigators in the same field, among whom Seyffert, Studemund, and Lindsay¹ hold a foremost place, have demonstrated that in the verse of Plautus accent plays a far more important part than ictus in the determination of quantity; that, owing to Plautus's skill in arrangement, accented syllables are, as a general rule, placed in those parts of the line which receive ictus²; and that the apparent exceptions to this rule admit, in a large number of cases, of clear and convincing explanation.

Their explanations may be roughly summarized as follows. In ordinary Latin speech of the classical era words received their accents according to a principle known as the Penultima Law, by which disyllables were accented on the penultimate, polysyllables on the penultimate or the ante-penultimate according as the penultimate was long or short.³ In the verse of Plautus apparent conflict between accent and ictus occurs most frequently (1) in certain words of more than three syllables where ictus falls on the first syllable; (2) in words where ictus falls on the last syllable.⁴ Exceptions of the first

¹ See Lindsay's articles in the Journal of Philology, vols. xx-xxii, xxvii; and his edition of the Captivi (Methuen).

² Or, to put it differently, ictus usually falls on accented syllables.

³ Words of more than three syllables have also a secondary inferior accent, as Mercūrius, flāgitium, ōnerāriæ, tēpestātibus (cf. in Eng. multitudinous).

⁴ Certain other apparent exceptions occur in words which have lost kind are confined to quadrisyllables with the first three syllables short, or of the type consilium. The explanation is that in Plautus's day such words were still subject to the influence of an older system of accentuation of which unmistakable traces are found. According to this earlier law all words were accented on the first syllable irrespective of length or quantity. There is therefore no real conflict between ictus and accent in words like múlieres, fácilius as they occur in Plautus's verse¹ (cf. Men. 321, 978). Words of the consilium type sometimes retain the older accentuation (as cónsilium), sometimes follow the newer system (as consílium); they were in a transitional stage.²

Difficulties of the second class—where ictus falls on a final syllable—are less amenable to explanation. With regard perhaps to the majority of the very numerous instances of an iambic word occurring at the end of a line³ it can only be said that the ictus falling on the final syllable of a line is of the secondary or weaker variety, so that the conflict of ictus with accent is not harsh. Of instances of other kinds, those namely in which ictus falls on a final syllable elsewhere in a line, many may be satisfactorily explained by reference to sentence-accent. In ordinary speech certain words, as appearing in certain recurring word-groups, receive a different accent from that which they would bear if pronounced separately; e. g. uolúptas

a final short syllable following a long one, and are normally accented in classical Latin on the final remaining syllable, e. g. words of the types cuidás (= cuiátis), addúe (= addúce), postháe (= post-há-ce), credín (= credísne). Further, some cases have been explained by reference to a supposed law that when a final syllable was elided the accent was shifted one foot nearer the beginning of a word; but this is doubtful.

¹ Words of this type were normally accented thus even in Latin of the best period.

² The change in the system of accentuation seems to have arisen as follows. Polysyllables naturally acquired a secondary weaker accent, e. g. tóleràre, témpestàtibús (cf. in Eng. légionàries); gradually the principal and the secondary accent changed places, and this novel accentuation-system was extended until it became the universal rule.

³ Or at the end of the first hemistich of a long iambic line.

or mísero in many collocations bear the ordinary accent, but in word-groups such as uoluptás-mea, uac' miseró-mihi the accent is dragged forward by the unimportant words or 'sentence-enclitics' following the words in question. To put it differently, word-groups of this kind are treated as single words and accented accordingly. Lindsay makes a full classification of sentence-enclitics which may thus affect accentuation; a brief outline may here be given, with the addition of a few examples taken at random from this play:

(a) all parts of the verb esse, auxiliary or copulative; e.g. 654 defessí sumus; similarly es and est frequently coalesce with a preceding word, as 41 surrúptust, 293 moléstu's, &c. (Probably in these cases es and the two first letters of est disappear altogether: i. e. we should write surruptus't, molestus.)

(b) possessive pronouns when unemphatic; e.g. 300 crám meam, 597 oculis inspexí meis, 750 patrém meum (see Introd. 6. II. A. f. iii).

(c) personal pronouns when unemphatic; e.g. 396 ire infitiás mihi; cf. 640 mé rogas? (emphatic) pol haú rogém te (unemphatic).

(d) a verb which is used with a noun to express an action that might be expressed by a verb alone, as frequently do and facio, e.g. 61 dotatám dedit, 99 medicinám facit, 176 forés ferio, 343 amittúnt domum, 630 tetulí pedem.

(e) nouns of subordinate meaning, such as res, modus, &c., e.g. 84 aliquó modo, 317 illóc modo; here we may place such groups as malám crucem, 66, 328; and expressions of time such as intereá loci 446, trigintá dies 951 (cf. 91 cottídie).

(f) similarly prepositions coalesce with a governed word following; e.g. 91 ád fatim, 684 ád forum; so frequently áb se, &c.

It may, then, be enunciated as a formal law that Plautine prosody depends mainly upon the word- and sentence-accentuation of ordinary speech; but that Plautus so constructs his ies that the rhythm produced by the metrical ictus as a rule corresponds with the natural accentuation. Certain features of ordinary pronunciation, which are reproduced in Plautus's verse, may here be summarized :

INTRODUCTION

I. In many cases syllables which later poets scanned as long were in ordinary speech pronounced as short, owing to the influence of word-accent : e. g. (A) the accentuation, in ordinary speech, of the first syllable in iambic words (or word-groups) such as dómi, máne, &c., tended to the shortening of the final syllable ; (B) on the other hand, the stressing of the penultimate in polysyllabic words (or word-groups) such as uoluptátem, senectútem, &c., tended to the shortening of a long antepenultimate : these two rules explain most instances of the so-called Law of Breves Breviantes. (C) A few unimportant words of very frequent occurrence, such as ille and iste in all cases, were normally unaccentuated in popular speech ; when used emphatically, however, they bore the usual accent on the penultimate. (D) In rapid conversation final -s after a short vowel was frequently dropped before an initial consonant (e. g. nimi' stulte), and before an initial vowel when a participle in -us or adjective in -us or -is preceded es or est (e. g. emortuost, tristest = tristis est : but see above, p. 39 (a), and I. D. c below).

II. Ordinary pronunciation slurred many words, in which two or more vowels occurred in conjunction, in such a way that the vowels coalesced (synizesis). Thus mēō, hūius, dīes were frequently pronounced as monosyllables ; tūorum, ēāmus, &c., as disyllables. Cf. the old story about Caunias and caue ne eas (i. e. cāuē ne ēās).¹

III. In certain word-endings which had become normally short before the age of the Augustan poets, the original long quantity seems, in spite of the accent-influence, occasionally to have affected the pronunciation of Plautus's day. This may be inferred from the fact that the original long quantity of the verb-terminations -it, -et, of the noun-termination -or, and of the comparative endings, -or, -us (to give a few instances) is occasionally reproduced by Plautus.

¹ Cic. de Div. ii. 40. 84.

IV. With regard to the much-discussed question of hiatus it is more difficult to find a basis for Plautine usage in popular speech. It may, however, be conjectured that, while as a general rule a final vowel or vowel + m was slurred in speech before a following initial vowel, yet in certain combinations and word-groups such final syllables retained part of their value; and that Plautus's treatment of certain constantly recurring phrases showing hiatus,¹ such as eū hērclē, eū ēdepol, tū īstic, sī āmas, cūm ēo, dūm ēo, flagitium hōminis, &c., exactly reproduces their popular pronunciation.² Again, by the law of inertia the influence of the original final -d of the ablative must have still affected speech for some time after the -d had ceased to be actually pronounced.³ Lastly, in ordinary conversation a final vowel or vowel + m, normally slurred before a following initial vowel, would naturally retain its full value if a pause of any kind occurred before the ensuing word.⁴ The fact that Plautus allows hiatus in certain combinations, avoids it in others, and in others again uses hiatus or elision indiscriminately, would probably admit of easy explanation if we had a complete knowledge of the laws of Latin pronunciation.

It remains to give instances collected from this play of those peculiarities of Plautine prosody which reproduce the features of ordinary pronunciation as enumerated above. The sections which follow are numbered and lettered to correspond with the summary given in the preceding paragraphs, to which reference should be made when necessary. In accordance with the general practice the position of the metrical ictus is indicated

¹ See IV. A, B, D (a), F, below.

² This supposition is strengthened by the existence of such compounds as dēerro, dēamo, circūmagō, circūēo, prōhibeo, &c.

³ See IV. E, below.

⁴ See IV. C, D, below.

in the instances given below ; but impartial examination will show that in the great majority of these instances the ictus falls on a syllable bearing word- or sentence-accent, i. e. a syllable which would be stressed in ordinary conversation. One further warning: in what follows the terms long and short are, for convenience' sake, used in the ordinary way, i. e. of syllables which Augustan poets treated as long and short respectively.

I. Shortening of Long Syllables.

A. A long syllable may be (and commonly is) scanned as short if the preceding syllable is short and bears ictus ¹

(a) in disyllabic words (including words of three syllables made disyllabic by elision), an iambus being thus weakened to a pyrrhic :

(i) when the vowel of the final syllable is either long by position or long by both position and nature, as 16 ádēst | benig|nitas ; 208 ápūd tē |, cf. 795, 1034 ; 351 sīnē fōrēs | sic ; 689 dēdīsti ē|am ; 786 mi | pāter, cāu|ere ; 860 ēnīm uē|ro ; 389 ēgōn tē |, cf. 653 ; 828 uīdēn tu īl|lic ; 527 nōuōm | recon-|cinna|rier (though perhaps this is an instance of synizesis ; cf. 542, and see II. e. below).

(ii) when the word ends in a long vowel ; chiefly in the case of imperatives, as 179-80 mānē, 416 tācē, 517 iūbē, 934, 994 cāuē, 225 rēdī.

(b) in word-groups wherein an iambus occurs : more definitely, when a word of one short syllable (or a word of two syllables of which the first is short and the second elided) is followed by a word forming or beginning with a long syllable having a vowel or h as its first letter, this long syllable is commonly treated as short when the preceding short syllable bears ictus¹ : as 222 ēgo ēt Mēn|aechmus, cf. 1009 ; 530 scīn quīd

¹ And, therefore, word- or sentence-accent also (according to the view adopted above).

hōc | sit. cf. 675; 1072 ēgo hūnc cēnsēbam. cf. 732; 633 mīhi ēssē|; 320 ān ōp̄sono; 468 īta īḡnora|bitur.

B. A long syllable may be (and often is) scanned as short if the preceding syllable is short and the succeeding syllable bears ictus:

(a) in polysyllabic words having the first syllable short, the second long, and ictus on the third: here the second syllable is treated as short, e. g. 259 uōlūptā|rii; 37 Syrācū|sas (contrast 408, 1097 Syrācū|sis); this example, however, as occurring in the Prologue, may be a faulty imitation of Plautine scansion; instances of the shortening of vowels long by nature occurring in a polysyllabic word are to be regarded as doubtful.

(b) in word-groups wherein a bacchius¹ occurs: more definitely, when of three consecutive syllables, belonging to two or more words, the first is a short initial syllable, the second is long, and the third bears ictus, the second syllable is commonly shortened: either

(i) when it is long by position or long by both position and nature, as 384 quid hōc | sit, cf. 1129-30; 983 mētum īd mīhi ād hibeam; 89 āpūd mēn|sam; 253 tāmēn nēquē|o; 309 hic | quidēn qui īp|se; 362 fōrēs quōi|; 510 satīn sān|us; 592 ōpūs ērāt | dīcto; 983 lōcīs sīm |; 1028 sī tuōm | nēgās (though perhaps this is a case of synizesis; cf. 588 clīens quī|dam, and see II. b. below); 229 quāsi āduēnī|ens; a double instance in 983^a cārēnt mētū|ōnt ī | sōlēnt ēs|se. (In these combinations it is in such a vast majority of cases the rule that the short syllable which precedes the shortened syllable is an initial syllable, that one regards with suspicion instances such as 152 habe|āmūs āt|que hūnc; the text is doubtful; see notes ad loc.).

(ii) when it is long by nature only; chiefly in the case of imperatives, as 1106 rōgā: | rēspon|debo; 291 iūbē tē|; 348

¹ Or a paeonic (— — —), i. e. a resolved bacchius.

tăcē-dūm | ; 603 mănē : măle ăr|it ; so in the case of long final vowels of ablatives, as 602 uīrō mē | mălō mălē | ; so when the vowel is not final, as 114 fōrās | ire ; 983^a ērīs ũ|tibilēs.

C. The first syllables of certain frequently occurring demonstratives (esp. ille and iste) are normally treated as short, though scanned as long when the words are used emphatically. Employed in conversation much in the same way as our articles, they were normally unaccentuated, and tended to lose the unflexed and therefore unimportant first syllable (cf. French le, la, les = illum -am -os, &c.). Instances falling under this head are, as will readily be observed, merely special cases of A. (b) or B. (b), as :

(a) when ictus falls on a preceding short (or shortened) syllable (cf. A. b) : 22 ūt quīdem il|le, cf. 336 ; 604 nē illam ē|castor, cf. 837 ; 606 quīd illūc |, cf. 682, 789, 958, 962, 997 ; 183 īdem īstūc |, cf. 184, 375, 622, 782 ; 344 nūnc īn īs|tōc ; 413 nūm īstāec | ; 651 tū īstūc |, cf. 653, 937 ; it is best to scan 673 heūs ! ēlquīs hīc as a case of A. (b).

(b) when the preceding syllable is short and the succeeding syllable bears ictus (cf. B. b) : 23 ēgo illōs |, cf. 41, 46, 246, 535 ; 536 ūbi illae ār|illae ; 853 hāu măle īl|lānc, cf. 861, 994 ; 94 īta īstāec |, cf. 265, 528 ; 145 sēd quīd īs|tāe, cf. 391, 791, 809. Similarly with ecum, &c. (cf. French celui = ecce illum), as 275 sēd ēccūm, 565 sēd ēccām. A good instance of the contrast between the emphatic and the ordinary treatment of such words occurs in Mil. 972 si illā uolt)(973 quīd illā faciemus concubinā ?, where illā is merely an article.

D. Final -s following a short vowel may in some cases be disregarded in scansion : ¹

(a) before an initial consonant, in disyllables with the first syllable short. Here the disregard of the final -s reproduces the rapid pronunciation of an iambic word accented on the first syllable and ending in -s. Instances falling under this head are merely special cases of A. (a) or B. (b), as :

¹ It is frequently disregarded by Ennius and Lucretius.

(i) when the ictus falls on the preceding syllable (cf. A. a) :
 55 māgī | maio|res ; 126 fōrīs cē|nat ; 384 nīmi' mī ror ; 707
quībū' | dictis, cf. 941, 955 ; 769 ēst mōdū' | tamen ; 921 prū'
quām | ; 1028 sī tuom | nēgās mē | esse ; instances of sātin, uīdēn (= satisne, uidēsne) fall under the same rule, e. g. 181
sātin ūt | ; 741 sātin | haec ; 646 uīdēn ūt |.¹

(ii) when the ictus falls on the succeeding syllable (cf. B. b) :
 81 nīmi' stūl|te, cf. 94, 588, 701 ; 208 tribū' | nōbis, cf. 1027 ;
 363 māgī quām | dōmū' tūā | dōmū' quom hāec | tua sit ; 603
sāti' . sī | sapiam.

(b) before an initial consonant, in disyllables with the first syllable long. This occurs chiefly in experimental metres, the slurred syllable coming between two long syllables both bearing accent and one ictus, e. g. (bacchiacs) 753 hōc ū|sū' fācto ēst, cf. 757, 760, 975 ; (cretics) 113 fāxis, fāx|o. In verse 556 sīquīs, if right, must be scanned as a pyrrhic ; but see note ad loc. The rule that the fourth foot of an Iambic Octonarius, when followed by diaeresis, must be pure (Introd. 6. II. C. c) makes it probable that in 999 we should scan quō fēr|tis mē, and even extend the licence to include polysyllables, so as to scan dūbītā|tis iām in 995.

(c) before an initial vowel. This occurs only when a participle in -us (-os) or an adjective in -us (-os) or -is is followed by es or est, and is probably due to the fragmentary pronunciation of the auxiliary or copula. (Possibly molestu's, surrupust, &c. should be written molestus, surrupust's, &c.) That the determining cause was pronunciation and not metre is evident from the fact that the final syllable thus formed by coalescence sometimes bears the metrical ictus. A few instances only need be given :

(i) accent in agreement with ictus : 41 qui | sūrrūp|tūst

¹So uīden ut is scanned by Vergil and Ovid.

āl|terum, cf. 905 ; 293 quī mǎhī | mōlēś|tū's hōmī|nī, cf. 295, 493, 1104 ; 1063 tam con|sīmīlēst | quam pō|test (where perhaps it would be better to write consimilist = consimilis(es)t).

(ii) ictus on final syllable : 312 non | sānū's | satis, cf. 946 ; 434 quīd ēo ōp|hūst? (weak ictus), cf. 938 ; 36 ēmōr|tūōst (at end of line ; cf. 404, 484).

E. One or two more peculiarities of Plautine scansion, and a few particular cases, may be given a place under the head of Shortening :

(a) Plautus never, like later poets, avoids leaving a final short vowel before words beginning with such combinations as sc, sm, sp, sq, sl.

(b) Plautus never lengthens a short vowel before a combination of mute and liquid in the same word (e. g. patria, agros always have first syllable short). The scansion of quī nēc le|gēs 580 may be an extension of this rule, but the shortening of ne is probably due to its position between two accented syllables both long.

(c) The shortening of long final vowels where hiatus occurs (e. g. tū īstīc) is illustrated under the heading Hiatus (see below, IV. A. a).

(d) A few cases of apparent shortening do not fall under any of the rules given above. In some instances shortening may be due to final -m losing its consonantal power (i. e. merely nasalizing the preceding vowel), e. g. 592 dīxērām | cōntro|uor-si|am, 916 prīmūlūm . | quīn ; both these lines, however, are probably corrupt ; see notes ad loc. Some cases need the application of surgery ; e. g. in 39 Tūrēn|tī ēs|se is an impossible scansion, though it may, as occurring in the Prologue, be an erroneous imitation of Plautine prosody.

II. Synizesis.

The same practical result as is obtained by the shortening of long syllables under certain circumstances is procured in certain other cases by Synizesis,¹ a process by which two or more separate successive vowel-sounds are fused into one syllable (as in the Cockney pronunciation of now, out, &c.). That synizesis, as occurring in the plays of Plautus and Terence, reproduces a peculiarity of pronunciation, is evident from two considerations: (i) they allow it only in a limited number of words and inflexions of words; (ii) examination of instances will show that, in words liable to contraction by synizesis, the accent falls, as a rule, in the uncontracted word, on one or other of the successive vowel-sounds, and is therefore borne, in the contracted word, by the syllable resulting from vowel-fusion; that in the majority of cases metrical ictus also falls on the contracted syllable; and that, when it does not, an explanation can be found in the incidence of sentence-accent (see above, pp. 38-40).

In this play synizesis occurs in the following classes of words:

(a) Cases of is and idem, and genitives of qui, quis, and *hic*²: as (i. bearing ictus) 35 ēā|que; 892 ēā | te caus|sa, cf. 1060; 424 ēūm uo|lo, cf. 497; 428 ēādēm; 221 quōtūsmo'di, cf. 577; 1135 hūiūs: (ii. not bearing ictus) 59 ēi; 151 ēō; 749 ēōdēm | diē (a word-group accentuated on the antepenultimate); 1090 ēān|dēm.

(b) Cases of meus, tuos, suos: as (i) 81 mēā, cf. 200, 783, 905, 1029; 202 mēis; 394 mēāē (emphatic); 372 tūis; 393 tūā, cf. 792; 658 tūām (emphatic); 902 sūō (emphatic); 188 tūā ēst; 804 mēā ōrnamēta: (ii) 726 tūōs mō|res (a word-group; cf. p. 39); 1028 sī tūōm | nēgās (perhaps a case of I. B. b. i).

(c) Cases of deus, dies, and a few similar nouns: (i) 812 dēōsque; 1053 dēūm fī|dēm (a word-group); 154-5 dīēs 1013 hō'dīē; 764^a quīd | siēt rēi: (ii) 616, 655 pēr Iō'uēm dēōs|que ōmnis (Iouem deosque is a word-group with accent falling on the second syllable when the -que is elided; contrast 811-12); possibly 588 clīēns quī|dam (more probably a case of I. B. b. i).

¹ Synizesis occurs not infrequently in the works of the Augustan poets.

² In the present text eius, quius, huius, quoi are so printed when they suffer synizesis; otherwise they are printed eius, quotius, huius, quoi.

(d) A few verb-inflexions : as (i) 17 fūit, 514-15 fūis|se ; 387 ēamus, cf. 422, 1154 : (ii) 885 ait (so frequently).

(e) Possibly some words in which intervocal u occurs : as (i) 527 nōuom (more probably a case of I. A. a. i) : (ii) 344 nāuis (but see note ad loc.).

(f) Certain compound words : as (i) 376 praeūt, cf. 935 ; 769 quoad ; 802 praeibet ; 953 prōinde ; 782 prōin tū (tu unemphatic) : (ii) 327 prōin tū (tu emphatic).

III. Lengthening of Short Syllables.

Certain terminations, among which may here be noted conjugation-endings in -is, -at, -et, -it, and comparative-endings -or, -us, were originally of long quantity ; influence of accent gradually weakened the value of these final syllables until, by the time of the Augustan poets, they were almost invariably treated as short before an initial vowel. In Plautus's time they were in the final stage of transition, and their treatment as short by nature was the rule ; yet under the influence of metrical ictus the original long quantity was occasionally retained by the comic dramatists ; more rarely, an indisputably short syllable was thus lengthened. It will be seen that this suffix-lengthening occurs often before a pause and invariably in syllables bearing ictus : e. g.

(a) conjugation-endings : 943 ēs ē|missus (es is always scanned as long by Plautus and Terence) ; 487 quid āis, | hōmō (probably a word-group common in conversation) ; 1101 emer|is ār|gento ; 203 dec|ēt ānī|matos ; 52 uēlīt, | audac|ter (at pause) ; 759 quom ād|uēnīt, ād-|| fert (at pause) ; 921 perci|pīt īn|sanī|a ; 956 faxo er|īt . ābē|o (at change of speaker) ; 1045 factus | sīt, ā | me (at pause, cf. 755) ; 1160 uēnī|bīt—ūx|or (pause before comic παραπροσδοκίαν). Of these cases, only 203 and 956 are doubtful.

(b) comparative-endings : 327 lon|gūs | ab ae|dibus ; 846 ampli|ūs . ēn|im (at change of speaker). Though these instances have been doubted, they present no real difficulty. The Indo-European comparative suffix-stem was -iyāns-, which gave rise to Greek -iōv- (shortened to -iō- in all cases but nom. sing. m. and f.) and Latin -iōs- (= -ions-). The latter became -iōr- in inflexions by rhotacism of medial -s-, and in nom. sing. was finally weakened to -iōr, -iūs.

(c) Other instances: 506 sin|āpūt, intel|lego (at pause before parenthetic word). Here the lengthened syllable may originally have been long (caput = caputs? cf. praeceps = praecipets). Two further cases, namely, 841 lampadi|būs ār|denti bus, 887 du|cē|medicum (?), can be explained only by the influence of ictus. Possibly both lines are corrupt¹; see notes ad loc.

IV. Hiatus.

With regard to the 'permission of hiatus'² by the comic dramatists, three facts should be clearly realized: first, many phrases found in Plautus and Terence in which hiatus occurs are common phrases of every-day life reproduced with their ordinary pronunciation; secondly, a final syllable capable of elision, if for any reason a distinct pause occurred after it, would in conversation (as in the comic drama) normally retain its full value before an initial vowel-sound. Thirdly and especially, the difference, in respect of permission of hiatus,² between the comic dramatists and the Augustan poets was one of metrical treatment only, not of pronunciation. To put it more clearly: in reading such a passage of Vergil as

*Aenean fundantem arces ac tecta nouantem
Conspicit; atque illi stellatus iaspide fulva
Ensis erat, Tyrioque ardebat murice laena Demissa ex umeris . . .*

an educated Roman would not have been guilty of emitting

¹ The instance in 841 may be justified by Vergil, Aen. iv. 64 pēctori|būs īnhī|āns.

² This phrase is used for convenience' sake in place of some such correct but clumsy expression as: retention of metrical value, wholly or partially, by syllables capable of elision but not elided before initial vowel or h.

such barbarous cacophonies (all too familiar to the school-master) as fundantarces — atkilli — Tyriokardebat — demissex umeris. He would certainly have slurred the terminations in question, but the slurred syllables would still have been recognizable. The point in which the comic dramatists differed from the Augustan poets was that the former frequently did, while the latter as a rule did not, reckon such slurred syllables as part of a metrical foot. The Augustan poets¹ consciously adopted, as far as metre was concerned, the Greek treatment of elided syllables. The reason why the Greeks did not count such syllables in the scansion was that in ordinary speech their elision was not a slurring merely,² but the actual dropping of a vowel-sound, such as may be heard in the northern counties of England, where ‘down the street’, ‘in the beck’, ‘over the fell’ are actually pronounced ‘doont’ strate’, ‘int’ beck’, ‘owert’ fell’. In adopting strict rules of elision the Augustan poets were borrowing tastelessly from Greece a second metrical usage—the first being quantitative prosody—which, while perfectly adapted to the Greek tongue, was totally foreign to the genius and natural pronunciation of the Latin language.

On the other hand Plautus, who in this respect as in others was far more truly a representative of genuine Roman literature, followed the natural practice of reckoning or disregarding a slurred syllable in scansion according to the requirements of metre. Such a practice should present no difficulty to the student of English literature, who will frequently find a syllable, word, or phrase reckoned in the scansion in this passage, and disregarded metrically in that, and who will not feel it necessary to give it a grotesque pronunciation in the latter case. Shakespeare writes, as the last three feet of a line,

Ay. Färe | you wéll, | fair gentleman

¹ And their forerunner Ennius.

² Except in a few cases such as μη οὐ, &c., which fall under the head of synizesis.

without expecting Celia to abbreviate the last word; on the other hand he gives the word its full metrical value in other lines such as Polonius's

'Good sir', | or sò, | or 'friend', | or 'gén'tlemàn'.

To summarize briefly, Plautus, though freely using elision, frequently allows syllables capable of elision¹ either part of their metrical value (especially in certain frequently recurring phrases), or full metrical value (before pauses in metre, sense, or delivery). It may be added that instances of both these natural methods occur, though comparatively rarely, in the works of the Augustan poets.

Instances of Hiatus in this play may be classified as follows:

A. Hiatus is frequently allowed, in certain constantly recurring phrases, after certain monosyllables capable of elision:

(a) ending in a long vowel or diphthong (chiefly tu, sí, and parts of quí), the vowel or diphthong retaining half its value only, i.e. being shortened: as,

(i) when the unelided syllable bears ictus: 115 (a cretic) quò ego eām, cf. 618; 789 quò cāt|; 374 quāc hōmīnem, cf. 473-4; 786 quí ego ís|tuc, cf. 1120; 651 tū ístic|, cf. 653, 937; 744 quēm tū hō|minem; 789 nē íd ōp|serues; 238 sē āc|um, cf. 751; 460 sē íd ít|a esset, cf. 815-16.

(ii) when the unelided syllable does not bear ictus: 9 quo íl|lud; 502 sí aē|quom (to be read sí-y-aequom, cf. 578 sí ēst paū|per); 471 nī hānc| (doubtful); 513 quía | tū és (tu emphatic, cf. 379 úbí tū | hūnc); some instances under this head may be due partly to loss of old ablative-ending -d, as 1028 (at diaeresis) nēgās mē | ésse, cf. 713 (where hiatus may be justified on other grounds). Most of the instances under this head have suffered unnecessary emendation, since it has been denied by certain authorities that hiatus may occur after a monosyllable which does not bear ictus. The criterion, however, is properly pronunciation, not metre; and, to take but one case, an emphatic tu such as occurs in 379 or 513 would be but little slurred in conversation, and therefore could surely have been permitted by Plautus to stand in hiatus, even though lacking ictus. Indeed, the ordinary Plautine usage seems to be that a monosyllable standing in hiatus bears, or does not bear, ictus according to the natural accentuation of the word-group in which it occurs. It is evident, then, that he follows conversational usage.¹

¹ This phrase, here and subsequently, must be taken to mean: final syllables ending in a vowel, a diphthong, or -m preceded by a vowel, when they occur before an initial vowel-sound.

(b) ending in -m following a vowel (chiefly iam, nam, num, dum, cum, and parts of qui), such monosyllables being treated as short: as,

(i) when the unelided syllable bears ictus: 194-5 iām ōpōr|tēbat, cf. 405, 519; 808 iām ēgo ēx | hōc, cf. 954; 413 nūm īstaēc|; 449 dūm hīē|tō, cf. 93; 482 rēs cūm ē|a essēt, cf. 188 cūm ūtrō|; 1054 quōm ēgo āc|cūrro; 903 quēm ēgō|, cf. 1133; 393 quām āb ūx|ōre; 448 quām hōdī|e, cf. 601; 565 quām hā|buīt, cf. 695.

(ii) when the unelided syllable does not bear ictus: 292 nām ēquī|dem, cf. 82; 227 quām | quōm ēx|, cf. 446; 675 māgi quām | aēta|tī, cf. 497; 737 ītā | rēm ēs|se, cf. 453. Instances falling under this head have suffered emendation, but unnecessarily; see a. (ii) above.

B. Hiatus is sometimes allowed after certain disyllabic words, namely, (a) words normally scanned according to necessity as iambs or pyrrhics (especially mīhī, tībī, sībī, ēgō, hōmō), such words when they occur in hiatus being scanned as pyrrhics, e. g.

(i) when ictus falls on the first syllable of the word: 840 mīhī ēx | ōra|clo; 827 tībī aūt |, cf. 389; 719 nōn ēgō | īstaēc;

¹ Occasionally Augustan poets revert to the natural usage, as Verg. Ecl. viii. 108 ān qui ām|ānt, Cat. xcvi. 1 ita | mē dī ām|ēnt. Note that in both instances the unelided syllable bears no ictus. Similar phrases in Plautus (as Men. 194-5 nām sī ām|ābas) should be similarly scanned.

1087 illic hōmō aut | ; and perhaps 600 and 1003 (but see D. a. iii, c. ii).

(ii) when the disyllable bears no ictus: 903 quē m egō hōmīnēm ; 1061 ūt ē gō hōdī c (probably common word-groups).

(b) words which are normally iambs, but which, when ictus coincides with the natural accent on the first syllable, may be scanned as pyrrhics: as 740 tūa ē ūxōrī. In Vergil's uā|lē, uālī, | inquit accent alone has sufficed to shorten the final syllable of a word of very common use occurring in hiatus and lacking ictus.

C. Hiatus is of frequent occurrence at a metrical pause, especially in a long line such as the trochaic septenarius, where it was natural for an actor to take breath at the end of the first hemistich; in the shorter iambic senarius such pause was less needed, and when hiatus occurs at the caesura it may usually be referred to another cause.¹ Instances of either kind are:

(a) Hiatus at the diaeresis of a trochaic septenarius; very common, as in 399, 406, 435, 604 faēner|ātō | āpstū|līstī (perhaps partly due to the influence of the lost ablative-ending -d; cf. 796, 1028, and see E below), 667, 681, 778, 870, 923, 950, 1013, 1091, 1112, &c.; especially frequent when diaeresis coincides with a pause in sense or delivery: e.g. with change of speaker, as in 156, 379, 384, 422, 650, 651, 821, 868, 937, 1075, 1077, 1094; with a strong pause or contrast in sense, as in 219, 431, 808, 847; with a pause before or after an interjection or parenthetical word, as in 673, 696, 851; with anaphora, as in 939-40; with a pause in a line delivered with comic solemnity, as in 859.

(b) Hiatus at the caesura of an iambic senarius. It is almost certain that the caesura-pause alone cannot justify hiatus, though it may be an additional justification for a hiatus allowed on other grounds.

¹ It is obvious that when hiatus occurs at a metrical pause the unelided syllable can never bear ictus. With regard to its quantity, it is safest to take it as doubtful, unless the metrical pause coincides with a pause in sense or delivery, in which case the unelided syllable retains its full value.

(i) Of instances of hiatus at the penthemimeral caesura in this play, those in 26 and 67 are doubtful, as occurring in the Prologue; that in 91 (ár|bitrá|tű áđ |fatím) may primarily be due to the influence of the lost ablative-ending -d (cf. 546, 737, and see E below); in 280 such hiatus coincides with change of speaker; in 546, 882 between contrasted clauses; in 508, 544, 898 with a strong pause in sense; in 567 it follows an interjectional word. This leaves the instance in 89, which is doubtful (see note ad loc., and also F below).

(ii) The instances of hiatus at the hepthemimeral caesura occurring in 720, 737, 739 probably mark sobs punctuating a passage delivered singultim; see D (d) below.

(c) Hiatus is regularly permitted at the diaeresis of longer iambic lines (Septenarius and Octonarius) and of the Trochaic Octonarius: see Introd. 6. II. B. b, C. c, E. b.

D. Hiatus occurs frequently at a pause in delivery or sense: in the latter case the unelided syllable may retain its full metrical value. Such pauses must be objectively real, and not merely existent in the mind of the editor: they must fall under one of the following heads:

(a) before or after interjections and interjectional or parenthetic words and phrases: in this group the unelided syllable is shortened if long, unless the hiatus coincides with a strong pause.¹ Instances are:

(i) after interjections ending in a vowel or diphthong, in familiar word-groups,² as 160 eű ěđě|pól; 731 eű hěr|cle, cf. 872; 604 ně illam ě|cástor, cf. 614; 640 ő hõmìn|ēm ma|um; double hiatus in 316 eű hěr|clě hõmìn|em, 908 eű | ěđěpól | ně ěgo hõm|ó:

¹ Incidence of ictus is immaterial.

² Hiatus after such interjections may also be regarded as a special case of A. (a).

probably 471 is to be scanned non hēre cō is sum (without hiatus after nē).

(ii) before interjections beginning with a vowel or h, and before interjectional phrases, as 497 quān dē pol; 673, 696, at a strong pause before heūs, occurring at diaeresis: 713 rogās mē? hōmīnīs īm pudēntem audāciām! (see also C. i and E below).

(iii) before or after vocatives, as 517 iūbē, hōmō īn sanis- sūme, 1003 *ēgō | ēre, aū dacis sūmē*¹ (or ego, ērē, aūd-), 1004 mālūm, Ēpīdām nīi; 432-3 Messenī ō, āccede huc.

(iv) before or after parenthetic words, as 533 nōn | mem- nīs | tī, ōpsecro? 567 ēc cūm ōp tūmē | reuōrt itur (hiatus at caesura): 851 ām | ābō, | ādserua īstunc (at diaeresis), cf. 405 iām,
āmā | bō, de-.²

(b) At change of speaker; here the unelided syllable may retain its full metrical value. Such hiatus is common, though elision is more usual (e.g. 640 &c.): for instances see 147 (after me = med, cf. 299, and E below), 380, 401, 547, 1003; it occurs when change of speaker coincides with caesura, as in 280; and is very frequent when change of speaker coincides with diaeresis, as in 156, 379, 384, &c. (see list of instances in C. a above).

(c) At distinct pauses in sense, the unelided syllable retaining its full value: either

(i) where the pause is sufficient to justify a full-stop or colon,³ as in 188 (after legi ō), 713⁴ (after me = med, cf. 737), 1038; occurring at diaeresis, as in 673,⁴ 696,⁴ 808; or at caesura, as in 737, 898.

(ii) where a break occurs between two clauses of an ¹ This is also an instance of B. (a).

² This is also an instance of A. (b).

³ Such hiatus is not infrequently allowed by Augustan poets: e.g. Verg. Aen. i. 16, 405.

⁴ See also D. a. ii above.

antithesis¹ (especially if there is chiasmus); as in 476,² 963, 1098 (but see note ad loc.), 1123; occurring at diaeresis, as in 431³; or at caesura, as in 544, 546,³ 882.

(d) At a pause in delivery for some dramatic purpose; e. g. 188 cūm ūtrō | — hānc noc|tem sī|es (introducing comic παρὰ προσδοκίαν); 508⁴ (to express assumed indignation); cf. 563, which might be printed pallam ad phrygionem — cum coró|nā — *ēb|rius*⁵; 784 (to mark dictatorial tone); 859⁵ (to mark comic 'frightfulness'); 1088 numquam | uīdī | ā|lter|um (to emphasize surprise); 1125, before ēgo sum Sosicles (either to give time for an embrace, or to emphasize the catastrophic disclosure); 1158 fūndī, | aēdes (in a list of separate items given in imitation of a praeco: but see note ad loc.). The series of hiatuses in 720, 737 (two), 739, 740 (two), probably marks sobs; see C. b. ii above.

E. In some cases hiatus may be due, partly or entirely, to the influence on pronunciation of the lost ablative-ending -d.

(a) In the case of me and te the old pronunciation still lingered on in Plautus's time; accordingly hiatus frequently occurs after them in his plays, though chiefly at a break in metre or sense (many instances have been noted under C and D); when hiatus follows them elsewhere, me, te are printed med, ted in the present text. The accusatives of these pronouns are by false analogy treated in the same way.

(b) Other instances are 91 (at caesura); 526 pón|dō ūn|ciam (an old commercial phrase; see note ad loc.); 563 (see D. d above); 882⁴ lumbi | sedén|dō, ōcū|li spec|tando | dolent (see D. c. ii); 395 rītū | āstans; 495 homī|ni ignó|tō in|sciens; 1115 a | pātrā | āueh|it; 1151 nōstrā | ēx sen|tenti|a. The last four instances are doubtful, especially 495: see notes ad loc. Probably the influence of the lost -d was not alone sufficient to justify hiatus,

¹ Such hiatus is not infrequently allowed by Augustan poets, even where the break occurs merely between separate clauses of a sentence; e. g. Verg. Ecl. ii. 53, viii. 41, x. 13; Georg. i. 4; Aen. iii. 606.

² This disputed hiatus is attested by a consensus of A and P.

³ See also E.

⁴ At the caesura.

⁵ At the diaeresis.

except in the case of me and te, and a few fixed legal and commercial phrases: it may, however, be an additional justification of an hiatus allowed on other grounds. It may here be remarked that, as will have been obvious, in a considerable proportion of the cases quoted under C, D, and E, several grounds combine to justify hiatus, as for instance in 431 iam se|quár tē; hūnc uo|lo etiam | conloqui (pause with chiasmus, diaeresis, loss of -d), or in 546 immo | cedo úps | tē; ēgō | post tibi | reddam | duplex (pause with chiasmus, caesura, loss of -d).

F. Some authorities state that hiatus was allowed by Plautus before certain common words beginning with h-, especially homo, hic, habeo and their inflexions. The true explanation of apparent instances of this rule is probably that such words frequently occurred in common word-groups wherein ordinary pronunciation allowed hiatus. An examination of instances in this play shows that most apparent cases of this rule can be referred to other causes: e. g. the instances in 374, 379, 473-4, 744, fall under A. (a); that in 82 under A. (b); those in 903, 1061, under B. (a); that in 406 under C. (a); that in 89 (doubtful) under C. (b); those in 316, 640, under D. a. i; that in 713 under D. a. ii, D. c. i, and E. Of the cases remaining, in 489, 709 flāgīt|ūm hōmīn|is is obviously a popular term of abuse invariably thus pronounced; in 223 ōctō | hōmīnūm may possibly reproduce popular pronunciation: but see note ad loc.

G. A few instances of hiatus occur, in the MSS. of this play, which cannot be referred to any of the above rules, and probably indicate corruptions in the text: namely in 13 (unmetrical), 292 ēquī|dēm īn|sanum es|se, 428 ēādēm | īgnō|rabitur, 446 plus trī|gīntā | ānnis, 525 (unmetrical), 558 dī | mīhī | ēx me | sciat, where hiatus would be possible only if mihi could here be scanned as a pyrrhic: see B. (a). In all these cases satisfactory, if not certain, emendations have been proposed:

see notes ad loc. It may be added that all cases of hiatus which Prof. Lindsay regards as doubtful are in the present text marked by a perpendicular line following the unelided syllable; but for many of these instances explanations have been attempted in the preceding sections. Possibly the non-consonantal pronunciation of final -m was more general than is usually supposed.

8. SOURCES OF THE TEXT

The sources that we possess for the text of the Menaechmi are as follow :

(1) The codex Ambrosianus (A), a MS. of the fourth century A.D. written in capitals, now in the Ambrosian Library at Milan. It is unfortunately a palimpsest, the original text having been obliterated, and a part of the Vulgate superimposed thereon, by a too zealous monk of the seventh century. Cardinal Mai, who discovered the MS. early last century, partially recovered the original script by the aid of chemicals, which, however, subsequently caused parts of the MS. to rot away. Between philistine monk and scholarly prelate this valuable MS., once containing the whole of Plautus, has suffered so severely that about a third of it only now remains, and that very hard to decipher. Of this play nearly two-thirds is either missing or totally undecipherable, namely, ll. 1-56, 126-58, 303-42, 346-56, 374-445, 508-10, 595-1005, and 1066-1131. Of the remaining 470 odd verses about a quarter are fairly complete; the rest show either beginnings or ends (the central portions of the pages having suffered the most), or merely faint traces of letters or words.

(2) All other extant MSS. of Plautus (usually named the Palatine group, from their original home) are derived from a common archetype, which was a minuscule MS. of the eighth or ninth century. The readings of this MS., inferred from a consensus of the extant minuscule MSS., are designated by the symbol P. It is further conjectured that before the loss of the original P, two copies of it at least were made, from one of which extant minuscule MSS. derived eight plays, the remaining twelve being derived from the other. These supposed copies are referred to respectively by the symbols P^{BD} (source for the 'first eight' plays, i.e. Amph., Asin., Aul., Capt., Curc., Cas., Cist., Epid.), and P^{BC} (source for the remaining or 'last twelve' plays).

Of extant MSS. of the P group containing the Menaechni, the chief are :

(a) Codex Vetus (B), a MS. of the tenth or early eleventh century, now in the Vatican Library at Rome. It contains all the plays, but there are clear indications¹ that the last twelve plays are not derived from the same copy of P as the first eight. Hence has been inferred the existence of P^{BD} and P^{BC}, referred to above. This MS. was discovered in the sixteenth century by the German scholar Camerarius, and is the main source of our existing texts. Where, however, its authority clashes with that of A, preference is as a rule to be given to the readings of the latter on the score of its superior antiquity. Valuable corrections by several hands appear in B, the most important being those denoted by the symbol B².

(b) Codex Ursinianus (D), now in the Vatican, a MS. of rather later date than the last. It resembles B fairly closely, that part of it which contains the last twelve plays being, it is conjectured, derived from a missing original (P^{CD}) which, like the corresponding part of B, was a copy of P^{BC}.

(c) Codex Decurtatus (C), a MS. of the eleventh or early twelfth century, now at Heidelberg. Its readings closely resemble those of D, C and D having probably been derived from a common original P^{CD} , to which reference has been made above. C contains the last twelve plays only.

¹ That part of B which contains the last twelve plays was evidently copied from an original superior to that from which B derived the first eight; according to Lindsay, it may even have been copied directly from the archetype.

The subjoined stemma codicum will show the relationship to one another of the MSS.¹ with which we are concerned :

The text and apparatus criticus of this edition are reprinted from Professor Lindsay's edition of Plautus in the Scriptorum Classicorum Bibliotheca Oxoniensis. In the app. crit. P denotes a consensus of all minuscule MSS. (B, C, D); P^{CD} a consensus of C and D. The symbol codd. designates the highest possible authority, a consensus of A and P; the symbol cod. denotes either P (where A is lacking) or A (in the rare passages where P is lacking). Thus, between ll. 595 and 1005, where A is completely lacking, the symbol cod., which appears frequently in the app. crit., means that MSS. of the P group are the sole authority and are in agreement.

¹ With regard to the relation between A and P, Leo holds that they are both derived from a recension of the date of Hadrian; Lindsay, that A is derived from an original, P from an acting version.

SYMBOLS

USED IN THE APPARATUS CRITICUS.

FOR symbols denoting MSS. (A, P, codd., cod., B, B², P^{CD}, C, D) see Introd. pp. 58-60.

Ital. = Renaissance editors and interpolators.

edd. = majority of previous editions.

n. l. = not clearly decipherable.

Numbers given in brackets thus—(vii. 5)—refer to chapters and sections of Prof. Lindsay's Introduction to Latin Textual Emendation (Macm. 1896).

Where readings of the palimpsest (A) are given in the App. Crit., the following signs are used: any given number of dots denotes an equal number of undecipherable letters; a dot placed beneath a letter means that the identification of that letter is not certain: a dash indicates an obliteration of the text so complete that even the approximate number of letters cannot be accurately discerned. Letters enclosed in brackets have been conjecturally restored by Prof. Lindsay.

In both the text and the App. Crit. a perpendicular line denotes a doubtful hiatus; words or letters within square brackets are probable interpolations; angular brackets enclose words or letters conjecturally supplied by some editor or commentator. Ictus-marks, where given, are printed for the sake of clearness only.

ARGVMENTVM

Mercator Siculus, quoi erant gemini filii,

Ei surrupto altero mors optigit.

Nomen surreptici illi indit qui domist

Avos paternus, facit Menaechmum e Sosicle.

5 Et is germanum, postquam adolevit, quaeritat

Circum omnis oras. post Epidamnum devenit :

Hic fuerat alitus ille surrepticius.

Menaechmum omnes civem credunt advenam

Eumque appellant meretrix, uxor et socer.

10 I se cognoscunt fratres postremo invicem.

3 surrepticii Camerarius : surrepiti cod.
7 alitus Ital. : auitus cod.

4 paternos cod.

PERSONAE

PENICVLVS PARASITVS

MENAECHMVS I

MENAECHMVS II (SOSICLES) } ADVLESCENTES

EROTIVM MERETRIX

CYLINDRVS COCVS

MESSENIO SERVVS

ANCILLA

MATRONA

SENEX

MEDICVS

SCAENA EPIDAMNI

vel CVLINDRVS

PROLOGVS

Salutem primum iam a principio propitiam mihi atque uobis, spectatores, nuntio.
adporto uobis Plautum—lingua, non manu :
quaeso ut benignis accipiat auribus.

5 nunc argumentum accipite atque animum aduortite ; 5
quam potero in uerba conferam paucissima.

atque hoc poetae faciunt in comoediis :
omnis res gestas esse Athenis autumant, quo illud uobis graecum uideatur magis ;

10 ego nusquam dicam nisi ubi factum dicitur. 10

atque adeo hoc argumentum graecissat, tamen non atticissat, uerum sicilicissitat.

†huic argumento antelogium hoc fuit† ;
nunc argumentum uobis demensum dabo,

15 non modio neque trimodio, uerum ipso horreo : 15 tantum ad narrandum argumentum adest benignitas.

mercator quidam fuit Syracusis senex, ei sunt nati filii gemini duo, ita forma simili puerei uti mater sua

20 non internosse posset quae mammam dabat, 20

neque adeo mater ipsa quae illos pepererat, (ut quidem ille dixit mihi qui pueros uiderat :
ego illós non uidi, ne quis uostrum censeat).
postquam iam pueri septuennēs sunt, pater

25 onerauit nauim magnam multis mercibus ; 25
imponit geminum álterum in nauim pater,

8 omnes Ital. 9 uobis illud Pylades 13 <igitur> argumento Bergk fuit <interim> Schoell (ex Auson, ep. 16 praef.) : fort.
<fini> fuit 16 tanta Ital. 26 geminorum Hermann

- Tarentum auexit secum ad mercatum simul, illum reliquit alterum apud matrem domi.
Tarenti ludei forte erant quom illuc uenit.
30 mortales multi, ut ad ludos, conuenerant : 30
puer aberrauit inter homines a patre.
Epidamniensis quidam ibi mercator fuit,
is puerum tollit auehitque Epidamnium.
pater eius autem postquam puerum perdidit, 35 animum despondit eaque is aegritudine 35
paucis diebus post Tarenti emortuost.
postquam Syracúsas de ea re rediit nuntius ad auom puerorum, puerum surruptum alterum
patremque pueri Tarenti | esse emortuom, 40 immutat nomen auos huic gemino alteri ; 40
ita illúm dilexit qui surruptust alterum :
illius nomen indit illi qui domi est, Menaechmo, idem quod alteri nomen fuit ;
et ipse eodem est auo' uocatus nomine 45 (propterea illius nomen memini facilius, 45 quia illúm clamore uidi flagitarier).
ne mox erretis, iam nunc praedico prius :
idem est ambobus nomen geminis fratribus.
nunc in Epidamnium pedibus redeundum est mihi, 50 ut hanc rem uobis examussim disputem. 50
si quis quid uestrum Epidamnium curari sibi uelit, audacter imperato et dicito, sed ita ut det unde curari id possit sibi.
nam nisi qui argentum dederit, nugas egerit ;
55 qui dederit, magi' maiores nugas egerit. 55

31 inter homines aberrauit cod. : trai. Acidalius 33 Epidamnium eum Seyffert 35 ea quis cod. post 36 inseruit Schoell versum quem Fulgentius p. 559 ad 'Plautum in Menaechmis comoedia' refert :
sicut pollinctor dixit, qui eum pollinxerat (cf. Poen. prol. 63) 39 an fuisse ? Sed Tárēnti suspectum (v. 1) 41 vel illunc 51 Epidamni Ital. 54 qui Beroaldus : qui [non] cod. 55 qui Pylades : [nam nisi] qui cod. (ex v. 54 ; iv. 3) vel mage

- uerum illuc redeo unde abii atque uno asto in loco.
 Epidamniensis ill' quem dudum dixeram, geminum illum puerum qui surrupuit alterum,
 ei liberorum nisi diuitiae nihil erat :
- 60 adoptat illum puerum surrupticium 60
 sibi filium eique uxorem dotatam dedit, eumque heredem fecit quom ipse obiit diem.
 nam rus ut ibat forte, ut multum pluerat, ingressus fluuium rapidum ab urbe hau longule,
- 65 rapidus raptori pueri subduxit pedes 65
 apstraxitque hominem in maxumam malam crucem.
 illi diuitiae | euenerunt maxumae.
 is illic habitat geminus surrupticius.
 nunc ille geminus, qui Syracusis habet,
- 70 hodie in Epidamnum uenit cum seruo suo 70
 hunc quaeritatum geminum germanum suom.
 haec urbs Epidamnus est dum haec agitur fabula :
 quando alia agetur aliud fiet oppidum ;
 sicut familiae quoque solent mutarier :
- 75 modo hic hábitat leno, modo adulescens, modo senex, 75
 pauper, mendicus, rex, parasitus, hariolus

* * * * *

56 redeunde cod. (corr. *B*²) 57 accedit A ; 57-75 tantum initia servata 58 alteram cod. (-rum *B*¹) 59 diuiliae cod. 62 quom Pius : quam cod. 65 pedes Saracenus : fides cod. (F pro P ; vi. 1) 67 illi (autem) Schoell vix deuenerunt 70
 ueniet Geppert 74 mutari cod. (i. 7, 11) 75 hic habitat Schoell : ni caditat P, A n. l. 76 in A usque ad v. 91 tantum paucorum versuum extrema apparent, prologus uno versu auctior fuisse videtur

ACTVS I

PENICVLVS

I. i

- PE. Iuuentus nomen fecit Peniculo mihi, ideo quia mensam quando edo detergeo.
 homines captiuos qui catenis uinciunt 80 et qui fugitiuis seruis indunt compedis, nimi' stulte faciunt mea quidem sententia. 5 nam hómini misero si ad malum accedit malum, maior lubido est fugere et facere nequiter.
 nam se ex catenis eximunt aliquo modo.
 85 tum compediti ei anúm lima praeterunt aut lapide excutiunt clauom. nugae sunt eae. 10 quem tu adseruare recte ne aufugiat uoles esca atque potione uinciri decet.
 apud ménsam plenam hómini rostrum deliges; 90 dum tu illi quod edit et quod potet praebeas,
 suo arbitrato | ad fatim cottidie, 15
 numquam edepol fugiet, tam etsi capital fecerit, facile adseruabis, dúm eo uinclo uincies.
 ita istaec nimi' lenta uincla sunt escaria:
 95 quam magis extendas tanto astringunt artius.
 nam ego ad Menaechmum hunc (nunc) eo, quo iam diu 20 sum iudicatus; ultro eo ut me uinciat.
 nam illic homo hómines non alit, uerum educat recreatque: nullus melius medicinam facit.

77 fecit nomen codd. schol. Verg. Georg. I, 137 82 (hoc) hom.
Mueller 85 i cod. ut vid. : om. B, codd. Nonii 333 89 an (ei)
 h. ? (A n. l.) 91 fort. arbitrato (usque) (A n. l.) (cf. ad Most. 793) 92 in A usque ad v. 108 tantum paucorum versuum initia seruata edepol fugiet tam etsi Pylades: edepol [te] fugiet tiam et si P, A n. l.: hercle effugiet tam etsi codd. Nonii 38 (neglegens citatio) 94 ea enim fere lenta Nonius 108 (neglegens citatio) 96 nunc add.
Mueller

- ita est adulescens ; ipsus escae maxumae, 100 25 Cerialis cenas dat, ita mensas exstruit, tantas struices concinnat patinarias :
 standumst in lecto si quid de summo petas.
 sed mi interuallum iam hos dies multos fuit :
 domi domitus sum usque cum careis meis. 105 30 nam neque edo neque emo nisi quod est carissimum.
 id quoque iam, cari qui instruontur deserunt.
 nunc ad eum inuiso. sed aperitur ostium.
 Menaechmum eccum ipsum uideo, progreditur foras.

ii MENAECHMVS I PENICVLVS

- MEN. Ni mala, ni stulta sies, ni indomita inposque animi, 110 quod uiro esse odio uideas, tute tibi odio habeas.
 praeterhac si mihi tale post hunc diem faxis, faxo foris uidua uisas patrem.
 5 nam quotiens foras ire uolo, me retines, reuocas, rogitas, quó ego eam, quam rem agam, quid negoti geram, 115
 quid petam, quid feram, quid foris egerim.
 portitorem domum duxi, ita omnem mihi rem necesse eloqui est, quidquid egi atque ago.
 10 nimium ego te hábui delicatam ; nunc adeo ut facturus dicam.
 quando ego tibi ancillas, penum, 120
 lanam, aurum, uestem, purpuram bene praebeo nec quicquam eges,
 malo cauebis si sapis, uirum opseruare desines.
 atque adeo, ne me nequiquam serues, ob eam industriam 15 hodie ducam scortum ad cenam atque aliquo condicam foras.
 PE. illic homo se uxori simulat male loqui, loquitur mihi ; 125

101 Cerialis Festus 310 (s. struices) : certalis cod. mensas Festus :
 mensam cod. 105 fort. domatus (Class. Rev. 12, 232) 110 in A usque ad 124 paucissima servata 114 rogas A 116
 petam Camerarius : detam cod. (D pro P) legerim cod. (corr. B²) 118 eloqui codd. Nonii 24 : loqui cod. 124 atque aliquo ad cenam Acidalius

nam si foris cenat, profecto mē, haud uxorem, ulciscitur.

MEN. euax ! iurgio hercle tandem uxorem abegi ab ianua.

ubi sunt amatores mariti ? dona quid cessant mihi conferre omnes congratulantes quia pugnaui fortiter ?

20

130 hanc modo uxori intus pallam surrupui, ad scortum fero.

sic hoc decet, dari facete uerba custodi catae.

hoc facinus pulchrumst, hoc probumst, hoc lepidumst,

hoc factumst fabre :

meo malo a mala apstuli hoc, ad damnum deferetur.

auorti praedam ab hostibus nostrum salute socium.

25

135 PE. heus adulescens ! ecqua in istac pars inest praeda mihi ?

MEN. perii ! in insidias deueni. PE. immo in praesidium, ne time.

MEN. quis homo est ? PE. ego sum. MEN. o mea

Commoditas, o mea Opportunitas, salue. PE. salue. MEN. quid agis ? PE. teneo dextera genium meum.

MEN. non potuisti magi' per tempus mi aduenire quam

30

aduenis.

140 PE. ita ego soleo : commoditatis omnis articulos scio.

MEN. uin tu facinus luculentum inspicere ? PE. quis id coxit coquos ?

iam sciam, si quid titubatunst, ubi reliquias uidero.

MEN. dic mi, enumquam tu uidisti tabulam pictam in pariete

ubi aquila Catameitum raperet aut ubi Venus Adoneum ?

35

145 PE. saepe. sed quid istae picturae ad me attinent ? MEN.

age me aspice.

ecquid adsimulo similiter ? PE. qui istic est ornatus tuos ?

126-58 deest A 126 vel profecto med 127 hercle om.
cod. Varronis L. L. 7, 93 130 fort. (hanc) hanc iamb. 135 fort. ecquis in i. praeda Camerarius : pre cod. : praemi Ital. 136 deuenit corr. B² cod. 139 vel mage 141 quocus cod. 143 enumquam Brix (ex Auson. 24, 1, p. 121 Sch.) : numqua B vel numquam P^{CD} cod. 145 vel istaec 146 quis alii, sed cf. Seyffert (Berl. Phil. Woch. 13, 278) vel ornatust

MEN. dic hominem lepidissimum esse mé. PE. ubi essuri sumus?

MEN. dic modo hoc quod ego te iubeo. PE. dico: homo lepidissime.

40 MEN. ecquid audes de tuo istuc addere? PE. atque hilarissime.

MEN. perge, <perge>—PE. non pergo herclenisi scio quagratia. 150 litigium tibi est cum uxore, eo mi áps te caueo cautius.

MEN. clám uxorem ubi sepulcrum habeamus atque hunc comburamus diem.

PE. age sane igitur, quando aequom oras, quam mox incendo rogum?

45 dies quidem iam ad umbilicum est dimidiatus mortuos. 154-5

MEN. te morare mihi quom obloquere. PE. óculum ecfodito per solum

mihi, Menaechme, si ullum uerbum faxo nisi quod iusseris.

MEN. concede huc a foribus. PE. fiat. MEN. etiam concede huc. PE. licet.

MEN. etiam nunc concede audacter ab leonino cauo.

50 PE. eu edepol! ne tu, ut ego opinor, esses agitator probus. 160

MEN. quidum? PE. ne te uxor sequatur respectas identidem.

MEN. sed quid ais? PE. egone? id enim quod tu uis, id aio atque id nego.

MEN. ecquid tu de odore possis, si quid forte olfeceris, facere coniecturam * ? *

147 vel dice vel med 149 atqui cod. 150 perge add.
Schwabe: <porro> Pylades 151 eo Ritschl: M. (i. e. MEN.) o cod.
(quasi illud E nota personae esset) 152 ux. [est] cod. Charisii 145 ubi pulcre Ussing, sed cf. Vahlen (ind. lect. Berolin. 1901), qui legit cl. ux. est ubi sep. habeam atq. h. comburam d. 154, 155 iam dum bilicum cod. (corr. B²) est post mortuos codd. Gellii 3, 14, 16
(? i. e. mortuost) 156 qum cod., ut vid. 159 accedit A; 159-
72 priores fere versuum partes leguntur 160 vel opino 162 ais]
agis P aio] ato P, A n. l. (corr. in B) nega P, A n. l. (corr. B²) 163 vel oléf. 164, 165 facere coniecturam captum sit collegium P
(iii. 11, p. 62): duo versus in A: facere coiecturam cum i — | Cui . s
.. asu . ius conieç—

165 (PE.) * captum sit collegium. 55

MEN. agetum odorare hanc quam ego habeo pallam. quid olet? apstines?

PE. summum olefactare oportet uestimentum muliebre, nam ex istoc loco spureatur nasum odore inutili.

MEN. olfacta igitur hinc, Penicule. lepide ut fastidis!
PE. decet.

170 MEN. quid igitur? quid olet? responde. PE. furtum, 60 scortum, prandium.

tibi fuant * * *
MEN. elocutu's, nam * * * (prandium.)

nunc ad amicam deferetur hanc meretricem Erotium.

mihi, tibi atque illi iubebo iam apparari prandium. PE. eu!

175 MEN. inde usque ad diurnam stellam crastinam potabimus. 65

PE. [eu!]

expedite fabulatu's. iam fores ferio? MEN. feri.

uel mane etiam. PE. mille passum commoratu's cantharum.

MEN. placide pulsa. PE. metuis, credo, ne fores Samiae sient.

179-80 MEN. mane, mane opsecro hercle: eapse eccam exit. oh!
solem uides

satin ut occaecatust prae huius corporis candoribus? 70

EROTIVM PENICVLVS MENAECMVVS I iii

ER. Anime mi, Menaechme, salve. PE. quid ego? ER.
extra numerum es mihi.

PE. idem istuc aliis adscriptiuis fieri ad legionem solet.

167 op. olfactare (olf—P, A n. l.) Quietus, sed de olēf—cf. Skutsch (Philol. 59, 504) 168 modori P, A n. l. (corr. B²) inutili Ritschl:
inlutibili codd. Nonii 394: inlucido P, A n. l.: mucido Colvius 169 difacta P D pro O; vi. 1): vel olēfacta 171, 172 om. P: in A ser- vata vestigia 172 prandium addidi (iii. 11) 174 eu om. P 175 diurnum P potaumus (poterimus) A eu om. P cf. v. 174 176 ferio fores A contra metrum) 177-92 pauca tantum in posteriori- bus versuum partibus A 178 scient P (cf. 188) 179, 180 ab se eccā P, A n. l. uide Acidalius ante hunc versum alius Lortcio in A extare visus est ab f—incipiens 183 ad legionem fieri P

- MEN. ego istic mihi hodie apparari iussi apud te proelium. 184-5
 ER. hodie id fiet. MEN. in eo uterque proelio potabimus ;
 5 uter ibi melior bellator erit inuentus cantharo, tua est legiô : adiudicato cûm utro — hânc noctem sies.
 ut ego uxorem, mea uoluptas, ubi te aspicio, odi male !
 ER. interim nequis quin eiïus aliquid indutus sies. 190 quid hoc est ? MEN. induuiae tuae atque uxoris exuuiæ, rosa.
 10 ER. superas facile ut superior sis mihi quam quisquam qui impetrant.
 PE. meretrix tantisper blanditur, dum illud quod rapiat uidet ;
 nam si amabas, iám oportebat nassum abreptum mordicus. 194-5
 MEN. sustine hoc, Penicule : exuuias facere quas uoui uolo.
 PE. cedo ; sed opsecro hercle, salta sic cum palla postea.
 15 MEN. ego saltabo ? sanus hercle non es. PE. egone an tu magis ?
 si non saltas, exue igitur. MEN. nimio ego hanc periculo surrupui hodie. meo quidem animo ab Hippolyta sub- 200
 cingulum haud
 Hercules aequè magno umquam âpstulit periculo.
 cape tibi hanc, quando una uiuis meis morigera moribus.
 20 ER. hoc animo decet animatos esse amatores probos.
 PE. qui quidem ad mendicitatem se properent detrudere.
 MEN. quattuor minis ego emi istanc anno uxori meae. 205
 PE. quattuor minae perierunt plane, ut ratio redditur.
 MEN. scin quid uolo ego te accurare ? ER. scio, curabo quae uoles.

188 Tuest l. P, A n. l. ; fort. tua l. est fort. adiudicato (tu)
 scies P (cf. 178) 194-202 priores partes liguntur A 194, 195 iamdudum oportuit codd. Nonii 138 (neglegens citatio) adeptum codd. Nonii 196 quas uoui uolo Camerarius: quas suo uiuolo P, A n. l. (i. 5) 199 e. i. s. n. salt. A 200-1 meo . . . periculo
Peniculo dat Schoell 200 haud initio seq. versus AP, om. cod. Festi 302 201 Hercules haud ae. edd. 202 meis cod. (antiqua forma) 204 se proderent P: properent se A ut vid. 205 egomi stanc P (corr. *B*²) 207 ego om. A

- MEN. iube igitur tribu' nobis apud te prandium accuratier 25
 atque aliquid scitamentorum de foro opsonarier, 210 glandionidam suillam, laridum pernonidam, aut sincipitamenta porcina aut aliquid ad eum modum, madida quae mi adposita in mensam miluinam suggerant ;
 atque actutum. ER. licet ecastor. MEN. nos prodimus 30 ad forum.
 iám hic nos erimus : dum coquetur, interim potabimus.
 215 ER. quando uis ueni, parata res erit. MEN. prospera modo.
 sequere tú.—PE. ego hercle uero te et seruabo et te sequar, neque hodie ut te perdam meream deorum diuitias mihi.—
 ER. euocate intus Culindrum mihi coquom actutum foras. 35

EROTIVM CYLINDRVS

iv

- ER. Sportulam cape atque argentum. éccos tris nummos habes.
 220 CY. habeo. ER. abi atque opsonium adfer ; tribu' uide quod sit satis :
 neque defiat neque supersit. CY. quouismodi hic homines erunt ?
 ER. ego et Menaechmus et parasitus eius. CY. iam isti sunt decem ;
 nam parasitus octo | hominum munus facile fungitur. 5
 ER. elocuta sum conuiuas, ceterum cura. CY. licet.
 225 cocta sunt, iube ire accubitum. ER. redi cito. CY. iam ego hic ero.—

210 [aut] pernonidam A 212 suggeram A 214 quoquitur
P et fort. A 216 tu <me> Lambinus et poster. om. A, ut uid.
 218 quoquom A : quoquum P 219 treis A 221 vel hi vel hisee 223 munus P, codd. Nonii 497 : nunc A : <unus> munus Mueller (Rhein. Mus. 54, 391) : nunc munus alii 224 curari A (? pro cura Cy.) ticet P (corr. B²) (T pro L ; vi. 1)

ACTVS II

II. i

MENAECHMVS II MESSENIO

MEN. Voluptas nullast nauitis, Messenio, maior meo animo quam quom éx alto procul terram conspiciunt. MES. maior, non dicam dolo, quasi aduénientis terram uideas quae fuerit tua.

5 sed quaesso, quámobrem nunc Epidamnum uenimus? 230
an quasi mare omnis circumimus insulas?

MEN. fratrem quaesitum geminum germanum meum.

MES. nam quid modi futurum est illum quaerere?

hic annus sextus est postquam ei rei operam damus.

10 Histros, Hispanos, Massiliensis, Hilurios, 235 mare superum omne Graeciamque exoticam orasque Italicas omnis, qua adgreditur mare, sumu' circumuecti. sí acum, credo, quaereret, acum inuenisses, sei appareret, iam diu.

15 hominem inter uiuos quaeritamus mortuom; 240 nam inuenissemus iam diu, sei uiueret.

MEN. ergo istuc quaero certum qui faciat mihi, quei sese deicat scire eum esse emortuom :

operam praeterea numquam sumam quaerere.

20 uerum aliter uiuos numquam desistam exsequi. 245 ego illum scio quam cordi sit carus meo.

MES. in scirpo nodum quaeris. quin nos hinc domum redimus nisi si historiam scripturi sumus?

226 nullast uoluptas P 227 quom] qui codd. Lactanti ad Stat. Theb. 2, 194: quom P: fort. quom i (ei) 228-9 fere nihil legitur A

228 prospiciunt Lact., A n. l. 229 quam si P, codd. Lact.: q— A :

si (om. quam) edd. conspicias codd. Lact. 230-9 prioris partes leguntur A

234 vel sextust: sextus A ei rei Gruterus: ire hi P, A n. l. 239 iam Gulielmius: tam P, A n. l. 242 qui] quid id A (? pro qui id) 246 vel illunc carus sit cordi meo A

247-55 posteriores partes leguntur A

- MEN. dictum facessas, datum edís, caueas malo.
 250 molestus ne sis, non tuo hoc fiet modo. MES. em! 25
 illoc enim uerbo esse me seruom scio.
 non potuit paucis plura plane proloqui.
 uerum tamen néqueo contineri quin loquar.
 audin, Menaechme? quom inspicio marsuppium, 255 uiaticati hercle admodum aestiue sumus. 30
 ne tu hercle, opinor, nisi domum reuorteris, ubi nihil habebis, geminum dum quaeris, gemes.
 nam ita est haec hominum natio: in Epidamnieis uoluptárii atque potatores maxumei; 260 tum sycophantae et palpatores plurumei 35
 in urbe hac habitant; tum meretrices mulieres nusquam perhibentur blandiores gentium.
 propterea huic urbei nomen Epidamno inditumst,
 quia nemo ferme huc sine damno deuortitur.
 265 MEN. ego istúc cauebo. cedodum huc mihi marsuppium. 40
 MES. quid eo ueis? MEN. iam aps te metuo de uerbis tuis.
 MES. quid metuis? MEN. ne mihi damnum in Epidamno duis.
 tu magis amator mulierum es, Messenio,
 ego autem homo iracundus, animi perdití;
 270 id utrumque, argentum quando habebo, cauero, 45
 ne tu delinquas neue ego irascar tibi.
 MES. cape atque serua. me lubente feceris.

CYLINDRVS MENAECHMVS II MESSENIO ii

Cy. Bene opsonaui atque ex mea sententia, bonum anteponam prandium pransoribus.

250 fíat A vel hem 251 enim suspectum 253 vel continere
 255 aestiui A 256 vel opino reuortereis A 257 quaeres A
 258 natio epidamnia | Nam ita est hec hominum P 260 pluri P
 264 qua A sine damno huc A 265 mihi huc P 266-81 priores partes leguntur A 267 duis Beroaldus: dus P, A n. l. (dias B?)
 268 magnus P 269 iracundis P (-is pro -us; vi. 1) perciti
Lipsius 270 habebo Pylades: habeo P, A n. l. 272 iubente
P, A n. l.

- sed ecclum Menaechmum uideo. uae tergo meo ! 275
 prius iam conuiuiae ambulant ante ostium
 5 quam ego opsonatu redeo. adibo atque adloquar.
 Menaechme, salue. MEN. di te amabunt quisquis (es).
 Cy. quisquis * * * (quis) ego sim ?
 MEN. non hercle uero. Cy. ubi conuiuiae ceteri ? 280
 MEN. quos tu conuiuas quaeris ? Cy. parasitum tuom.
 10 MEN. meum parasitum ? Cy. certe hic insanust homo.
 MES. dixin tibi esse hic sycophantas plurimos ?
 * * * *
 MEN. quem tu parasitum quaeris, adulescens, meum ? 285
 Cy. Peniculum. MES. ecclum in uidulo saluom fero.
 Cy. Menaechme, numero huc aduenis ad prandium.
 15 nunc opsonatu redeo. MEN. responde mihi, adulescens : quibus hic pretieis porci ueneunt sacres sinceri ? Cy. nummeis. MEN. nummum a me 290 accipe :
 iube té piari de mea pecunia.
 nam équidem | insanum esse te certo scio,
 20 qui mihi molestus homini ignoto quisquis es.
 Cy. Cylindrus ego sum : non nosti nomen meum ?
 MEN. sei tu Cylindrus seu Coriendrus, perieris. 295 ego te non noui neque nouisse adeo uolo.
 Cy. est tibi Menaechmo nomen. MEN. tantum, quod
 sciam,
 25 pro sano loqueris quom me appellas nomine.
 sed ubi nouisti mé ? Cy. ubi ego te nouerim,

275 uideo uae tergo Gruterus : uideon aetergo P, A n. l. 276
 an conuiuiae ? (cum priu') obambulant Ritschl 278, 279 es . .
 quis om. P (iii. 11, p. 52) 279 quisquis d— A fort. 'quisquis' ?
 (deliras plane. non scis quis) ego sim ? 282 certe MEN. del oe certe A 284-300 posteriores partes fere leguntur A 284 om. P; in
A legitur—riñcu . sm . n — tu — 285 meus A 289 pretii
P 290 nummum om. P 292 (insanum) insanum Seyffert (A n. l.)
 295 Sei Mueller, secundum morem Plautinum : Seu P, A n. l. (cf. v. 793 sive pro si) 299 vel med : (tu) me Loewe (ex A)

300 qui amicam habes eram meam hanc Erotium?

MEN. neque hercle ego habeo neque te quis homo sis scio.

CY. non scis quis ego sim, qui tibi saepissime cyathisso apud nos, quando potas? MES. ei mihi, quom nihil est qui illic homini diminuiam caput!

35

305 MEN. tun cyathissare mihi soles, qui ante hunc diem Epidamnum numquam uidi neque ueni? CY. negas?

MEN. nego hercle uero. CY. non tu in illisce aedibus habitas? MEN. di illos homines qui illi[c] habitant perduint! 35

CY. insanit hicquidem, qui ipse male dicit sibi.

310 audin, Menaechme? MEN. quid uis? CY. si me consulas, nummum illum quem mihi dudum pollicitus dare (nam tu quidem hercle certo non sanus satis, Menaechme, qui nunc ipse male dicas tibi)

40

314-5 iubeas, si sapias, porculum adferri tibi.

MES. eu hercle hominem multum et odiosum mihi!

CY. solet iocari saepe mecum illoc modo.

quam uis ridiculus est, ubi uxor non adest.

quid ais tu? quid ais, inquam. satin hoc quod uides 45

320 tribu' uobis opsonatumst, an opsono amplius, tibi et parasito et mulieri? MEN. quas [tu] mulieres, quos tu parasitos loquere? MES. quod te urget scelus qui huic sis molestus? CY. quid tibi mecum est rei?

ego te non noui: cum hoc quem noui fabulor. 50

325 MES. non edepol tu homo sanus es, certo scio.

CY. iam ergo haec madebunt faxo, nil morabitur.

proin tu ne quo abeas longius ab aedibus.

300 habes P 301 ego om. P qui A, sed cf. Seyffert Berl. Phil. Woch. 13, 279) 303-42 deest A 303 totas cod. corr. B²)
305 Tunc cod. (corr. in B) 308 habes Seyffert, rhythmo consulens que cod. (corr. B²) 309 quidem Bentley: equidem cod. ipse Ital.: id se cod. (D pro P): vel ipse 316 eu Camerarius: tu cod. (T pro
E; vi. 1) vix hercule 319 quid ais i. Goldbacher (Wien. Stud. 19, 117): qui uis i. cod.: quid uis i. Ital. quid ais tu? MEN. Quid uis, inquam CY. (CY. add. Ital.) Bothe 321 tu del. Pylades 322
paratitos cod. 327 ab (hisce) Brix, nam longius suspectum

- numquid uis? MEN. ut eas maxumam malam crucem.
- 55 CY. ire hercle meliust te—interim atque accumbere, dum ego haec appono ad Volcani uiolentiam. 330
ibo intro et dicam te hic astare Erotio, ut te hinc abducat potius quam hic astes foris.—
MEN. iamne abiit? (abiit). edepol hau mendacia
- 60 tua uerba experior esse. MES. opseruato modo :
nam istic meretricem credo habitare mulierem, 335
ut quidem ille insanus dixit qui hinc abiit modo.
MEN. sed miror qui ille nouerit nomen meum.
MES. minime hercle mirum. morem hunc meretrices habent :
- 65 ad portum mittunt seruolos, ancillulas ;
sei qua peregrina nauis in portum aduenit, 340
rogitant quoiatis sit, quid ei nomen siet, postilla extemplo se adplicant, adglutinant :
si pellegerunt, perditum amittunt domum.
- 70 nunc in istoc portu stat nauis praedatoria,
aps qua cauendum nobis sane censeo. 345
MEN. mones quidem hercle recte. MES. tum demum sciam recte monuisse, si tu recte caueris.
MEN. tacedum parumper, nam concrepuit ostium :
- 75 uideamus qui hinc egreditur. MES. hoc ponam interiin.
adseruatote haec sultis, nauales pedes. 350

iii EROTIVM MENAECHMVS II MESSENIO

ER. Sine fores sic, abi, nolo operiri.
intus para, cura, uide, quod opust fiat :
sternite lectos, incendite odores ; munditia

330 ergo cod. (corr. D) 333 abiit add. Gruterus : (illic) Bach 334 experior Lipsius : exterior cod. 340 sed (si B²) qua cod.
342 postille cod. (sq. e) 343-5 initia servata A 344 nauis monosyllabum displicet portust Bentley (sed p. stat etiam A) 346-56 in A nihil apparet 349 hinc creditur cod. (corr. B²)
350 adseruate istaec Bach si uoltis cod. 352 quid opus cod.
Varronis L. L. 7, 12 vix fiat (iamb. senar.)

- 354-5 inlecebra animost amantium.
amanti amoenitas malost, nobis lucrest. 5 sed ubi ille est quem coquos ante aedis esse ait? atque eccum uideo,
qui mihi est usui et plurimum prodest.
item hinc ultro fit, ut meret, potissimum nostrae domi
ut sit ;
- 360 nunc eum adibo atque ultro adloquar.
animule mi, mihi mira uidentur 10
te hic stare foris, fores quoi pateant, magi' quam domu' tua domu' quom haec tua sit.
omne paratumst, ut iussisti
- 365 atque ut uoluisti, neque tibi
ulla morast intus. 15
- 367-8 prandium, ut iussisti, hic curatumst: ubi lubet, ire
licet accubitus.
MEN. quicum haec mulier loquitur? ER. equidem tecum.
MEN. quid mecum tibi
- 370 fuit umquam aut nunc est negoti? ER. quia pol te unum
ex omnibus
Venu' me uoluit magnificare neque id haud inmerito tuo.
nam ecastor solus benefactis tuis me florentem facis. 20 MEN. certo haec mulier aut insana aut ebria est, Messenio, quaé hominem ignotum compellet me tam familiariter.
- 375 MES. dixin ego istaec heic solere fieri? folia nunc cadunt, praeut si tríduom hoc hic erimus: tum arbores in te cadent.
nam ita sunt hic meretrices: omnes elecebrae argentariae. 25

355 amantum PCD 357 aedis se ait se P, A n. l. (corr. B²)
358-60 fere nihil legitur A 358 propest P, A n. l. (corr. B²) (P pro D)
359 hic codd. Nonii 468 potissimum B vel uti 360 que ultro (adloquar) A ut vid. (i. e. atque ultro adloquar): adloquar ultri' (-ro B²)
P (anap., cum adloquar) 361-3 posteriores versuum partes leguntur in A 361 mi] mei cod. 363 vel mage quom] quam P 364 72 fere nihil legitur A 364 in A apparent — o — ro; non idem quod in P scriptum est parasitust cod. (paratust B²) 366 tibist ulla mora cod. (cf. ad Merc. 330) 367 vel ir' (septenar.) 370 qui B 372 facias P 374-445 deest A 375 fortia cod. (corr. B²)
26*

sed sine me dum hanc compellare. heus mulier, tibi dico.

ER. quid est?

MES. ubi tu hunc hominem nouisti? ER. ibidem ubi hic me iam diu,

in Epidamno. MES. in Epidamno? qui huc in hanc urbem 380

pedem

nisi hodie numquam intro tetulit? ER. heia! delicias facis.

30 mi Menaechme, quin, amabo, is intro? hic tibi erit rectius.

MEN. haec quidem edepol recte appellat meo me mulier nomine.

nimi' miror quid hoc sit negoti. MES. oboluit marsuppium huic istuc quod habes. MEN. atque edepol tu me monu- 385

isti probe.

accipedum hoc. iam scibo utrum haec me mage amet an marsuppium.

35 ER. eamus intro, ut prandeamus. MEN. bene uocas: tam gratiast.

ER. cur igitur me tibi iussisti coquere dudum prandium?

MEN. egon te iussi coquere? ER. certo, tibi et parasito tuo.

MEN. quoi, malum, parasito? certo haec mulier non sanast 390

satis.

ER. Peniculo. MEN. quis iste est Peniculus? qui extergentur baxae?

40 ER. scilicet qui dudum tecum uenit, quom pallam mihi detulisti quam ab uxore tua surrupuisti. MEN. quid est?

tibi pallam dedi quam uxori meae surrupui? sanan es?

certe haec mulier cantherino ritu | astans somniat. 395

ER. qui lubet ludibrio habere me atque ire infitias mihi

45 facta quae sunt? MEN. dic quid est id quod negem quod fecerim?

378 dicos cod. (corr. B²)

malo cod. (corr. B²)

384 obuoluit cod. (corr. B²)

391 vel istest

390

395 fort. canth. r. mulier

ER. pallam te hodie mihi dedisse uxoris. MEN. etiam nunc nego.

egoquidem neque umquam uxorem hábui neque habeo
neque huc

400 umquam, postquam natus sum, intra portam penetraui
pedem.

prandi in naui, inde huc sum egressus, te conueni. ER.
éccere,

perii misera ! quam tu mihi nunc nauem narras ? MEN. 50 ligneam,

saepe tritam, saepe fixam, saepe excussam malleo ;
quasi supellex pellionis, palus palo proxumust.

405 ER. tiam, amabo, desine† ludos facere atque i hac mecum semul.

MEN. nescio quem, mulier, alium hóminem, non me quae-ritas.

ER. non ego te noui Menaechmum, Moscho prognatum patre, 55
qui Syracusis perhibere natus esse in Sicilia,

409-10 ubi rex Agathocles regnator fuit et iterum Phintia, tertium Liparo, qui in morte regnum Hieroni tradidit, nunc Hiero est ? MEN. hau falsa, mulier, praedicas MES.

pro Iuppiter !

núm istaec mulier illinc uenit quae te nouit tam cate ? 60

414-5 MEN. hercle opinor, pernegari non potest. MES. ne feceris.

periisti, si intrassis intra limen. MEN. quin tu tace modo.
bene res geritur. adsentabor quidquid dicet mulieri, si possum hospitium nancisci. iam dudum, mulier, tibi

419-20 non inprudens aduorsabar : hunc metuebam ni meae 65 uxori renuntiaret de palla et de prandio.

nunc, quando uis, eamus intro. ER. étiam parasitum manes ?

405 desine] desiste Fleckeisen 412 falsa Ital. : salsa cod. (s pro f; vi. 1) 413 vel illim 414-5 vel opino 419-20 ni] ne *B*² 421 renuntiare cod. (corr. *B*²)

MEN. neque ego illum maneo neque floci facio neque, si uenerit,

eum uolo intromitti. ER. ecastor haud inuita fecero.

70 sed scin quid te amabo ut facias? MEN. impera quid uis 425 modo.

ER. pallam illam quam dudum dederas, ad phrygionem ut deferas,

ut reconcinnetur atque ut opera addantur quae uolo.

MEN. hercle qui tu recte dicis: eadem | ignorabitur,
ne uxor cognoscat te habere, si in uia conspexerit.

75 ER. ergo mox auferto tecum, quando abibis. MEN. 430
maxume.

ER. eamus intro. MEN. iam sequar te. hunc uolo etiam conloqui.

eho Messenio, | accede huc. MES. quid negoti est? †sus- 432-3 sciri†.

MEN. quid eo opust? MES. opus est—MEN. scio ut ne dicas. MES. tanto nequior.

MEN. habeo praedam: tantum incepti óperis. i quantum 435
potes,

80 abduc istos in tabernam actutum deuorsoriam.

tum facito ante solem occasum ut uenias aduorsum mihi.

MES. non tu istas meretrices nouisti, ere. MEN. tace, inquam *

mihi dolebit, non tibi, si quid ego stulte fecero.

mulier haec stulta atque inscita est; quantum perspexi modo, 440

85 est hic praeda nobis. MES. perii! iamne abis? periiit probe:

427 ut op.] una op. (?) Leo 428 qui corr. quin cod. ut vid. (quin
B, quiin P^{CD}) eadem (ea) Ritschl 431 sequar te. (ante) Mueller (Rhein. Mus. 54, 393) 432-3 huc accede Bach sussili Bothe, fort. recte 434 eo Pylades: ego cod. (ergo B²) ne dicas scripsi: me dicas cod. nequior Acidalius: nequiore cod.
(i. 9) 435 i (ei) Gruterus: et cod. (pro ei) potest Dousa
436 vel abduce 437 solem Lambinus: solis cod. (i. 9) 438
(atque hinc abi) Ritschl (ii. 5) 439 stult cod. (corr. B²) ducit lembum diirectum nauis praedatoria.

sed ego incitus qui domino me postulem moderarier :

dicto me emit audientem, haud imperatorem sibi.

445 sequimini, ut, quod imperatum est, ueniam aduersum tem-peri.—

ACTVS III

PENICVLVS

III. i

PE. Plus triginta | annis natus sum, quom | interea loci numquam quicquam facinus feci peius neque scelestius quám hodie, quom [in] contionem mediam me immersi miser.

ubi ego dúm hieto, Menaechmus se supterduxit mihi 450 atque abít ad amicam, credo, neque me uoluit ducere. 5 qui illum di omnes perduint quei primus (hoc) commentus est, contionem habere, qui homines occupatos occupat !
non ad eam rem | otiosos homines decuit deligi,
qui nisi adsint quom citentur, census capiat ilico ?

455 * quam senatus * * contionem * 10
* *

adfatum est hominum in dies qui singulas escas edint, quibu' negoti nihil est, qui essum neque uocantur neque uocant :

eos oportet contioni dare operam atque comitiis.
460 sí id ita esset, non ego hodie perdidissem prandium, 15 quoi tam credo datum uoluísse quam me uideo uiuere.

443 qui domino me Bothe : quid (quod B) romę cod. (vii. 5, p. 104)
446 accedit A (446-53 initia fere leguntur) 446 natus annis Gruterus : iam add. Mueller (ego) sum Ritschl 447 neque] atque B 448 in om. A ut vid. 451 Que (*B*¹) vel Quo (P^{CD}) P (pro Quei ?) hoc add. Vahlen commentu est P, A n. l. : commentust (male) Ritschl 452 habere] hanc cod. (vii. 5, p. 95) 454 citenetur P (pro citetur corr. citentur ?) capiant P (corr. *B*²) 455-6 om. P : vestigia tantum app. in A 458 quiescunt A uocant] uocauit P (corr. *B*²) 460 esse A 461 ne P ibo : etiamnum reliquiarum spes animum oblectat meum.

sed quid ego uideo? Menaechmus cum corona exit foras.
sublatum est conuiuium, edepol uenio aduersum temperi.

20 opseruabo quid agat hominem. post adibo atque adloquar. 465

ii MENAECHMVS II PENICVLVS

MEN. Potine ut quiescas? ego tibi hanc hodie probe lepideque concinnatam referam temperi.

? non faxo eam esse dices : ita ignorabitur.

PE. pallam ad phrygionem fert confecto prandio

5 uinoque expoto, parasito excluso foras. 470

non hercle is sum qui sum, ni | hanc iniuriam meque ultus pulchre fuero. opserua quid dabo.

MEN. pro di immortales! quod homini umquam uno die 473-4

boni dedistis plus qui minu' sperauerit? 475

10 prandi, potaui, scortum accubui, apstuli hanc, quodius heres numquam erit post hunc diem.

PE. nequeo quae loquitur exaudire clanculum;
satur nunc loquitur de me et de parti mea?

MEN. ait hanc dedisse me sibi atque eam meae 480

15 uxori surrupuisse. quoniam sentio errare, extemplo, quasi res cum ea esset mihi, coepi adsentari : mulier quidquid dixerat, idem ego dicebam. quid multis uerbis (opust)?
minore nusquam bene fui dispendio. 485

20 PE. adibo ad hominem, nam turbare gestio.

MEN. quis hic est qui aduersus it mihi? PE. quid ais, homo

462 reliquiarum A me P 463-70 posteriores partes fere leguntur
A 463 Men. cum] menechmum P 465 post v. 473-4 P (ii. 6)
466 ut Ital. : neut P, A n. l. ego] sedco P 471 uix hercule (ego) is Ritschl (A n. l.) fort. recte vel nisi 472 uultus P (corr.
B²) 475 post 476 P (cf. ad v. 465) 477 heres] referes A 479
om. A (propter homocotel. iii. 11) 480 (me) meae Bothe, cui hiatus in pausa displicet 483-97 pauca in initiis leguntur A 484 opust add. Pylades (A n. l.) 487 aduersus it Gruterus, Bothe :
aduersum sit P, A n. l.

- leuior quam pluma, pessime et nequissime,
 flagitium hominis, subdole ac minimi preti?
 490 quid de te merui qua me caussa perderes?
 ut surrupuisti te mihi dudum de foro!
 fecisti funus med apsentī prandio. 25
 quī ausu's facere, quōii ego aequē heres eram?
 MEN. adulescens, quaeso, quid tibi mecum est rei
 495 qui mihi male dicas hominī ignoto | insciens?
 an tibi malam rem uis pro male dictis dari? 30
 PE. post eam quam ēdepol te dedisse intellego.
 MEN. responde, adulescens, quaeso, quid nomen tibist?
 PE. etiam derides quasi nomen non gnoueris?
 500 MEN. non edepol ego te quod sciam umquam ante hunc diem uidi neque gnoui; uerum certo, quisquis es, 35
 si aequom facias, mihi odiosus ne sies.
 PE. Menaechme, uigila. MEN. uigilo hercle equidem quod
 sciam.
 PE. non me nouisti? MEN. non negem si nouerim.
 505 PE. tuom parasitum non nouisti? MEN. non tibi sanum est, adulescens, sinciput, intellego. 40
 PE. responde, surrupuistin uxori tuae
 pallam istanc hodie | ac dedisti Erotio?
 MEN. neque hercle ego uxorem habeo neque ego Erotio 510 dedi nec pallam surrupui. PE. satin sanus es?
 occisast haec res. non ego te indutum foras 45
 exeire uidi pallam? MEN. uae capiti tuo!

492 meo P 493 ea quae heris heram P, A n. l.: corr. Lipsius
 495 ignoto Ital.: hic noto P, A n. l.: hic ignoto B², forl. recte 497 post] pol A quam Goldbacher (Wien. Stud. 19, 117): quidem
 P (seq. ede-) (A n. l.) 498 tibi nomenst P (cf. ad Merc. 330) 502-7 paucissima in extremis versibus leguntur A 502 aequom
 si Camerarius, cui hiatus si | aequom displicet 503 post 504 P 506 (ut) intellego Camerarius, nam sinciput suspectum 508-10
 nihil apparet A 508 vix hodie detulisti Mueller 510 taliam cod. (corr. B²) satin sanus es Menaechmo continuat Thomas 511-7 pauca leguntur A omnis cinaedos esse censes quia tu és?

tun med indutum fuisse pallam praedicas?

514-5

PE. ego hercle uero. MEN. non tu abis quo dignus es?

50 aut te piari iúbe, homo ísanissime.

PE. numquam edepol quisquam me exorabit quin tuae uxori rem omnem iám, uti sit gesta, eloquar;

omnes in té istaec recident contumeliae:

520

faxo haud inultus prandium comederis.—

55 MEN. quid hoc ést negoti? satine, uti quemque conspikor, ita me ludificant? sed concrepuit ostium.

iii

ANCILLA MENAECHMVS II

AN. Menaechme, amare ait te multum Erotium,

†ut hoc una opera ad aurificem deferast,

525

atque huc ut addas auri pondo | unciam

iubeasque spinter nouom reconcinnarier.

5 MEN. et istúc et aliud si quid curari uolet me curaturum dicito, quidquid uolet.

AN. scin quid hoc sit spinter? MEN. nescio nisi aureum. 530

AN. hoc est quod olim clanculum ex armario te surrupuisse aiebas uxori tuae.

10 MEN. numquam hercle factum est. AN. non meministi, opsecro?

redde igitur spinter, si non meministi. MEN. mane.

immo equidem memini. nempe hoc est quod illí dedei. 535

istuc: ubi illae ármillae sunt quas una dedei?

AN. numquam dedisti. MEN. nam pol hoc unum dedei.

513 tu quia es Camerarius (A n. l.) fort. recte 514, 515 tu A 517 iubes Pylades (A n. l.) 521 inultum P comedereis A 522-37 initia fere leguntur A 522 quemquem B 525 opera (sibi) Ussing: fort. opera (tu) (opera pro operatu; i. 5) 526 huc Ritschl: hunc (B¹) vel nunc (PCD B²) cod. (tu) pondo Py- lades: pondo (unam) Pradel de praep. p. 472 528 uolei P ut vid., A n. l. (corr. B² D) 530 scein A quod P 532 mebas P (corr. B²) 533 non] noenu Bergk, cui hiatus in pausa displicet:
vix nonne ante conson. 534 redde om. A, ut vid. 535 vel illic 536 istuc ancillae dat Lambinus iclae P (corr. B²) dedit
P, A n. l. (dedi B²) 537 una P (ex v. 536)

AN. dicam curare? MEN. dicito: curabitur.

15

539-40 et palla et spinter faxo referantur simul.

AN. amabo, mi Menaechme, inauris da mihi faciendas pondo duom nummum, stalagmia, ut te lubenter uideam, quom ad nos ueneris.

MEN. fiat. cedo aurum; ego manupretium dabo.

20

545 AN. da sodes aps te: poste reddidero tibi.

MEN. immo cedo aps te: ego post tibi reddam duplex.

AN. non habeo. MEN. át tu, quando habebis, tum dato.

AN. numquid [me] uis? — MEN. haec me curaturum dicito—

ut quantum possint quique liceant ueneant.

25

550 iamne introabiit? abiit, operuit fores.

di me quidem omnes adiuant, augent, amant.

sed quid ego cesso, dum datur mi occasio tempusque, abire ab his locis lenonieis?

propera, Menaechme, fer pedem, confér gradum.

30

555 demam hanc coronam atque abiciam ad laeuam manum, ut, si[quis] sequantur me, hac abiisse censeant.

ibo et conueniam seruom si potero meum,

ut haec, quae bona dant di mihi, | ex me sciat.—

540 referatu(r) A 541-58 perpauca leguntur in A 542 facienda Pylades statagmia P, A n. l. 543 quam P, A n. l. (corr. B²) aut 545-7 aut 544-6 om. A ut uid. (propter homocotel.) 545 vel ted post cod.: (ego) post Pylades, Ritschl 546 vel ted 548 me del.
Acidalius, nam numquid suspectum 550 iamne abiit intro B²,
A n. l. post hunc versum vestigia alterius apparent in A 551 quidem Bentley: equidem P, A n. l. 554 profer gr. Briv 555 hanc codd. Nonii 519: om. P, A n. l. 556 si sequentur Nonius:
si qui sequatur P, A n. l.: sequentur improbat Thulin de coniunct.
p. 146 me hac codd. Nonii: hec (corr. B²) me P, A n. l. fort. ut in fine v. 555 collocand. (A n. l.) (sed cf. Sjögren 'Part. Copul.'
p. 33), nam displicet siquis necnon siquis sequatur 558 bona (boni) Fleckeisen me (iam) sciat Bentley: fort. med (is) sciat

ACTVS IV

IV. i

MATRONA PENICVLVS

- MA. Egone hic me patiar frustra in matrimonio, ubi uir compilet clanculum quidquid domist 560
 atque ea ad amicam deferat? PE. quin tu taces?
 manifesto faxo iam opprimes: sequere hac modo.
 5 pallam ad phrygionem cum corona | ebrius
 ferebat hodie tibi quam surrupuit domo.
 sed ecclám coronam quám habuit. num mentior? 565 em hac abiit, si uis persequi uestigiis.
 atque edepol eccum óptume reuortitur;
 10 sed pallam non fert. MA. quid ego nunc cum illoc agam?
 PE. idem quod semper: male habeas; sic censeo.
 huc concedamus: ex insidiis aucupa. 570

ii MENAECHMVS I PENICVLVS MATRONA

- MEN. Vt hoc utimur maxume more moro, molesto atque multo atque uti quique sunt op-
 -tumi maxume morem habent hunc!
 clientes sibi omnes uolunt esse multos:
 5 bonine an mali sint, id hau quaeritant; res 575
 magis quaeritur quam clientum fides quóius modi clueat.
 si ést pauper atque hau malus nequam habetur,
 sin diues malust, is cliens frugi habetur.
 10 qui nec leges neque aequom bonum usquam colunt, 580

559 daciā (paciā B²) P frustrat A: om. P 560 concipilet Goldbacher (Wien. Stud. 19, 117) 561-72 priores partes servatae A 561 ea om. P 563 phrygionem (B) vel fridionem (P^{CD}) P coronam P^{CD}, A n. l. 569 habeat B², A n. l. 571 more morum P, A n. l.: corr. Lipsius 572 molestoque multum P 573 vel Optumi (cret. dim. cum troch. monom.) maxume Loman:
 maxumi P: (m)aximi A (i. 9) hunc habent m(u)lior -- A 576 Res m. A et, ut vid., P (cret. tetram.) 578 es A 579-84^a non multa leguntur A 580, 581 uno versu bipartito A (an (i) soll.?)

sollicitos patronos habent.

datum denegant quod datum est, litium pleni, rapaces uiri, fraudulentī,

qui aut faenore aut peiuriis habent rem paratam,

584^a mens est in quo * 15

585 eis ubi dicitur dies, simul patronis dicitur, quippe qui pro illis loquimur quae male fecerunt :

aut ad populum aut in iure aut ad iudicem rest.

sicut me hodie nimi' sollicitum cliens quidam habuit neque quod uolui

agere aut quicum licitumst, ita med attinit, ita detinit. 20

590 apud aedilis pro eius factis plurumisque pessumisque deixei caussam, condiciones tetuli tortas, confragasas :

aut plus aut minu' quam opus erat dicto dixeram controuor-siam, ut

sponsio fieret. quid ill' qui praedem dedit ?

nec magis manifestum ego hominem umquam ullum teneri 25
uidi :

595 omnibus male factis testes tres aderant acerrumi.

di illum omnes perdant, ita mihi

596 hunc hodie corrumpit diem, meque adeo, qui hodie forum

597 umquam oculis inspexi meis. 30

diem corrupti | optimum :

598 iussi apparari prandium,

amica exspectat me, scio.

582 pleni. r. . . atis A 584^a mensē in quo ire P: — nquola — A 585 Lis [uiris] P (L pro E) 586 loquantur P (loqua * * B¹): fort.
loquamur fecerint P versum secl. Hermann 587 apud aedilem res est A (anap. dim. cum colo Reiziano, ut vid.) fort. recte, nam rest (res est etiam P) suspectum 588 minis P 589 aut quicum Ritschl: ait qu. quam A (i. e. hau quicum?): quicum P attinuit ita detinuit P (anap. septenar.), A n. l. 590 pro eius] proeliis P (corr. B²) 591 detuli AB² 592 qua A fuerat A dicto] multo P vel controrsiam 593 vel illic praedam P^{CD} B² 594 fort. numquam illum A deficit A usque ad v. 1005 596 corrupt B² 597 miis cod. (antiqua forma) 597^a corrupt Bothe

- ubi primum est licitum ilico 599
- 35 properaui abire de foro.
iratast, credo, nunc mihi;
placabit palla quam dedi,
quám hodie uxori apstuli atque detuli huic Erotio. 601
- PE. quid ais? MA. uiro me malo male nuptam. PE.
satin audis quae illic loquitur?
- 40 MA. sati'. MEN. si sapiam, hinc intro abeam, ubi mi bene sit. PE. mane: male erit potius.
MA. né illam ecastor faenerato ápstulisti. PE. sic datur.
MA. clanculum te istaec flagitia facere censebas pote? 605
MEN. quid illuc est, uxor, negoti? MA. men rogas?
MEN. uin hunc rogem?
MA. aufer hinc palpationes. PE. perge tu. MEN. quid tu
mihi
45 tristis es? MA. te scire oportet. PE. scit sed dissimulat malus.
MEN. quid negotist? MA. pallam—MEN. pallam? MA.
quidam pallam—PE. quid paues?
MEN. nil equidem pauco. PE. nisi unum: palla pallorem 610
incutit.
at tu né clam me comesses prandium. perge in uirum.
MEN. non taces? PE. non hercle uero taceo. nutat ne loquar.
50 MEN. non hercle egoquidem usquam quicquam nuto neque
nicto tibi.
MA. né ego ecastor mulier misera. MEN. qui tu misera es?
mi expedi.
PE. nihil hoc confidentius: quin quae uides ea pernegat. 615

599 licitum est (-umst) Gruetius 600^a placebit P^{CD} 601 hodie om. B huic detuli cod.: trai. Ritschl: fort. h. detetuli 602 statim cod. (corr. B²) 604 mecastor cod. 605 potis Lindemann:
potesse cod. (cf. Epid. 227 potesse pro potis vel pote) 608 Tris cod. (corr. B²) sit se diss. cod. 609 quid paues matronae continuant alii 610 pauco B²: paulo cod. (pro pauio) totum versum
Menaechmo dant alii 614 post v. 619 Kiessling quid Pareus
615 quinque cod.: qui quae B² vel pernegat? (interrogative)

MEN. per Iouem deosque omnis adiuro, uxor (satin hoc est tibi?),
me isti non nutasse. PE. credit iam tibi de 'isti': illuc redi.

MEN. quó ego redeam? PE. equidem ad phrygionem 55 censeo; et pallam refer.

MEN. quae istaec palla est? PE. taceo iam, quando haec rem non meminit suam.

620 MEN. numquis seruorum deliquit? num ancillae aut seruei
tibi

responsant? eloquere. inpune non erit. MA. nugas agis.

MEN. tristis admodum est. non mihi istuc sati' placet—
MA. nugas agis.

MEN. certe familiarium aliquoi irata es. MA. nugas agis. 60

MEN. num mihi es irata saltem? MA. nunc tu non nugas agis.

625 MEN. non edepol deliqui quicquam. MA. em rusum nunc
nugas agis.

MEN. dic, mea uxor, quid tibi aegre est? PE. bellus blanditur tibi.

MEN. potin ut mihi molestus ne sis? num te appello?
MA. aufer manum.

PE. sic datur. properato apse me comesse prandium, 65
post ante aedis cum corona me derideto ebrius.

630 MEN. neque edepol ego prandi neque hodie huc intro tetuli pedem.

PE. tun negas? MEN. nego hercle uero. PE. nihil hoc homine audacius.

non ego te modo hic ante aedis cum corona florea uidi astare? quom negabas mihi esse sanum sinciput 70

617 isti Ital.: isii cod. 'isti' (adverb.) Pradel de praep. p. 527:
istis cod.: isto Bothe 618 ego redeam B²: egredeam cod. et] i 'ei' Gruterus (cf. Sjögren 'Part. Copul.' p. 85) 619 memini cod.
(corr. B²) 620 serui Gruterus: seruet cod. 622 es B² 625 rurum cod. 632 flora cod. (corr. B²) et negabas me nouisse, peregrinum aibas esse te?

MEN. quin ut dudum diuorti aps te, redeo nunc demum 635
domum.

PE. noui ego te. non mihi censebas esse qui te ulciscerer.

omnia hercle uxori dixi. MEN. quid dixisti? PE. nescio,

75 eam ipsus [i] roga. MEN. quid hoc est, uxor? quidnam hic narrauit tibi?

quid id est? quid taces? quin dicis quid sit? MA. quasi tu nescias.

palla mihi est domo surrupta. MEN. palla surrupta est tibi? 639^a MA. me rogas? MEN. pol hau rogem te si sciam. PE. 640

o hominem malum,

ut dissimulat! non potes celare: rem nouit probe.

80 omnia hercle ego edictaui. MEN. quid id est? MA.
quando nil pudet

neque uis tua uoluntate ipse profiteri, audi atque ades.

et quid tristis <sim> et quid hic mihi dixerit faxo scias.

palla mihi est domo surrupta. MEN. palla surruptast mihi? 645

PE. uiden ut <te> scelestus captat? huic surruptast, non tibi.

85 nam profecto tibi surrupta si esset—salua non foret.

MEN. nil mihi tecum est. sed tu quid ais? MA. palla, inquam, periit domo.

MEN. quis eam surrupuit? MA. pol istuc ille scit qui illam apstulit.

MEN. quis is homo est? MA. Menaechmus quidam. 650

MEN. édepol factum nequiter.

quis is Menaechmust? MA. tu istic, inquam. MEN.
egone? MA. tu. MEN. quis arguit?

638 eam plus (B¹) vel eampus ei (v. 3) (PCD) cod. (corr. B²) 639^a secl. edd. (cf. 645) fort. recte, nam potest versus hic idcirco adscriptus ut vv. 640-5 omitterentur veri versus locum usurpauisse 641 nouit Aridalius: noui cod. 643 audiat qui cod. (corr. B²) 644 sim add. Pylades, Lambinus 645 mihi quidam ap. Lambinum: tibi cod. 646 uident cod. (corr. B²) te add. Lambinus captat Camerarius: capiat cod. 647 non] nunc Camerarius 650 is Brix: hic cod.

MA. egomet. PE. et ego. atque huic amicae detulisti Erotio. 92

MEN. egon dedi? MA. tu, tū istic, inquam. PE. uin adferri noctuam,

quae 'tu tu' usque dicat tibi? nam nos iam defessi sumus.

655 MEN. per Iouem deosque omnis adiuro, uxor (satin hoc
est tibi?),

non dedisse. PE. immo hercle uero, nos non falsum dicere.

MEN. sed ego illam non condonaui, sed sic utendam dedi. 95

MA. equidem ecastor tuam nec chlamydem do foras nec
pallium
quoiquam utendum. mulierem aequom est uestimentum muliebre

660 dare foras, uirum uirile. quin refers pallam domum?

MEN. ego faxo referetur. MA. ex re tua, ut opinor, feceris ; nam domum numquam introibis nisi feres pallam simul. 100

eo domum. PE. quid mihi futurum est qui tibi hanc operam dedi?

MA. opera reddetur, quando quid tibi erit surruptum domo.—

665 PE. id quidem edepol numquam erit, nam nihil est quod perdam domi.

cum uiro cum uxore, di uos perdant ! properabo ad forum, nam ex hac familia me plane éxcidisse intellego.— 105

MEN. male mi uxor sese fecisse censet, quom exclusit foras ;
quasi non habeam quo intromittar alium meliorem locum.

670 si tibi displiceo, patiundum : at placuero huic Erotio, quae me non excludet ab se, sed apud se occludet domi.
nunc ibo, orabo ut mihi pallam reddat quam dudum dedi ; 110 aliam illi redimam meliorem. heus ! ecquis hic est ianitor ?
aperite atque Erotium aliquis euocate ante ostium.

653-4 uin . . . sumus matronae continuant alii 654 nos iam Ital. :
nos iam [nos] cod. 656 vel dedisse — (sermone interrupto) PE. MA.
alii 661 vel opino 663 eo Bentley : ego cod. 664 operam cod. vix recte (corr. B²) 666 qua virum qua uxorem Fleckeisen 670 patiundumst ; pl. Ritschl (cf. Herkenrath de gerund. p. II) 671 occludit cod. (pro -et ?) 673 heus Ital. : eius cod. (pro eus.
i.e. heus) 674 aliqui B

iii EROTIVM MENAECHEMVS I

ER. Quis hic me quaerit? MEN. sibi inimicus magi' quam 675 aetati tuae.

ER. mi Menaechme, qur ante aedis astas? sequere intro.

MEN. mane.

scin quid est quod ego ad te uenio? ER. scio, ut tibi ex me sit uolup.

MEN. immo edepol pallam illam, amabo te, quam tibi
dudum dedi,

5 mihi eam redde. uxor rescuiit rem omnem, ut factum est, ordine.

ego tibi redimam bis tanta pluris pallam quam uoles. 680

ER. tibi dedi equidem illam, ad phrygionem út ferres, paullo prius,

et illud spinter, ut ad auruficem ferres, ut fieret nouom.

MEN. mihi tu ut dederis pallam et spinter? numquam factum reperies.

10 nam ego quidem postquam illam dudum tibi dedi, atque abii ad forum :

nunc redeo, nunc te postillac uideo. ER. uideo quam rem 685
agis.

quia commisi, ut me defrudes, ad eam rem adfectas uiam.

MEN. neque edepol te defrudandi caussa posco (quin tibi dico uxorem rescuiisse)—ER. nec te ultro oraui ut dares :

15 tute ultro ad me detulisti, dedisti eam dono mihi ;

eandem nunc reposcis : patiar. tibi habe, aúfer, utere 690 uel tu uel tua uxor, uel etiam in loculos compingite.

675 vel mage (quist) quam Ritschl, cui quam | aet. displicet fort.
magis in. 676 mei cod., ut vid. 677 uoluptas cod. (i. 8, p. 27) 680 tanto PCD B² (sed cf. Havet Arch. Lat. Lexicogr. 11, 579; Leo ibid. 12, 99) 681 tibi equidem dedi Seyffert prius Ital. : uis cod.
682 vel illuc 683 ut tu B reperies Priscianus 1, 151; releceris cod. (relegeris PCD, dixeris B²) (pro reieceres?) 685 dost illac cod.
(corr. B²) 686 quae Bothe 689 tetulisti Ritschl, nam dedisti displicet (cf. 630 detuli B² pro tetuli) fort. dedistin (interrogativa omnia) 690 habe tibi Guietus 691 loculos Balbach : oculos cod.

tu huc post hunc diem pedem intro non feres, ne frustra sis ;
quando tu me bene merentem tibi habes despiciatui, nisi feres argentum, frustra me ductare non potes. 20

695 aliam posthac inuenito quàm habeas frustratui. —

MEN. nimis iracunde hercle tandem. heús tu, tibi dico, mane, redi. etiamne astas? etiam audes mea reuorti gratia?

abiit intro, occlusit aedis. nunc ego sum exclusissimus :

neque domi neque apud amicam mihi iam quicquam creditur. 25

700 ibo et consulam hanc rem amicos quid faciendum cen-seant. —

ACTVS V

MENAECMVS II MATRONA

V. i

MEN. Nimi' stulte dudum feci quom marsuppium Messenioni cum argento concredidi.

immersit aliquo sese, credo, in ganeum.

MA. prouisam quam mox uir meus redeat domum.

705 sed eccum uideo. salua sum, pallam refert. 5

MEN. demiror ubi nunc ambulet Messenio.

MA. adibo atque hominem accipiam quibu' dictis meret.

non te pudet prodire in conspectum meum, flagitium hominis, cum istoc ornatu? MEN. quid est?

710 quae te res agitat, mulier? MA, etiamne, inprudens, 10 muttire uerbum unum audes aut mecum loqui?

MEN. quid tandem admisi in me ut loqui non audeam?

MA. rogas me? hóminis inprudenter audaciam!

MEN. non tu scis, mulier, Hecubam quapropter canem

715 Graii esse praedicabant? MA. non equidem scio. 15

MEN. quia idem faciebat Hecuba quod tu nunc facis :

694 frustra <es> (frustra's) Ritschl 696 hercle iracunde Seyffert 698 abii cod. (corr. B²) octus itaedis cod. (corr. B²) 707 dictis quibus codd. Nonii 468 aeret cod. (corr. B²) (A pro M ; vi. 1) 710 res te cod. : trai. Brix, secundum morem Plautinum 713 vel med <o> hom. Pylades

omnia mala ingerebat quemquem aspexerat.

itaque adeo iure coepta appellari est Canes.

MA. non ego istaec flagitia possum perpeti.

20 nam med aetatem uiduam | esse mauelim 720

quam istaec flagitia tua pati quae tu facis.

MEN. quid id ad me, tu te nuptam possis perpeti an sis abitura a tuo uiro? an mos hic ita est peregrino ut aduenienti narrent fabulas?

25 MA. quas fabulas? non, inquam, patiar praeterhac, 725

quin uidua uiuam quam tuos móres perferam.

MEN. mea quidem hercle caussa uidua uiuito

uel usque dum regnum optinebit Iuppiter.

MA. at mihi negabas dudum surrupuisse te,

30 nunc eandem ante oculos adtines: non te pudet? 730

MEN. eu hercle! mulier, multum et audax et mala's.

tun tibi hanc surruptam dicere audes quam mihi dedit alia mulier ut concinnandam darem?

MA. ne istuc mecastor—iam patrem accersam meum

35 atque ei narrabo tua flagitia quae facis. 735

i, Decio, quaere meum patrem, tecum simul

ut ueniat ad me: ita rem | esse dicito.

iam ego aperiam istaec tua flagitia. MEN. sanan es?

quae mea flagitia? MA. pallam | atque aurum meum

40 domo suppilas tuae uxóri | et tuae 740

degeris amicae. satin haec recte fabulor?

MEN. quaeso hercle, mulier, si scis, monstra quod bibam tuam qui possim perpeti petulantiam.

718 appellare cod. (corr. B²) (pro -rei?) 719 <tua> fla. Ritschl cui ego | istaec displicet (fort. recte, nam ea vox frequens in ore huius matronae) 720 med a te B² <usque> esse Redslob 723 adtuo cod. (corr. B²) annos ita est hoc cod. (an mos et hic B²): trai.
Bothe 729 Hanc mihi Bothe 730 eadem cod. 735
 a. enarrabo PCD 736 deceo cod. Cf. K. Schmidt (Herm. 37, 388) quare cod. (corr. B²) 737 vel med rem <natam> e. Ritschl: fort.
 rem natam (om. esse; v. 1) 739 pallas Vahlen (cf. 803 pallam pro pallas) 740 uxoris (?) Leo, sed vide ne versus hiantes cum singulti-entis locutione congruant

quem tú hominem (med) arbitrare nescio ;

745 ego te simitu noui cum Porthaone.

45

MA. si me derides, at pol illum non potes, patrem meum qui huc aduenit. quin respicis ?

nouistin tu illum ? MEN. noui cum Calcha simul :

eodem die illum uidi quo te ante hunc diem.

750 MA. negas nouisse me ? negas patrem meum ?

50

MEN. idem hercle dicam sí auom uis adducere.

MA. ccastor pariter hoc atque alias res soles.

SENEX MATRONA MENAECHMVS II ii

SE. Vt aetas mea est atque ut hoc usu^o facto est gradum proferam, progredi properabo.

755 sed id quam mihi facile sit hau sum falsus.

nam pernicitas deserit : consitus sum senectute, onustum gero corpu', uires

5 reliquere : ut aetas mala est ! mers mala ergost.

nam res plurumas pessumas, quom aduenit, ad

760 -fert, quas si autumem omnis, nimis longu' sermost.

sed haec res mihi in pectore et corde curaest, quidnam hoc sit negoti quod sic filia

10

repente expetit mé, ut ad sese irem.

763^a nec quid id sit mihi certius facit, quid uelit. quid me accersit ?

764^a uerum propemodum iam scio quid siet rei.

765 credo cum uiro litigium natum esse aliquod.

15

ita istaec solent, quae uiros supersuere

sibi postulant, dote fretae, feroces.

et illi quoque haud apstinent saepe culpa.

744 arbitrare Luchs: arbitrare cod. me (vel med addidi (hominum) hominem (me) Onions 748 om. tu codd. Prisciani 1.

239 749 uidi illum P^{CD} 750 cf. Lindsay praef. in Capt. p. 64 754 progredi cod. i. 7) 755 facile pro facul? sit pro siet?

mihi cod.: trai. Bothe 759-60 fert B¹ 760 quas eas Spengel

762 filia sic cod.: trai. Spengel 763 vel med 764 accersat

Lambinus 765 litigi... aliquid Spengel fort. recte

- uerum est modu' tamen, quoad pati uxorem oportet ;
 20 nec pol filia umquam patrem accersit ad se 770
 nisi aut quid commissi aut iurgi est caussa.
 sed id quidquid est iam sciam. atque eccam eampse ante aedis et eius tristem uirum uideo. id est quod suspi- 773-4 cabar.
 25 appellabo hanc. MA. ibo aduersum. salue multum, mi 775
 pater.
 SE. salua sis. saluen aduenio? saluen accersi iubes?
 quid tu tristis es? quid ille autem aps te iratus destitit?
 nescioquid uos uelitati éstis inter uos duos.
 loquere, uter meruistis culpam, paucis, non longos logos.
 30 MA. nusquam equidem quicquam deliqui: hoc primum te 780 apsoluo, pater.
 uerum uiuere hic non possum neque durare ullo modo.
 proin tu me hinc abducas. SE. quid istuc autem est? MA.
 ludibrio, pater, habeor. SE. unde? MA. ab illo quoi me mandauisti, meo
 uiro.
 SE. ecce autem litigium! quotiens tandem | edixi tibi
 35 ut caueres neuter ad me iretis cum querimonia? 785
 MA. quí ego istuc, mi pater, cauere possum? SE. men interrogas?
 MA. nisi non uis. SE. quotiens monstraui tibi uiro ut 787-8 morem geras,
 quid ille faciat né id opserues, quó eat, quid rerum gerat.
 40 MA. at enim ille hinc amat meretricem ex proxumo. SE. 790 sane sapit
 atque ob istanc industriam etiam faxo amabit amplius.

769 quo id *B*² 771 vix iurigi <iusta> causa Leo, ut integer
tetram, fiat 772 quicquid id cod.: traí. Bothe 773, 774 alii faciunt bacch. tetram, ante — uideo (immo uideo, id) et bacch. dim.
 id (immo est) — suspicabar (vel iamb. dim. catal. id — susp.) 775 aduersum Pylades: uorsum cod. 778 ueliati cod. vel duo 779 pauci cod. locos cod. 784 <ego> edixi vel <id> ed. Ritschl

- MA. atque ibi potat. SE. tua quidem ille caussa potabit minus,
si illic siue alibi lubebit? quae haec, malum, impudentiast?
una opera prohibere ad cenam ne promittat postules 795 neu quemquam accipiat alienum apud se. seruirin tibi 45 postulas uiros? dare una ópera pensum postules, inter ancillas sedere iubeas, lanam carere.
MA. non equidem mihi te aduocatum, pater, adduxi, sed
uiro.
hinc stas, illum caussam dicis. SE. si ille quid deliquerit, 800 multo tanta illum accusabo quam te accusaui amplius. 50 quando te auratam et uestitam bene habet, ancillas, penum recte praehibet, melius sanam est, mulier, mentem sumere.
MA. at ille suppilat mihi aurum et pallas ex arcis domo, me despoliat, mea ornamenta clam ad meretrices degerit.
805 SE. male facit, si istuc facit; si non facit, tu male facis 55 quae insontem insimules. MA. quin etiam nunc habet pallam, pater,
(et) spinter, quod ad hanc detulerat, nunc, quia rescui, refert.
SE. iam ego ex hoc, ut factumst, scibo. (ibo) ad hominem atque (ad)loquar.
dic mihi istuc, Menaechme, quod uos dissertatis, ut sciam.
810 quid tu tristis es? quid illa autem irata aps te destitit? 60
MEN. quisquis es, quidquid tibi nomen est, senex, summum
Iouem

793 si Bothe: siue cod. (i. 9) vel illi 795 se Acidalius: te cod. 797 carere Varro de L. L. 7, 54: carpere cod. 798 mihi te *B*²: mittit cod. 800 tanto Ital. (sed cf. ad v. 680) 801 ancillas penum Ital.: anpillaspem cod. 802 samnam cod. 803 pallam *B*² domo Gulielmus: modo cod. 804 clam Acidalius:
tiam ut vid. cod. tiam [me] ad me. P^{CD} 807 et add. Ital.
808 sibo cod. (corr. *B*²) (v. 9) ibo add. Camerarius adquem (atque *B*²) loquar cod.: corr. Saracenus 809 quid Boxhorn 810 illam B iratam cod. destitit Dousa: destitus ut vid. cod. (destituis B, dedistitus P^{CD}) deosque do testis— SE. qua de re aut quouis rei rerum omnium?

MEN. me neque isti male fecisse mulieri quae me arguit hanc domo ab se surrupuisse atque apstulisse—MA. deierat?

65 MEN. sí ego intra aedis huius umquam ubi habitat 815-6
penetraui (pedem),

omnium hominum exopto ut fiam miserorum miserrumus.

SE. sanun es qui istuc exoptes aut neges te umquam pedem in eas aedis intulisse ubi habitas, insanissime?

MEN. tun, senex, ais habitare med in illisce aedibus? 820

70 SE. tu negas? MEN. nego hercle uero. SE. immo hercle inuere negas;

nisi quo nocte hac exmigrasti. (tu) concede huc, filia.

quid tu ais? num hinc exmigrastis? MA. quem in locum aut (quam) ob rem, opsecro?

SE. non edepol scio. MA. profecto ludit te hic. non tu[te] tenes?

SE. iam uero, Menaechme, sati' iocatu's. nunc hanc rem 825 gere.

75 MEN. quaeso, quid mihi tecum est? unde aut quis tu homo es? *

tibi aut ádeo isti, quae mihi molestiaest quoquo modo?

MA. uiden tu illic oculos uirere? ut uiridis exoritur colos ex temporibus atque fronte, ut oculi scintillant, uide! 829-30

812 do testes Gruterus: detestes cod. 814 intercidisse aliquid suspiciatur Ritschl delurat cod.: peierat Schoell 816 pedem
add. Pylades 818 neces cod. 819 intulis cod. 820 tunc senex ait cod. (corr. B²) 821 tun Bothe negc per compend. script.
(vel neco) in cod. (neque P^{CD}) hercle (Vahlen) inuere scripsi: hece ludere cod. (pro luere: vi. i) neget P^{CD} (? pro neges) 822 hac emigrasti Ital.: hac migrasti cod. (pro hace migrasti? i. 7) tu add.
Schoell huc Camerarius: hac cod. (a pro u; vi. i) (mea) f. Fleck- eisen 823 agis cod. (corr. in B) exmigrasti cod. (ex v. 822):
corr. Acidalius quam add. Beroaldus 824 tu Mueller 825 locatus nunc ac (hanc B²) rem agere cod.: corr. Spengel 826 (quid debeo) Leo 827 vel istic q. mi. molesta est cod.: corr. Schoell:
molesta q. mi. est Vahlen 828 iurare (pro lurere?) P^{CD}

MEN. quid mihi meliust quam, quando illi me insanire praedicant,

ego me adsimulem insanire, ut illos a me apsterream? 80

MA. ut pandiculans oscitatur! quid nunc faciam, mi pater?

SE. concede huc, mea nata, ab istoc quam potest longissime.

835 MEN. euhoe atque euhoe, Bromie, quo me in siluam ue-natum uocas?

audio, sed non abire possum ab his regionibus,

ita illa me ab laeua rabiosa femina adseruat canes, 85

poste autem illinc hircus talust, qui saepe aetate in sua perdidit ciuem innocentem falso testimonio.

840 SE. uae capiti tuo! MEN. ecce, Apollo mihi ex oraclo imperat

ut ego illic oculos exuram lampadi[bu]s ardentibus.

MA. perii! mi pater, minatur mihi oculos exurere. 90

MEN. ei mihi! insanire me aiunt, ultro quom ipsi insaniunt.

SE. filia, heus! MA. quid est? SE. quid agimus? quid si ego huc seruos cito?

845 ibo, abducam qui hunc hinc tollant et domi deuinciant priu' quam turbaram quid faciat ampliús. MEN. enim haereo;

ni occupo aliquid mihi consilium, hí domum me ad se 95
auferent.

pugnis me uotas in huius ore quicquam parcere, nei a meis oculis apscedat in malam magnam crucem.

850 faciam quod iubes, Apollo. SE. fuge domum quantum potest,

832 ego me (ita cod.) (ut) Ritschl 834 potest corr. potes cod.
ut vid. 835 euhoe atque euhoe scripsi (cf. ad Cas. 727): eubi (eum B¹) atque heu cod.: euhoe, Bacche. Richter 838 post te cod.
illi circo salus cod.: corr. Beroaldus caluus Mueller, sed fort. alius id quod 'olens' (cf. 'alium') 840 ex oraclo mi Ritschl, nam mihi | ex displicet imperas Langen 843 ipse cod. (? pro ipsei, seq. iⁿ corr.
B²) 847 aliquod alii 849 ni a meis Vahlen et eadem ut vid. in cod. sed antiqua forma nei a miis (ne iam his B²) in magnam malam crucem Sonnenschein

ne hic te optundat. MA. fugio. amabo, ádserua istunc, mi
pater,

100 ne quo hinc abeat. sumne ego mulier misera quae illaec audio?—

MEN. hau male illánc amoui; (amoueam) nunc hunc in-purissimum,

barbatum, tremulum Titanum, qui cluet Cygno patre.

ita mihi imperas ut ego huius membra atque ossa atque 855
artua

comminuam illo scipione quem ipse habet. SE. dabitur malum,

105 me quidem si attigeris aut si propius ad me accesseris.

MEN. faciam quod iubes; securim capiam ancipitem atque
hunc senem

osse fini dedolabo ássulatim uiscera.

SE. enim uero illud praecauendumst atq̃ue adcurandumst 860
mihi;

sane ego illúm metuo, ut minatur, ne quid male faxit mihi.

110 MEN. multa mi imperas, Apollo: nunc equos iunctos iubes capere me indomitos, ferocis, atque in currum inscendere, ut ego hunc proteram leonem uetulum, olentem, edentulum.

iam astiti in currum, iam lora teneo, iam stimulum: in 865 manust.

agite equi, facitote sonitus unguularum appareat;

115 cursu celeri facite inflexa sit pedum pernitas.

SE. mihin equis iunctis minare? MEN. écce, Apollo, denuo

me iubes facere impetum in eum qui stat atque occidere.

852 summe cod. (corr. B²) audeo cod. (corr. B²) 853 amoueam add. Persson 854 Tithonum edd. qui lucet (pro cluet) cygno Prisci- anus 1, 216: cyeno prognatum cod. Cucino Ritschl 858 securi cod. vel senem — (sermone interrupto) 861 vel illunc 864
uetulum Gulielmius: etulum cod. edentulum Pius: edentius cod.
(i pro t, i. e. ul; vii. 5, p. 97) 865 stimulus iam Ritschl 866 appareat Ritschl: apparent cod. 867 facitote P^{CD} inflexa Dousa:
inflexu cod. (u pro a; vi. 1) sint cod. (corr. B²) 868 manare
cod. (corr. B²)

870 sed quis hic est qui me capillo hinc de curru deripit?
imperium tuum demutat atque edictum Apollinis.

SE. eu hercle morbum acrem ac durum! * * *
* * * di, uostram fidem!

120

873^a uel hic qui insanit quam ualuit paullo prius!
ei derepente tantus morbus incidit.

875 cibo atque accersam medicum iam quantum potest.—

MENAECMVS II

SENEX

iii

MEN. Iamne isti abierunt, quaeso, ex conspectu meo, qui me ui cogunt ut ualidus insaniam?
quid cesso abire ad nauem dum saluo licet?

879-80 uosque omnis quaeso, si senex reuenerit, ni me indicetis qua platea hinc aufugerim.—

5

SE. lumbi sedendo, óculi spectando dolent, manendo medicum dum se ex opere recipiat.
odiosus tandem uix ab aegrotis uenit,

885 ait se óbligasse crus fractum Aesculapio, Apollini autem bracchium. nunc cogito utrum me dicam ducere medicum an fabrum.
atque eccum incedit. moue formicinum gradum.

10

MEDICVS SENEX

iv.

MED. Quid esse illi morbi dixeras? narra, senex.

890 num laruatust aut cerritus? fac sciam.
num eum ueternus aut aqua intercus tenet?

SE. quin ea te caussa duco ut id dicas mihi atque illum ut sanum facias. MED. perfacile id quidemst.
sanum futurum, mea ego id promitto fide.

5

871 atque dictum cod. 872 lacunam indic. Schoell. Neque eu hercle neque eu hercl' placent 877 ualidus uix ferendum ut ualens Brix: fort. ualidus uti uesaniam Bothe (cf. v. 921) post hunc versum lacunam indic. Ritschl 882 spectando Ausonius Lud.
Sept. Sap. 131: exspectando cod. (v. 9, p. 70) 889 esset cod.
890 laruatus cod. vel laruatus aut cerritust 891 ueternus cod.
(corr. B²) 893 quideast cod. ut uid. (A pro M) corr. B²) 894 eco cod. (C pro G; vi. 1)

SE. magna cum cura ego illum curari uolo.

MED. quin suspirabo plus tescentat in dies :

ita ego eum cum cura magna curabo tibi.

10 SE. atque eecum ipsum hominem. opseruemus quam rem agat.

V MENAECHMVS I SENEX MEDICVS

MEN. Edepol ne hic dies peruorsus atque aduorsus mi optigit.

quae me clam ratus sum facere, omnia ea fecit palam 900
parasitus qui me compleuit flagiti et formidinis, meus Vlixes, suo qui regi tantum conciuuit mali.

5 quem ego hominem, si quidem uiuo, uita euoluam sua—sed ego stultus sum, qui illius esse dico quae meast :

meo cibo et sumptu educatust. anima priuabo uirum. 905

condigne autem haec meretrix fecit, ut mos est meretricius :
quia rogo palla ut referatur rusum ad uxorem meam,

10 mihi se ait dedisse. eu edepol ! ne ego homo uiuo miser.

SE. audin quae loquitur? MED. se miserum praedicat.

SE. adeas uelim.

MED. saluos sis, Menaechme. quaeso, quare apertas bra- 910 cchium?

non tu scis quantum isti morbo nunc tuo facias mali?

MEN. quin tu te suspendis? SE. ecquid sentis? MED.
quidni sentiam?

15 non potest haec res ellebori iungere optinerier.

sed quid ais, Menaechme? MEN. quid uis? MED. dic mihi hoc quod te rogo :

896 sescentos Camerarius die Lambinus, sed cf. Realslob (Lit. Centralbl. 1895. p. 1761) fort. sescenta sexies (vi ies) 897 ita e. eum Kaempff: ita e. illum cod. (cf. ad Aul. 758): fort. ita (in fine v. praecedentis) Ego illum 900 ea omnia cod.: trai. Bothe metri causa 903 nita cod. (corr. B²) 906 meretricibus B 909 sed cod. (vix antiqua orthographia) 913 unguine (iung.?) B²: iugere Ital., sed potest iungere abl. casus nominis iungus (Gr. ζεύγος) esse

915 album an atrum uinum potas? MEN. quin tu is in malam crucem?

MED. iam hercle oceptat insanire primulum. MEN. quín [tu] me interrogas

purpureum panem an puniceum soleam ego esse an luteum?
soleamne esse auis squamossas, piscis pennatos? SE. papae! 20

919-20 audin tu ut deliramenta loquitur? quid cessas dare potionis aliquid priu' quam percipit insania?

MED. mane modo, etiam percontabor alia. SE. occidis fabulans.

MED. dic mihi hoc: solent tibi umquam óculi duri fieri?

MEN. quid? tu me locustam censes esse, homo igna- 25
uissime?

925 MED. dic mihi: enumquam intestina tibi crepant, quod sentias?

MEN. ubi satur sum, nulla crepitant; quando essurio, tum crepant.

MED. hoc quidem edepol hau pro insano uerbum respondit
mihi.

perdormiscin usque ad lucem? facilin tu dormis cubans?

929-30 MEN. perdormisco, si resoluí árgentum quoi debeo— 30

931-3 qui te Iuppiter dique omnes, percontator, perduint!

MED. nunc homo insanire oceptat: de illis uerbis caue
tibi.

935 SE. immo Nestor nunc quidem est de uerbis, praeut dudum fuit;

915 sic ascriptus in B manu recentiore ad Curculionis v. 242: album an atrum uinum potas quid tibi quesito opus est vix potas? MEN.
quid tibi quaesito opust (Album an atrum uinum potem?) quin tu is, etc. (iii. 11) 916 ocepta cod. (corr. B²) post primulum lacu-nam sign. Vahlen, Schoell (cf. ad v. 915) tu del. Bothe (ex v. 915?) 918 quamossas cod. 919-20 auditu cod. (corr. B²) 921 uesania Bothe (cf. v. 878), cui percipit displicet 922 alia] heia Schoell SE.} MEN. alii occipis B² fabulans Acidalius: fabulam
(B) vel salam (PCD) cod. 925 mehi codd. (antiqua forma?) 926 tunc codd. Nonii 255 928 perdormiscanuis que cod. (pro -can corr.
-cin superscr. i) obdormis Ritschl cubans Acidalius: curans cod.
R pro B; vi. 1) 929 30 vel quoi 933 perdunt cod. corr. B² nam dudum uxorem suam esse aiebat rabiosam canem.

35 MEN. quid, ego? SE. dixi insanus, inquam. MEN. égone?

SE. tú istic, qui mihi

etiam me iunctis quadrigis minitatu's prosternere.

egomet haec te uidi facere, égomet haec ted arguo.

939-40

MEN. at ego te sacram coronam surrupuisse Ioui' (scio), et ob eam rem in carcerem ted esse compactum scio,

40 et postquam es emissus, caesum uirgis sub furca scio;

tum patrem occidisse et matrem uendidisse etiam scio.

satin haec pro sano male dicta male dictis respondeo?

945

SE. opsecro hercle, medice, propere quidquid facturu's face.

non uides hominem insanire? MED. scin quid facias optimum est?

45 ad me face uti deferatur. SE. itane censes? MED. quip-pini?

ibi meo arbitrato potero curare hominem. SE. age ut lubet.

MED. elleborum potabis faxo áliquos uiginti dies.

950

MEN. at ego te pendentem fodiam stimulis triginta dies.

MED. í, arcesse homines qui illunc ad me deferant. SE.
quot sunt satis?

50 MED. proinde ut insanire uideo, quattuor, nihilo minus.

SE. iám hic erunt. adserua tu istunc, medice. MED. ímmo ibo domum,

ut parentur quibu' paratis opus est. tu seruos iube hunc ad me ferant. SE. iam ego illic faxo erit. MED.

955

abeo.— SE. uale.—

936 vel aibat 937 dixi Leo: dixi cod. MEN. Quid ego dixi?
SE. insanus, inquam— Schoell tu istic Ital.: tustic (istuc B) cod.

938 ministatus (-isst-) cod. (corr. *B*²) 940 uide cod. (pro uidei?)
(corr. *B*²) 941 [lo]iouis P^{CD} (iv. 3): aio Iouis Pareus: Ioui Pylades

scio add. Pylades (fort. in fine sequentis versus scriptum erat; ii. 5) 945 rescondeo cod. (corr. *B*²) 946 maledice cod. (v. 8) (corr. *B*²)

947 es cod. (corr. *B*²) 948 itana cod. (corr. *B*²) 950 post 951
cod. (prius om. propter homoeotel. ? ii. 6): corr. Camerarius alios *B*²

953 uideor cod. (corr. in B) 955 tus cod. 956 vel illi

MEN. abiit socerus, abit medicus. nunc solus sum. pro Iuppiter!

quid illuc est quod med hisce homines insanire praedicant? 55 nam equidem, postquam gnatus sum, numquam aegrotavi unum diem

960 neque ego insanio neque pugnās neque ego litis coepio.
saluos saluos alios uideo, noui (ego) homines, adloquor.
an illi perperam insanire me aiunt, ipsi insaniunt?
quid ego nunc faciam? domum ire cupio: uxor non sinit; 60 huc autem nemo intromittit. nimi' prouentum est ne-quiter.
965 hic ero usque; ad noctem saltem, credo, intromittar domum.

MESSENI

vi

MES. Spectamen bono seruo id est, qui rem erilem procurat, uidet, conlocat cogitatque, ut apse nte ero rem eri diligenter tutetur quam si ipse adsit aut rectius.

970 tergum quam gulam, crura quam uentrem oportet 5 potiora esse quoi cor modeste situmst.

recordetur id, qui nihili sunt, quid eis preti detur ab suis eris, ignauis, improbis uiris:
uerbera, compedes,

975 molae, [magna] lassitudo, fames, frigu' durum, 10
haec pretia sunt ignauiae.

id ego male malum metuo: propterea bonum esse certumst potius

957 fort. a. socrus abît (Arch. Lat. Lex. 12, 592) nunc del.
Guietus, rhythmo consulens 958 (nunc) me (ita cod.) Mueller
(Rhein. Mus. 54, 393) (cf. 957) hic cod. (cf. 997 illic pro illisce)
960 coepio testatur Nonius 89: cupio cod. 961 ego add. Ritschl
(hos) hom. Mueller (Rhein. Mus. 54, 393) fort. homines uideo, noui 962 perperam Ital.: perderam cod. (D pro P) 965 ero Pius:
ergo cod. usce cod. 968 (tam) rem Ritschl, cui hiatus in fine hemistichii displicet 969 vel quasi 972 re[corde] cordetur B, unde corde reccordetur Spengel (troch. septenar.) 975 magna del.
Ritschl, metri causa

quam malum ; nám magi' multo patior faciliu' uerba : uer-bera ego odi,
 nimioque edo lubentius molitum quam molitum praehibeo.
 15 propterea eri imperium exsequor, bene et sedate seruo id ; 980 atque id mihi prodest.
 alii sei ita ut in rem esse ducunt sint, ego ita ero ut me esse oportet ;
 metum id míhi adhibeam, culpam apstineám, ero ut omnibus in locis sim praesto :
 serui qui quom culpa carent metuont i solent esse eris 983^a utibiles.
 20 nam illi qui nil metuont, postquam malum †promeri- 983^b tumque†ēi metuont.
 metuam hau multum. prope est quando †ceruso faciam† pretium exsoluet.
 (eo) ego exemplo seruio, tergo ut in rem esse arbitror. 985 postquam in tabernam uassa et seruos conlocaui, ut iusserat, ita uenio aduersum. nunc fores pultabo, adesce ut me sciat, 25 †neque utrum† ex hoc saltu damni saluom ut educam foras.
 sed metuo ne sero ueniam depugnato proelio.

vii SENEX MENAECHMVS I MESSENIO

SE. Per ego uobis deos atque homines dico ut imperium 990 meum
 sapienter habeatis curae, quae ímperaui atque ímpero :
 facite illic homo iam in medicinam ablatus sublimis siet,

978 vel mage ego fort. delend. rhythmí causa 981 mihi id B 982 alii si (?) Leo : aliis (alii B²) esse (ēē) cod. sin P^{CD} ita om. P^{CD} 983^{ab} secl. Hermann (cf. Most. 858, ubi metuont ei) 983^a et metuont cod. hoc loco (et metuo ni B¹, unde metuunt hi B² del.
ct) 983^b promeriti tunc i Vahlen : fort. promeriti, atque 984 metuam haud Pylades : metum aut cod. es B fort. hoc erus quae f.
 (O pro Q., i. e. que ; vii. 1) 985 eo add. Spengel terge P^{CD} : tergi Merula 986 uassed cod. ut vid. (pro uassæt) (corr. B²) 987 iam Seyffert 988 Atque Gronovius uirum Bothe fort. Meum- que erum ut e. f. Pareus : ute duo anfora cod. (O pro C ; vi. 1) nisi quidem uos uostra crura aut latera nihili penditis.

caue quisquam quod illic minitetur uostrum flocci fecerit. 5

995 quid statis? quid dubitatis? iam sublimem raptum oportuit.

ego ibo ad medicum: praesto ero illi, quom uenietis.

MEN. occidi!

quid hoc est negoti? quid illisce homines ad me currunt,
opsecro?

quid uoltis uos? quid quaeritatis? quid me circumstistis?

quo rapitis me? quo fertis me? perii, opsecro uostram 10
fidem,

1000 Epidamnienses, subuenite, ciues! quin me mittitis?

MES. pro di immortales! opsecro, quid ego oculis aspicio meis?

erum meum indignissime nescioqui sublimem ferunt.

MEN. ecquis suppetias mi audet ferre? MES. ego, ere, audacissime.

o facinus indignum et malum, Epidamnii ciues, erum 15

1005 meum hic in pacato oppido luci deripier in uia, qui liber ad uos uenerit!

mittite istunc. MEN. opsecro te, quisquis es, operam mihi ut des

neu sinas in me insignite fieri tantam iniuriam.

MES. immo et operam dabo et defendam et subuenibo 20
sedulo.

1010 numquam te patiar perire, me perirest aequius.

eripe oculum istic, ab umero qui tenet, ere, te opsecro.

hisce ego iam sementem in ore faciam pugnosque opseram.

993 nihil B 995 satis cod. (corr. B²) oportum P^{CD} 997 quod i. Bach illic cod. cf. 958 hic pro hisce 998 uol. quos cod. (corr. in D) circum stitis cod. 1003 vix mihi auidet 1005-65 in A nihil fere legitur 1007 es om. B ut des B²: nides cod. vi. i. p. 86 1009 im. op. om. et Guictus 1010 perirest aequius Camerarius: derires te cuius (i. 5)

maxumo hodie malo hercle uostro ístunc fertis. mittite.

25 MEN. teneo ego huic oculum. MES. face ut oculi locus in capite appareat.

uos scelesti, uos rapaces, uos praedones ! Lo. periimus ! 1015 opseco hercle ! MES. mittite ergo. MEN. quid me uobis tactiost ?

pecte pugnīs. MES. agite abite, fugite hinc in malam
crucem.

em tibi etiam ! quia postremus cedis, hoc praemi feres.

30 nimi' bene ora commetaui atque ex mea sententia.

edepol, ere, ne tibi suppetias temperi adueni modo.

1020 1246

MEN. at tibi di semper, adulescens, quisquis es, faciant bene.
nam apsque ted ésset, hodie numquam ad solem occasum uiuerem.

MES. ergo edepol, si recte facias, ere, med emittas manu.

35 MEN. liberem ego te? MES. uerum, quandoquidem, ere, te seruauī. MEN. quid est?

adulescens, erras. MES. quid, erro? MEN. per Iouem 1025 adiuro patrem, med erum tuom non esse. MES. non taces? MEN. non mentior :

nec meu' seruos numquam tale fecit quale tu mihi.

MES. sic sine igitur, si tuom negas me ésse, abire liberum.

40 MEN. mea quidem hercle caussa liber esto atque ito quo uoles.

MES. nemp' iubes? MEN. iubeo hercle, si quid imperi est 1030 in te mihi.

MES. salve, mi patrone. 'quom tu liber es, Messenio, gaudeo.' credo hercle uobis. sed, patrone, te opseco, ne minus imperes mihi quam quom tuos seruos fui.

1013 herc. hod. ma. Bothe 1019 nimis Bothe: nimis [aut] cod.
 1020 tempore cod. 1022 vel apsq' 1027 umquam PCD 1028 vel med post 1028 in P leguntur vv. 1037-43 suo loco redeuntes (? prius omissi propter homoeotel. marsuppiū; ii. 6) 1031-2 vide ne illa patrone—sed propter homoeoteleuton intercederint in A, qui inter vv. 1026 et 1034 sex, non septem, versus exhibuisse
videtur

apud ted habitabo et quando ibis, una tecum ibo domum. 45

1035 MEN. minime. MES. nunc ibo in tabernam, uassa atque argentum tibi

referam. recte est opsignatum in uidulo marsuppiū cum uiatico : id tibi iam huc adferam. MEN. adfer strenue.
MES. saluom tibi ita ut mihi dedisti reddibó. hic me mane.—

MEN. nimia mira mihi quidem hodie exorta sunt miris 50
modis :

1040 alii me negant eum esse qui sum atque excludunt foras ;
etiam hic seruom se meum esse aiebat quem ego emisi manu, [uel ille qui se petere argentum modo, qui seruom se meum

1042^a esse aiebat, (med erum suom), quem ego modo emisi manu] is ait se mihi adlaturum cum argento marsuppiū : 55
id si attulerit, dicam ut a me ábeat liber quo uolet, 1045 ne tum, quando sanus factus sit, a me argentum petat.

socer et medicus me insanire aiebant. quid sit mira sunt.

haec nihilo esse mihi uidentur setius quam somnia.

nunc ibo intro ad hanc meretricem, quamquam suscenset 60
mihi,

si possum exorare ut pallam reddat quam referam domum.—

MENAECHMVS II MESSENIO

viii

1050 MEN. Men hodie usquam conuenisse te, audax, audes dicere,

post 1036 in P legitur v. 1044 suo loco repetitus (cf. ad v. 1028) 1037-44 v. ad 1028, 1036 1037 Quom cod. 1039 miris mo. (uel multis mo.) cod. 1041, 1042^a restituere conatus sum : in A apparent initia vv. 1041 (?) et 1043, omissis vv. 1042 et 1042^a : uel unus versus in P :

etiam hic seruom esse se meum aiebat quem ego emisi manu uel duo :

uel ille qui se petere modo argentum. modo qui seruom se meum esse aiebat. quem ego modo emisi manu

1041 uel aibat 1042 fort. Illi (adverb.), del. uel (Class. Rev. 10.
333) 1044 uel med 1045 ne tum Lambinus : nedum cod.

1046 i. aiebant Camerarius : i. dicebant cod. (? d pro a : vi. 1, p. 84) :
vix insanir' di. uel insanire dicebant 1047 sectius Vel. Longus ap.

Gellium 18, 9, 4, ubi minus pro mihi codd. Gellii postquam aduersum mi imperaui ut huc uenires? MES.

quin modo

erupui, homines qui ferebant te sublimem quattuor, apud hasce aedis. tu clamabas deum fidem atque hominum
omnium,

5 quom ego accurro teque eripio ui, pugnando, ingratiis.

ob eam rem, quia te seruauui, me amisisti liberum.

1055

quom argentum dixi me petere et uasa, tu quantum potest praecucurristi obuiam, ut quae fecisti infitias cas.

MEN. liberum ego te iussi abire? MES. certo. MEN. quin certissimumst

10 mepte potius fieri seruom quam te umquam emittam manu.

ix MENAECHEMVS I MESSENIO

MENAECHEMVS II

MEN.¹ Si uoltis per oculos iurare, nihilo hercle ea caussa 1060
magis

facietis ut ego hodie apstulerim pallam et spinter, pessumae.

MES. pro di immortales! quid ego uideo? MEN.² quid uides? MES. speculum tuom.

MEN.² quid negoti est? MES. tuast imago. tam consimilest quam potest.

5 MEN.² pol profecto haud est dissimilis, meam quom formam noscito.

MEN.¹ o adulescens, salue, qui me seruauisti, quisquis es. 1065

MES. adulescens, quaeso hercle eloquere tuom mihi nomen, nisi piget.

MEN.¹ non edepol ita promeruisti de me ut pigeat quae uelis

1052 quom Ritschl te fer. cod. : trai. Gruterus sublimem P^{CD} 1054 ui pugnando Camerarius: [uel] inpugnando (B) (iv. 3) vel oppugnando (P^{CD}) cod. 1058 quin Saracenus: cui cod. 1061 vel uti (hinc) hodie Ritschl 1063 tuast Ital.: tumst cod. (M pro
A) consiliaest (consimilis est B², quam P, ut vid.: consimiles (i. e.
-le's) quantum A, ut vid. 1064 quom Acidalius: quam cod.
1066-1131 deest A 1066 eloquere Fleckeisen: loquere cod. piger corr. piget cod. ut vid. 1067 medepol cod. (corr. B²)

(opsequi). mihi est Menaechmo nomen. MEN.² immo edepol mihi.

MEN.¹ Siculus sum Syracusanus. MEN.² ea domus et 10 patria est mihi.

1070 MEN.¹ quid ego ex te audio? MEN.² hoc quod res est.

MES. noui equidem hunc: erus est meus.
egoquidem huius seruos sum, sed med esse huius credidi.
ego hunc censebam ted esse, huic etiam exhibui negotium.
quaeso ignoscas si quid stulte dixi atque imprudens tibi.

MEN.² delirare mihi uidere: non commeministi semul 15 1075 te hodie mecum exire ex naui? MES. enim uero aequom postulas.

tú erus es: tu seruom quaere. tu salueto: tu uale.
hunc ego esse aio Menaechmum. MEN.¹ át ego me.

MEN.² quae haec fabulast?
tú es Menaechmus? MEN.¹ me esse dico, Moscho prognatum patre.

MEN.² tun meo patre es prognatus? MEN.¹ immo equi- 20
dem, adulescens, meo;

1080 tuom tibi neque occupare neque praeripere postulo.

MES. di inmortales, spem insperatam date mihi quam sus-pico!

nam, nisi me animus fallit, hi sunt geminei germanei duo.
nam et patrem et patriam commemorant pariter quae fuerint sibi.

seuocabo erum. Menaechme. MEN.¹ MEN.² quid uis? 25

MES. non ambos uolo,

1085 sed uter uostrorum est aduectus mecum naui. MEN.¹ non ego.

MEN.² at ego. MES. te uolo igitur. huc concede. MEN.²
concessi. quid est?

1068 obsequi add. Vahlen 1069 ea domus eadem urbs Buecheler 1070 meus] mihi B ante corr., ut vid. 1072 te cod. 1076 salueto tu tu uale PCD 1079 tun meo Pylades: tun ameo cod. 1081 suspicor B² 1083 patriam et patrem Lipsius: patrem et matrem cod. (v. 1) que B ante corr.: qui PCD B ex corr. 1085 uostrum cod.

MES. illic hómo aut sycophanta aut geminus est frater tuos.
nam ego hominem hominis similiorem numquam uidi alterum.

30 neque aqua aquae nec lacte est lactis, crede mi, usquam similius

quam hic tui est, tuque huius autem ; poste eandem patriam 1090
ac patrem

memorat. meliust nos adire átque hunc percontarier.

MEN.² hercle qui tu me admonuisti recte et habeo gratiam.
perge operam dare, opsecro hercle ; liber esto, si inuenis

35 hunc meum fratrem esse. MES. spero. MEN.² et ego idem spero fore.

MES. quid ais tu ? Menaechmum, opinor, te uocari dixeras. 1095

MEN.¹ ita uero. MES. huic item Menaechmo nomen est.
in Sicilia

te Syracusis natum esse dixisti : hic natust ibi.

Moschum tibi patrem fuisse dixti : huic itidem fuit.

40 nunc operam potestis ambo mihi dare et uobis simul.

MEN.¹ promeruisti ut ne quid ores quod uelis quin impetres. 1100 tam quasi me emeris argento, liber seruibo tibi.

MES. spes mihi est uos inuenturum fratres germanos duos geminos, una matre natos et patre uno uno die.

45 MEN.¹ mira memoras. utinam ecficere quod pollicitu's possies.

MES. possum. sed nunc agite uterque id quod rogabo dicite. 1105

MEN.¹ ubi lubet, roga : respondebo. nil reticebo quod
sciam.

MES. est tibi nomen Menaechmo ? MEN.¹ fateor. MES.
est itidem tibi ?

1087 <est> sy. Ritschl : vix <homo> sy. 1088 homini sim.
cod. (cf. ad Capt. 582) <ullum> alterum Lange, cui hiatus hominem | hominis displicet 1089 lactis] lacti cod. (cf. ad 1088) 1090 postea cod.: post Bothe 1092 qui (*B*¹) vel quin (P^{CD} *B*²) cod. 1094 item Seyffert 1095 vel opino 1097 vix dixti (cf. Merc. 658) <et> hic Seyffert natus est cod. 1098 vel huic 1102 inuenturum Lambinus : inuenturos cod.

MEN.² est. MES. patrem fuisse Moschum tibi ais? MEN.¹

ita uero. MEN.² et mihi.

MES. esne tu Syracusanus? MEN.¹ certo. MES. quid tu? 50

MEN.² quippini?

1110 MES. optume usque adhuc conueniunt signa. porro operam date.

quid longissime meministi, dic mihi, in patria tua?

MEN.¹ cum patre ut abii Tarentum ad mercatum. postea inter homines me deerrare á patre atque inde auehi.

MEN.² Iuppiter supreme, serua me! MES. quid clamas? 55
quin taces?

1115 quot eras annos gnatus quom te pater a patria | auehit?

MEN.¹ septuennis: nam tunc dentes mihi cadebant primulum.

neque patrem numquam postilla uidi. MES. quid? uos tum patri

filií quot eratis? MEN.¹ ut nunc maxume memini, duo.

MES. uter eratis, tun an ille, maior? MEN.¹ aequae ambo 60 pares.

1120 MES. quí id potest? MEN.¹ geminei ambo eramus. MEN.²
di me seruatum uolunt.

MES. si interpellas, ego tacebo. MEN.² potius taceo.

MES. dic mihi:

uno nomine ambo eratis? MEN.¹ minime. nam mihi hoc erat,

quod nunc est, Menaechmo: illum tum uocabant Sosiclem.

MEN.² signa adgnoui, contineri quin complectar non queo. 65

1125 mi germane, gemine frater, salue. ego sum Sosicles.

MEN.¹ quo modo igitur post Menaechmo nomen est factum
tibi?

MEN.² postquam ad nos renuntiatum est te * * * *

1115 <tum> quom Ritschl 1116 iam nunc B 1117 numquam Brix, Habich: umquam cod. (i. 9) postillae ita B² umquam Ritschl uos tum Colvius: uostrum cod. 1121 potius Messenieni dat Abraham stud. Plaut. 226 1127 lacunam indic. Ritschl * * * * * et patrem esse mortuom,

79 auo' noster mutauit : quod tibi nomen est, fecit mihi.

MEN.¹ credo ita esse factum ut dicis. sed mihi hoc ré- 1129
sponde. MEN.² roga. 1130

MEN.¹ quid erat nomen nostrae matri? MEN.² Teuximarchae. MEN.¹ conuenit.

o salue, insperate, ánnis multis post quem conspikor.

MEN.² frater, et tu, quém ego multis miserieis, laboribus 75 usque adhuc quaesiui quemque ego esse inuentum gaudeo.

MES. hoc erat quod haec te meretrix huius uocabat nomine : 1135

hunc censebat te esse, credo, quom uocat te ad prandium. uocat

MEN.¹ namque edepol iussi hic mihi hodie prandium appa-rarier,

clam meam uxorem, quoi pallam surrupui dudum domo, 80 eam dedi huic. MEN.² hanc, dicis, frater, pallam quam ego habeo? MEN.¹ (haec east).

quo modo haec ad te peruenit? MEN.² meretrix huc ad 1140
prandium

me abduxit, me sibi dedisse aiebat. prandi perbene, potaui atque accubui scortum, pallam et aurum hoc (apstuli).

MEN.¹ gaudeo edepol si quid propter me tibi euenit boni.

85 nam illa quom te ad se uocabat, memet esse credidit. 1144

MES. numquid me morare quin ego liber, ut iusti, siem? 1145

MEN.¹ optimum atque aequissimum orat, frater : fac caussa mea.

MEN.² liber esto. MEN.¹ quom tu es liber, gaudeo, Mes-senio.

MES. sed melioreset opus auspicio, ut liber perpetuo siem. 1149
1150

1132 accedit A multis annis PCD postquam APCD 1135 vel huius 1137 hic mihi hodie iussi P, A n. l. : trai. Schoell appa-rarier Camerarius : apparā P ut vid., A n. l. 1138 quoi B² : quia
P, A n. l. : quoniam Redslob 1139 haec east add. Vahlen (A n. l.)
1140 (quae) huc Ritschl 1141 vel aibat 1142 dotaui P
abstuli add. Onions (A n. l.) 1144, 1145 memet Ritschl : me P, A n. l. 1146 seam P, A n. l.

MEN.² quoniam haec euenere, frater, nostra | ex sententia, 90 in patriam redeamus ambo. MEN.¹ frater, faciam, ut tu uoles.

auctionem hic faciam et uendam quidquid est. nunc interim eamus intro, frater. MEN.² fiat. MES. scitin quid ego uos rogo?

1155 MEN.¹ quid? MES. praeconium mi ut detis. MEN.² dabitur. MES. ergo nunciam uis conclamari auctionem? MEN.¹ fore quidem dieseptumi. 95

MES. auctio fiet Menaechmi mane sane septumi.

uenibunt serui, supellex, fundi, aedes, omnia.

uenibunt quique licebunt, praesenti pecunia.

1160 uenibit—uxor quoque etiam, si quis emptor uenerit.

uix credo tota auctione capiet quinquagesies.

100

nunc, spectatores, ualete et nobis clare plaudite.

1151 euenerunt P nostra frater Gruterus. fort. recte (ii. 1) : fr.
nobis Camerarius 1152 frater Menaechmo II dat A 1154 frater Menaechmo II dant alii 1155 mihi codd. ego A 1156 fore? MEN.¹ equidem Bergk 1161 auctione tota Bothe (A n. l.)
quinquagesisaes A : quinquagesimas Leo

NOTES

ARGUMENTVM. Aulus Gellius (iii. 3. 1) mentions one Aurelius Opilius (84 B. C.) as the author of Plautine 'indices', which may be identified with the acrostic arguments extant in the Palatine group of MSS. for all the plays except the Bacchides. In any case the acrostic arguments are probably to be ascribed to the period of the revival of Plautine studies, 150-50 B. C. Non-acrostic arguments are also attached to five of the plays (Amph., Aul., Merc., Mil., Pseud.) ; they date from the second century A. D., and have been ascribed to a Carthaginian scholar who wrote metrical arguments to the books of the Aeneid and the plays of Terence.

1, 2. Mercator . . . ei . . . mors optigit : colloquial looseness of construction : cf. prol. 57-9 Epidamniensis ill' . . . ei liberorum . . . nihil erat ; so also 311-15.

1. quoi : cf. aliquoi 623. This is the usual spelling in inscriptions of the late Republic and early Empire. Quintilian, who lived during the first century A. D., says (i. 7. 27) that in his younger days the spelling quoi was the rule, but that later the practice arose of writing cui. The earliest form was quoiei ; cf. 493 quoui. Scan quoi¹ er|ant.

2. surrupio : this Plautine form of the participle arises from confusion with the present, which was in O. Lat. written surripio or surrupio, unaccented ā becoming before labials an indeterminate sound, written i or u. The later form appears below in surrepticius (3, 7), for which Plautus writes surrupicius, Curc. 205 ; cf. Prol. 60, 68.

Hiatus at a caesura (as in this line and the next) is not as such permissible ; see Introd. 7. IV. C. b, p. 53.

4. Scan fācit | Menaechmum ; see Introd. 7. I. A. a. i, p. 42.

e, 'after being', i. e. 'instead of'.

7. alitus : this form is found once in Livy, and perhaps is to be read in Cic. Planc. 81.

8. Menaechmum . . . ciuem : predicative. The hiatus is faulty.

9. eumque appellat, sc. Menaechmum ; or perhaps = 'accost him'.

10. I = ii. fratres : predicative.

PERSONAE. Peniculus : this diminutive of penis (= cauda), used as a common noun, signified, according to Festus, either a horse-tail whisk used for dusting furniture (especially tables, cf. 78), and boots (cf. 391), or a long sponge ('loofah') used for a similar purpose. The point of its application to a parasite appears from 77 seq.

Menaechmus (Μέναιχος) and Sosicles (Σωσικλῆς) are rather high-sounding names for two merchants. Menaechmus I and II correspond to Men. of Epidamnus and Men. of Syracuse respectively. In the first Folio of Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors the corresponding characters (Antipholus of Ephesus and Ant. of Syracuse) are distinguished as Sereptus (= Surreptus) and Erotes or Errotes (= Erraticus).

Erotium: 'Ερώτιον, 'darling'; cf. Philematium (Most.), Philecomasium (Mil.), Philotium (Ter. Hec. 81), &c. Such neuter diminutives are usual names for courtesans.

Cylindrus: Κίλινδρος, 'rolling-pin'; a suitable name for a cook.

Messenio: Μεσσηνίων: a slave was frequently named after the country of his origin; cf. Cario, Dorio, Lydus, Syrus, Geta, &c.

Scaena Epidamni: see on 32, 263-4.

PROLOGVS. In Roman Comedy, a Prologue, where there was one, served one or both of two purposes: (1) like the παράβασις of Old Greek Comedy it gave the poet an opportunity of answering his critics and of asking the audience's favourable attention: Terence's prologues, which are all genuine, are wholly of this kind; (2) like the opening speeches of Euripides' plays and the prologues of Middle and New Greek Comedy, it explains everything necessary for the understanding of the plot. The prologues attached to Plautus's plays are mainly of this kind; but it cannot with certainty be stated that any of the twelve regular prologues extant are genuine except those of the Aulularia, Rudens, and Trinummus. The Plautine prologues merely serve the purpose of a programme, and are spoken, not by one of the characters of a play, but by an extraneous character (e.g. the Lar Familiaris in Aulul.) or by a member of the grex specially dressed for the part (ornatu prologi); for the latter device cf. the Prologue in Shakespeare's Henry V.

Among the indications of the spuriousness of the present Prologue may be mentioned the large proportion of metrical difficulties (13, 26, 39, 67, &c.); the frigid witticisms (3, 49); the needless repetitions (43, 48); the contradiction between ll. 6 and 15; and the abruptness of l. 7. Possibly the Prologue is composed of three different fragments (1-6, 7-16, 17-end) unskillfully patched together.

1, 2. salutem . . . propitiam . . . nuntio: either 'I give you auspicious greeting', or 'I wish you health and good luck'. For the expression cf. Trin. 837 pax propitia.

3. adporto: technical term for introducing a play; cf. Ter. Phorm. 24 adporto nouam Epidicazomenon. The weak joke which follows turns on the literal sense of adporto.

MENAECMI

6. Brix⁶, who claims the prologue as genuine, explains the contradiction between this line and 15 by saying that this promise is made to secure the attention of the audience; when silence prevails, the speaker changes his tone and promises them good measure running over (14-16). This seems rather far-fetched.

7. See introduction to Prologue above. No satisfactory meaning can be assigned to atque here. A further indication that the Prologue is a piece of patchwork is the change in the speaker's attitude. From here onwards he seems to represent the author (cf. 10, 23, &c.), whereas in 1-6 he represents the acting manager (cf. 3).

8. autumant) (factum dicitur 10. To whom does this refer? Perhaps 7-12 are taken from some Greek comic prologue without regard to their pointlessness on a Roman stage.

9. quō illud: see Introd. 7. IV. A. a. ii, p. 51.

illud = argumentum, or perhaps the play generally.

10. nusquam dicam: sc. aliquid factum esse; ubi = ibi ubi. 'I shall not say that a thing happened anywhere but where I am informed it did happen.'

factum dicitur: i. e. by his imaginary informant; cf. 22 and 46. Similar devices are common in our modern novels.

11. atque adeo: corrective; see 21 note.

graecissat, 'has a Greek setting'. In a fragment of Poseidippos ἀττικίζειν and ἐλληνίζειν are opposed. z, which, like y, is not found in inscriptions before the end of the seventh century A.U.C., is usually represented in O.L. by ss; cf. cyathissare (303), badisso, tarpessita (= τραπεζίτης), &c.

12. sicilicissitat: comic prolongation into frequentative form. See Introd. 3.

13. antelogium: a hybrid word = 'prelude, preface'. The hiatus before hoc is not admissible; see App. Crit. If Lindsay's suggestion is adopted, hoc fini is to be taken in the sense 'thus far'; cf. osse fini 859.

14, 15. 'I will give you (your allowance of) plot, measured not by the bushel,' &c. The speaker assumes the rôle of a steward giving slaves their rations. Slaves on a farm received four modii of corn a month, free labourers, whose work was easier, three modii (cf. trimodio, 15). Perhaps there is a punning allusion to the phrase argentum metiri, to pay money by weight (wholesale).

demensum: depon. participle with pass. force: the neut. is used as a substantive = 'allowance'. Cf. Stich. 60.

15. ipso horreo: cf. the phrase de dolio haurire. See also on 6 above.

16. Scan ūdēst; see Introd. 7. I. A. a. i, and cf. 17 fūit | Syracusis (or fuit).

19, 20. mater . . . quae mammam dabat: i. e. nutrix) (mater quae pepererat. Sometimes mater alone is used in this sense, as Cist. 192: Verg. Aen. viii. 632 (of the wolf suckling the twins).

21. neque adeo, 'nor even'. adeo in Plautus means (1) 'in addition to that, furthermore', as here, 296, and 596; or (2) 'up to that point or degree'.

22. Scan ut quidem ille, and cf. 336, 837 ita illa, 789, 958. See Introd. 7. I. C. a. For the appeal to imaginary evidence cf. 10 and Poen. 62 seq. propterea apud uos dico confidentius Quia mihi pollicitor dixit, &c.

23. The force of the final clause is '(I tell you this) ne ... censeat, sc. me illos uidisse. Scan ego illōs; see Introd. 7. I. C. b, and cf. 41 ita illūm, 46, 246, 535, &c.

24. postquam iam ... sunt: the addition of iam makes the present the appropriate tense, as with ubi iam and quoniam (= cum iam). Postquam is also found with historical present in the sense of 'after' when the main verb is in the same tense; cf. Capt. 24 postquam belligerant ... capitur alter. See also on 34.

septuennēs: cf. 1116.

26. Hiatus at caesura doubtful; Hermann proposes geminorum; Onions, hunc alterum (confusion of -inum with hunc, and haplography; cf. 276 note), to balance illum ... alterum 28.

27. mercatur: probably local.

simul: redundant with secum; cf. 736.

28. illum ... alterum: the use of illum here perhaps foreshadows its use in late Latin as an article, a use fully developed in its Romance derivatives (Fr. le, la, les, &c.). But see 26 note. Scan āpūd | matrem; cf. 208, 795, 1034.

29. quom ... uenit. For the present cf. 1136.

30. mortales multi: an expression also found in prose; cf. Cic. Div. in Caecil. 25; Livy iii. 30. 8.

32. Epidamnus, originally a colony of Corcyra, afterwards became a Roman colony, when its name was changed to Dyrrhachium: for the reason see 263-4. It is now Durazzo, on the Illyrian coast opposite Brindisi.

33. Epidamnium is either a colloquial lengthening of the word, used metri gratia (cf. 12 sicilicissitat, and 1161 note), or conceals an original reading Epidamnum eum (Seyffert).

34. postquam ... perdidit: usual tense after postquam in Plautus, who never uses the pluperfect; Terence does so, e.g. Andr. 177.

35. animus despondit: despondeo, meaning originally 'pledge, promise', acquires the signification 'give up, resign', and is used frequently by Plautus in this phrase with sense 'lose courage, lose heart'; so Livy iii. 38. 2 and elsewhere. Hence our 'despond'.

eaque ... aegritudine = eius rei aegritudine. Scan eaque by synizesis; cf. 37 ēā, 151 ēō, 428 ēādem.

37. The scansion Syrācūsas (not found elsewhere) seems a further proof of non-Plautine origin. Brix, however, supports it by Merc. 846 amicitiā; Amph. 930 puḍicitiam. See Introd. 7. I. B. a.

MENAECHMI

38. surrupturn : see on Arg. 2.

39. The scansion Tā|renti (not found elsewhere) and the scansion Tārēn|ti with hiatus are both unsatisfactory.

40, 41. immutat . . . ita . . . dilexit : loose paratactic construction for ita dilexit ut immutauerit ; cf. 94-5, 102-3.

40. huic : disyllabic ; Prologus is speaking as if he were in Syracuse ; cf. 49.

huic . . . alteri = illum alterum of 28, i. e. Sosicles.

41. illum . . . alterum : the original Menaechmus (I), now of Epidamnus.

42. illius : Menaechmus. illi : Sosicles. The pronouns are very clumsily used.

nomen indit illi . . . Menaechmo : i. e. calls him Men. Menaechmum might also have been used ; but cf. 1068. The phrase nomen indere is used frequently by Livy, e. g. xxi. 31. 4 mediis campis Insulae nomen inditum.

45-6. Cf. 10 and 22. illius and illum are to be taken as referring to the puer surruptus.

46. clamore . . . flagitarius : i. e. 'cried' as missing by the public crier (praeco), who served the purpose of our advertisement columns and police notices. Edd. quote Petron. 92 iuuenis non minore clamoris indignatione Gitona flagitabat. Petron. 97 gives an actual notice of the sort ; the missing boy is described, and a reward offered for information. Brix suggests that there is a play on the other meaning of flagitarius, 'dunned by creditors' ; but to take it thus necessitates referring illius and illum to the auos. The archaic passive infinitive form in -ier is fairly common in Plautus and Terence ; cf. 913, 1005.

uidi : used of senses other than sight ; cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 490 mugire uidebis Sub pedibus terram et descendere montibus ornos ; Catull. lxii. 9 canent quod uisere par est.

47. mox : when the actual play comes on. iam nunc : now already (but nunciam = 'at once, immediately' ; cf. 1155).

48. This reiteration may be excused on the ground that it was necessary to impress upon the audience a fact without which the plot was unintelligible.

49. pedibus : in the double sense of 'feet' and 'feet in verse' ; for a superior joke of the same kind cf. Shakespeare, As You Like It, iii. 2 : Ros. 'Some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear. Cel. That's no matter : the feet might bear the verses. Ros. Aye, but the feet were lame,' &c.

50. examussim : this adverb is found in Plautus and Appuleius only. The amussis was a plank used probably like the modern plank and plumb-line.

disputem : ordinary meaning 'discuss pros and cons' not applicable here ; perhaps used in sense 'make it clear on all sides' ; cf. original meaning of puto ('to prune') and putus.

51. Epidamnum: the accusative is natural, as he must go to Epidamnus before he can transact anyone's business there. It is an accusative of motion used pregnantly with a verb of rest.

52. Scan uelit; Plautus often retains the original long quantity of verb-inflections in -s, -t, and -or, when the syllable bears ictus. See Intro. 7. III. a, and cf. 759 aduenit, 921, 956.

53. ita ut det: limitative, 'but not forgetting to give me the wherewithal'.

54. egerit: the force of the tense here and in 55 is 'he will find he has been acting foolishly'; cf. 661.

55. magi maiores: for the double comparative cf. 978 magi multo patior facilius uerba. For the whole of this passage cf. Poen. prol. 79-82. Teuffel regards 51-6 as an alternative passage to 49-50. Perhaps there is here a punning reference to the sound of the name Epidamnum (ἐπὶ δάμνυμ); cf. note on 263.

56. illuc . . . unde abii: a repetition (or alternative) of 49: the Prologue returns in imagination to Epidamnus, where he remains till the end (uno asto in loco; cf. 72-6). The words are also figurative; cf. Hor. Sat. i. 1. 108.

59. ei: a monosyllable; cf. 61 ēique, 874 ēi.

ei . . . nihil erat by anacoluthon after Epidamniensis ill' 57. The carelessness of colloquial speech is imitated, cf. 64-5; Poen. 659 tu, sei te di amant, agere tuam rem occasiost; Shakespeare, Henry V, iv. 3. 35: 'he which hath no stomach to this fight, Let him depart'.

nisi diuitiae: which he loved with a father's love.

60. surrupitium: see on Arg. 2.

62. heredem fecit: i. e. gave him his inheritance by dying (not 'made him his heir', that being implied in adoptat . . . sibi filium 60-1). Cf. Poen. 77, and see 477 note.

63. ut ibat, 'as he was going'. ut . . . pluerat, 'when (after) it had been raining'. The quantity pluerat is justified by a passage in Varro (L. L. ix. 104), where he states that in his day correct pronunciation distinguished the perfect of words like pluo, luo, from the present by a lengthening of the u. The original form of the word was plouo (cf. Gk. πλέω); Priscian quotes perf. pluuit from Livy.

64, 65. ingressus . . . raptori: for the anacoluthon cf. 57-9.

raptori pueri = ei qui puerum rapuerat; see note on 274.

66. malam crucem: this phrase, like mala res, is regarded as a single word, and so can be qualified by an adjective. See also 328 note.

67. See App. Crit. and Intro. 7. IV. C. b, p. 53.

68. illic: at Epidamnus.

69. habet: simple verb for frequentative habitat; cf. Aul. 5 qui nunc hic habet, Trin. 193, 390, and our old-fashioned 'keeps'.

72. haec: pointing to the houses represented on the stage.

74. familiae: the households of the stage houses; explained by the lines following. There is also an allusion to the theatrical meaning of familia, troupe of actors (also grex).

MENAECHMI

75-6. The stock characters of a comoedia palliata; cf. a similar list Ter. Heaut. prol. 37-9. The first foot of 75 is a proceleusmatic. A line is missing from the end of the Prologue.

77. At the back of the stage stood the houses of Menaechmus I (L) and Erotium (R). Peniculus, as coming from the town, enters from the spectators' right and stands in front of Menaechmus's house. For the speech that follows cf. the speech of the parasite Ergasilus, Capt. 69 seq.

Peniculo: for the case cf. 43, 1068; Capt. 69.

78. quia . . . detergeo: cf. our phrase 'make a clean sweep of everything on the table'. The Romans did not use tablecloths, but after a meal the tables were wiped with a gausape: cf. Hor. Sat. ii. 8. 10 puer alte cinctus acernam Gausape purpureo mensam pertersit. The peniculus also (see Personae: note on Peniculus) was used for wiping furniture.

79. captiuos: prisoners of war)(serui, slaves born to that condition.

catenis: chains by which they were fastened to a wall)(compedes, fetters fastening the feet together, but allowing some freedom of movement. Cf. 84-5.

81. nimi simply = 'very', as usually in Plautus and Terence; cf. 94, 696; Aul. 208 nimi male timui. Scan mēā by synizesis; cf. 200 meo.

82. Scan nām hōmīni; see Introd. 7. IV. A. b. ii, and cf. 98, 292, 675.

ad malum . . . malum: chains on the top of captivity.

85. tum, 'moreover'; the compediti are a different class from the catenati, cf. 79-80.

anum: iron rings surrounded the victim's legs, which were fastened together by a chain or rod connecting the rings. Two MSS. read compediti ianum (the rest compediti anum with faulty hiatus); hence present reading. Havet had already proposed ī anum.

86. clauom: the rivet fastening together the ends of an iron bar bent into a ring for use as a fetter (cf. last note).

ae: pronominal subject attracted to gender of complement; 'this (way of treating slaves)'.
 87. uoles: generalizing future.

88. esca . . . uinciri: cf. our expression 'tethered by the tooth'.

89. Scan āpūd mēnsam; see Introd. 7. I. B. b. i. There is doubtful hiatus at the caesura; see App. Crit.

deliges: jussive; cf. Amph. 928 reddas meas (res).

90. edit: cf. 249; this and other subjunctives in -im were originally optatives (e. g. sim = εἶμι).

91. The hiatus at the caesura is perhaps admissible if we allow for the original ablative termination in -d. But see App. Crit.

ad fatim used thus adverbially implies the existence of a nom. fatīs (satietas); it is also used as an indeclinable substantive, adfatum (= satis), cf. 457; Mil. 980 tibi diuitiarum adfatimist.

92. numquam . . . fugiet: for the sentiment cf. Hor. Sat. i. 5. 67 rogabat Denique cur umquam fugisset, cui satis una Farris libra foret.

capital = facinus capitale. There should be a heavy stop either at fecerit, or (better) at fugiet.

93. dum = quamdiu. Scan dūm eo; see Introd. 7. IV. A. b. i and cf. 413 nūm istaec, 449 dūm hiato.

94. Scan ita istaec; see Introd. 7. I. C. b, and cf. 265, 335, 528, &c.

lenta, 'elastic'; cf. next line.

95. extendas: this use of 2 pers. sing. of subjunctive in general statements is found elsewhere in Plautus, as well as in later writers; cf. Bacch. 63 ubi periculum facias aculeata sunt. The mood corresponds to Gk. indefinite subj. with äv. See also notes on 103, 502.

96. nam introduces the particular application of his remarks.

quo: adverb of place substituted for personal relative: so unde? for a quo? 783. As an alternative, eo in this line may be taken as adverb, and eo in 97 as main verb of 96-7.

97. iudicatus: an insolvent debtor was handed over by the praetor to his creditor, who kept him in his house in a state of semi-slavery. In this case Peniculus has adjudged himself to Menaechmus; he goes willingly and hugs his chains (i.e. uincta escaria). Cf. Asin. 937 iudicatum me uxor abducit domum.

98. alit . . . educat: Nonius distinguishes thus: alere est uictu temporali sustentare, educare autem ad satietatem perpetuam educere. Cf. 905.

99. facit, 'practises'.

100. ita est = huiusmodi est: colloquial use of adverb with esse; cf. 258, and see note on 485.

ipsus: this form, relatively to ipse, is more frequent in Plautus than in Terence. Both ipse and ipsus are composed of the demonstrative is strengthened by the particle -pe (seen in quippe), and the pronoun-stem so-, which appears in the one case as -sē (= -sō), and in the other as -sus (= -sos), these suffixes corresponding in form to the Gk. ō and ōs respectively.

escae maxumae: descriptive genitive qualifying ipsus; 'himself a hearty eater'; cf. Hor. Od. i. 36. 13 multi Damalis meri.

101. Cerialis, 'worthy of Ceres' festival'. The Cerialia took place in the Circus and lasted from the 12th to the 19th of April; the celebrations included heavy banquets.

102. struices . . . patinarias: probably pyramids of various dishes arranged on stands. Cf. Massinger, City Madam, ii. 1: 'The dishes were ranged one upon another As woodmongers do billets.'

MENAECCHI

103. standumst: usually a guest could help himself without rising from the lectus.

petas: for this mood, parallel to Gk. subjunctive with ἐάν, cf. 95, and see Sonnenschein's Rudens, note on 1021. Tr. 'should you seek'.

104. iam . . . multos: cf. Asin. 428 triduum hoc unum; Rud. 137, &c., and our colloquial, 'I haven't been there these three days'.

105. domi domitus sum: this, the MSS. reading, is taken to mean, 'I've been living the domestic life at home', domitus being regarded as a comic fourth-conjugation form such as we find in Mil. 34 ne dentes dentiant. On the analogy, however, of Capt. 84 ruri rurant, and of a deponent form ruror quoted by Nonius from Varro, Lindsay suggests that a first-conjugation deponent form, domatus, should perhaps be read here: a copyist would be likely to change it to the more familiar-looking domitus. Vahlen suggests dominatus sum, 'I have been playing the host'.

cum careis meis would naturally mean 'with my dear ones' (i. e. children, &c.); but Peniculus explains his use of the phrase in the next line.

106. To him everything he has to pay for out of his own pocket is dear; cf. Aul. 374-6, where the miser Euclio complains of the dearness of provisions.

107. id quoque iam, 'then there's this further trouble'; id stands in anticipatory apposition to the whole sentence; so with other neuter pronouns, e. g. istuc ('by the by') 536; this is the real construction of utrum used as a disjunctive interrogative particle.

instruontur: his dainty dishes are drawn up like a regiment; the table is the parasite's battlefield. The metaphor is continued in deserunt. Cf. Capt. 158-64, where various dishes are compared to various kinds of troops.

109. Menaechmum: thus the character is introduced to the audience; cf. 180, 218, &c.

eccum stands for ecce + hum (i. e. hunc without the demonstrative suffix -ce); for the construction see on 179-80.

110 seq. Menaechmus's wife follows him to the door to see where he is going, but is soon (127) driven indoors by his abuse. For the metres 110-34 see Schema Metrorum, p. 213; and on the metres of Cantica generally see Introd. 6. II. F, p. 33.

110. sies: this form of the subjunctive was originally an optative (esies = εἴης, &c.). The influence of the forms simus, sitis (= εἴμεν, εἴρε), led to the gradual disappearance of the e in siem, -es, -et, -ent. See Lindsay's Captivi, 193 note.

inposque animi, 'unable to control your feelings'; like conpos, inpos is followed by the genitive of respect. Cf. the late use of inpotens.

111. esse odio supplies the passive, as odio habere the present active, of odisse.

uideas: subj. by attraction to the mood of habeas; see 556 note

113. faxis, faxo: this 'future-perfect' form was originally an S-Aorist Subjunctive. While Plautus uses faxero absolutely, he uses faxo usually with another verb following, either syntactically in the subjunctive with ut or (as here and 539-40, 644) alone, or paratactically in the future indicative, as 326 madebunt faxo. It has the sense 'I'll see to it that' or 'I'll warrant that'. Scan faxis faxo.

uidua: used not only of a widow, but of a woman divorced, or separated from her husband (e.g. of Penelope, Stich. 2^a).

114. Scan fūrās īre; cf. Introd. 7. I. B. b. ii, p. 43.

115. Scan quō ego ēām: two short syllables are substituted for one long at the beginning of the cretic. On quō see Introd. 7. IV. A. a. i, p. 51, and cf. 618, 789.

116. quid feram, 'what I'm bringing in'; this and the next question she asks on his return.

117. portitorem: a portitor combined the functions of a custom-house officer and a modern immigrant official; like Men.'s wife, he pried into everything and asked too many questions. For the metaphor cf. Asin. 159, 241; Cic. ad Att. ii. 16. 4.

119. In this trochaic line the first foot is a proceleusmatic, the second an anapaest.

nimium . . . delicatam, 'I have spoilt you'.

ut facturus, sc. sum, 'how I'm going to act': sum (est, &c.) is sometimes omitted in tenses where it is an auxiliary; cf. Asin. 271 hanc quidem quam nactus praedam; Amph. 964. In Plautus the indicative is frequently found in an indirect question-clause; cf. 207 note, and see Lindsay, Syntax of Plautus, p. 66.

121. lanam: for making clothes. As in the mediaeval English family, all clothes were made at home.

aurum: trinkets.

uestem: curtains, rugs, coverlets.

purpuram: for trimmings.

quicquam: probably adverbial.

122. malo: caueo is used also with ab and ablative. 151, and with accusative of neuter pronoun, 265, 786.

si sapis: used often with fut. or imperative in the apodosis: sometimes si sapiēs is found, e.g. Rud. 1391. For the sentiment Brix compares Eur. Androm. 938 τί γάρ μ' ἐχρήν πόσων φυλάσσειν, ἢ παρῆν ὅσων ἔδει;

123. atque adeo, 'and further'; see on 21.

serues = obserues; so in 216.

ob eam industriam: ironically, 'to reward your zeal'; cf. 791, Merc. 1026.

124. condicam: used of inviting oneself to dinner: cf. Cic. ad Fam. i. 9. 20 cum mihi condixisset, cenauit apud me. As it was at Erotium's house that Men. intended to dine, and ducere scortum is a common phrase for indulging in illicit passion (Most. 36, 960: Truc. 678, &c.), Acidalius rearranges the line hodie ducam scortum atque aliquo ad cenam condicam foras.

MENAECHMI

125. loquitur : i. e. male loquitur.

126. Scan prōfēctō : me is not to be elided, but does not bear ictus.

127. euax ! a cry of exultation : cf. Bacch. 247, 725.

128. amatores mariti, 'roving husbands'; amator 'a gallant')(amans, one honourably in love. Men. thinks he ought to receive a testimonial for striking such a blow for the emancipation of husbands.

129. pugnaui refers to his theft of the palla as well as to his verbal victory.

130. hanc . . . pallam : cf. Asin. 885. He lifts a corner of his pallium and shows that he is wearing his wife's palla underneath it. The palla was the ordinary out-door garment ('mantle') of a Roman lady: the pallium was worn by actors representing men in a comoedia palliata. Cf. 658.

131. sic, 'as I have done'.

132. fabre, 'in a workmanlike manner', i. e. 'it's a masterpiece': cf. Cas. 861 haec (fallacia) est fabre facta ab nobis.

133. meo malo : because he originally paid for it. It is lepidum, &c., to throw away money.

damnum : i. e. Erotium ; cf. 137, where he calls Peniculus his Commoditas ; so Curc. 678 sed eccum lenonem, incedit, thesaurum meum.

deferetur : this verb is often used of gifts to a mistress ; so too degero. Cf. 173, 508 note.

134. nostrum . . . socium : genitive ; cf. Pseud. 678 doctum hominum.

salute : modal abl., as Rud. 910 : with cum in Merc. 811 (rediit cum quidem salute familiarum maxuma).

136. insidias . . . praesidium : continuing the military metaphor of 134-5. For the pun cf. 191 induuiae . . . exuuiae.

137. mea Commoditas, &c. : i. e. qui commode et opportune aduenis ; tr. 'My Suitability, my Seasonableness'. A fashionable and affected mode of speech, similar to that practised by the Euphuists of Elizabeth's day ; e. g. Piercy Shafton in Scott's Monastery, c. xv. 'Be henceforth named, for example, my Protection, and let me be your Affability.'

138. quid agis ? mode of salutation, cf. Hor. Sat. i. 9. 4 quid agis, dulcissime rerum ? Pen. takes the question literally ; cf. Most. 719 SI. quid agis ? TR. hominem optimum teneo.

genium, 'guardian angel', a title conferred by parasites on their patrons, cf. Capl. 879.

139. per tempus = opportunely.

140. commoditatis . . . articulos : lit. the smallest divisions of the suitable time ; i. e. how to hit the suitable moment to a nicety ; cf. Cic. pro Quinct. 5. 19 in ipso articulo temporis ; Ter. Ad. 229 in ipso articulo simply. Warner here translates: 'I know how to come alwaies in the nicke'. (On Warner's Translation see Introd. 5.)

141. facinus luculentum: Men. means himself dressed in the palla, but Pen.'s mind is running on culinary matters, of which he professes (142) to be a connoisseur.

142. reliquias: i.e. of the supposed dish.

143. enumquam (= en + umquam): used by Plautus and Terence to introduce a rhetorical question; cf. 925.

tabulam . . . pariete: a picture hanging on a wall, not a fresco.

144. ubi . . . raperet: subj. shows that no particular picture was meant. For this generalizing subjunctive in a relative clause cf. Rud. 313-15 ecquem . . . uidistis . . . qui duceret, ibid. 320.

Catameitum: this was the form into which Ganymedes was corrupted in popular Latin speech; so Adoneus for Adonis: for similar corruptions of Greek names cf. Proserpina for Persephone, alcedo for alcyon, &c. Later catameitus becomes a common noun = an effeminate or depraved person; cf. Cic. Phil. ii. 31. 77.

145. Scan séd quid istae; cf. 391 quís iste ést, 791 atque ab is'tanc.

146. ecquid . . . similiter? 'don't I make a perfect resemblance?' ecquid is often used by Plautus adverbially, merely as an interrogative particle; cf. 163. For adsimulo used absolutely cf. Ter. Phorm. 210 quid si adsimulo? satinest? and for similiter redundant cf. Phaedr. v. 5. 34 scurram multo similis imitatum. Men. spreads out his pallium like an eagle's wings and displays the effeminate garb beneath.

Scan quí istic ést | órnatus; cf. 234 sex'tus ést póst'quam, 889, Introd. 7. I. B. b. i, p. 43; but see App. Crit.

147. There is hiatus at change of speakers; or read med. Cf. 299, Introd. 7. IV. D. b, E, pp. 55-6.

Peniculus is unwilling to pay the desired compliment till he is satisfied that a dinner is forthcoming; cf. 150.

149. audes, 'won't you be good enough . . .?' polite use: cf. 697 note.

de tuo: without prompting.

150. qua gratia = cuius rei gratia.

151. aps te caueo: cf. Pers. 316 caue sis a cornu; for other constructions of caueo see 122 note.

caueo cautius: probably a popular turn of expression like propere properare, &c.

152. With the reading in the text this line is to be taken as a continuation of Men.'s perge, (perge), 150. He is going to say 'Come along, do (to a place where we may celebrate a wake over the departed day)', but the Parasite, thinking that by perge he means 'Go on praising me', interrupts him, 150-1. The scansion at que hūm (on which see Introd. p. 31, note 3, and 7. I. B. b. i) is doubtful; but this arrangement gives better force than to regard the line as independent of perge, 150, and to read with Onions habemus, hunc, or with Vahlen clam uxorem est ubi sepulcrum habeam atque hunc comburam diem (which throws a faulty emphasis on atque). See App. Crit. The metaphor is from a corpse about to be laid on the pyre and interred (the cena being taken in the evening, when the day was dead); it is continued in 153 incendo rogam and 154 ad umbilicum . . . mortuos; perhaps there is a reference to the nouendialis cena, or 'funeral baked meats'. Cf. too the opening of Gray's Elegy. Havet, who agrees with Ussing in regarding sepulchrum as a corruption due to the words following, proposes to read clam uxorem ubi sit pulchre habemus qui hunc c. d.; 'we have the means of celebrating the day's wake where we can enjoy ourselves,' &c. An objection to this is that the order is confused.

153. aequom oras: possibly 'that's a reasonable request', in reference to perge, 150; more probably the meaning is, as usually in Plautus, 'what you say is reasonable'; cf. Most. 682; Pers. 587.

incendo: the pres. indic. 'deliberative' is usual after quam mox in colloquial Latin; cf. Bacch. 775, Mil. 1406 quam mox seco? and, in English, phrases like 'How soon do we start?'

154-5. ad umbilicum . . . mortuos: i. e. it is already afternoon. The use of umbilicus (as of ὀμφαλός in Gk.) is common in the sense of 'middle'; it is imitated by Milton, Comus 520: 'Within the navel of this hideous wood.' Havet, regarding the transference of this meaning of umbilicus from the sphere of space to that of time as impossible (though a similar confusion occurs below, 177, by way of a joke), suggests that here, as in Pliny, N. H. vi, § 212, the word refers to the gnomon of a sundial. He shows that the first correctly orientated sundial easily accessible to the public of Rome was one which was set up by Q. Marcius Philippus in 164 B.C., twenty years after Plautus's death, and which aroused great popular interest (cf. Pliny, N. H. vii, §§ 213-14). He conjectures that this line is a topical 'gag' introduced by some actor or magister gregis during a performance of the play at this date, and that the meaning is 'The day's half-gone already by the (new) sundial'. This is ingenious, but far-fetched; nor does it account for the combination ad umbilicum . . . mortuos. A more probable explanation is that the expression is a metaphor from that kind of death in which cessation of vitality proceeds from the feet upwards; cf. Plato, Phaedo 117 E-118 A, esp. καὶ αὐτὸς ἤπτετο καὶ εἶπεν ὅτι, ἐπειδὴν πρὸς τῇ καρδίᾳ γένηται (sc. τὸ ψῦχος) αὐτῷ, τότε οἰχίσεται, and Mistress Quickly's description of Falstaff's death (Henry V. II. iii. 26): 'Then I felt to his knees, and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.'

156. Note the hiatus at change of speakers, here coinciding with the diaeresis, as frequently, e. g. 379, 384, 650, 868, 937, 1075, 1077, 1094.

per solum: probably 'through the sole of my foot'; cf. Poen. 571 at edepol nos tibi in lumbos linguam atque oculos in solum, a retort to the wish deciderint femina uobis in talos uelim. Edd. who prefer the rendering 'through its socket' compare Stat. Theb. i. 55 manibusque cruentis Pulsat inane solum, where, however, solum is now generally taken as = 'the ground'.

158. licet gives assent to a request; cf. 213, 224, and Rud. 1212-26, where it occurs in this sense fifteen times in succession.

159. leonino cauo: cf. Ter. Phorm. 744 conclusam hic habeo uxorem saeuam.

160. eu edepol: eu in conjunction with edepol, hercle, ecaster, &c. (not to be confused with eu! = Gk. εὖ, cf. 174, 176), expresses surprise or indignation, and at the same time introduces an assertion; cf. 316, 908. For hiatus after interjections cf. 316, 640, 872.

ne: here an affirmative particle (= Gk. ναί); see 604 note.

esses: potential; either 'you would (now) be . . .' (sc. si agitator esses), cf. Cas. 811; or, 'you would have made . . .', imperf. for pluperf. as in Mil. 28-30.

agitor: in the chariot-races at the ludi Circenses a driver frequently looked behind him to see whether the next man was pressing him.

161. quidum? -dum strengthens the interrogative adverb; cf. its use as an enclitic attached to imperatives, e.g. agedum, tacedum, cedodum; cf. 265, 348, 386. For qui (adverbial ablative) interrogative cf. 396, (indirect) 337; exclamatory, 428, 451.

162. quid ais? 'look here', a formula used to draw attention to a new point, cf. 914; so audin 310. Peniculus takes the question literally; cf. 138.

enim, 'indeed', 'truly'; here, as usually in Plautus and Terence, an asseverative particle, = classical enimvero; cf. Aul. 500; Most. 551, &c.

aio . . . nego, 'say Yes and No to'; cf. 634, and Ter. Eun. 252, where the parasite Gnatho says negat quis: nego; ait: aio. Nego, though assimilated to the first conjugation, is probably nec + aio.

164-5. Niemeyer fills the lacuna thus: facere coniecturam (tecum? PE. Eloquent recte tibi Cocti quid sit quasi coquorum) captum sit collegium; 'I'll tell you of what sort the dish is just as correctly as if you had called in a whole Board of Cookery.' This is not justified by the traces in A (see App. Crit.), but makes good sense; de odore would naturally suggest cooking to Pen.

165. captum: probably used here as in the phrase iudicem (arbitrum) capere.

166. quid olet? Ussing connects these words paratactically with odorare.

apstines? either transitive (sc. nasum), or intr. (sc. odorari).

168. nasum: archaic form of nasus, common in Plautus, e.g.

Amph. 444. There is considerable confusion in Latin between masc. and neut. o-stems; as a rule the neuter gender is confined to things without life, but names of parts of the body fluctuate between masc. and neut.; in popular speech, as reflected by Plautus, dorsus, collus, tergus (m.) appear for the corresponding classical neuter forms. Generally speaking, in vulgar and late Latin the masculine tends to oust the neuter in o-stems.

inlutili: the last part of the word is connected with the supine-stem of lauo.

169. lepide ut fastidis, 'how divertingly you turn up your nose'; the phrase = lepidum (est) ut f., the adjective being attracted by the adverb ut; cf. such Gk. phrases as θαυμασιῶς ὥς, and Mil. 763 bonu' bene ut malos descripsit mores.

decet, sc. fastidire; 'naturally'; explained by furtum, &c., 170.

170. furtum, scortum: a jingle, scortum being pronounced scurtum; cf. Pseud. 791 furinum est forum; Truc. 773 cura cor. Before liquids and nasals there was a tendency to pronounce o as u, especially in popular speech; Priscian (i. 26. 35 H) remarks that in rustic speech fontes, frondes were pronounced funtēs, frundēs; so Gk. κόθορνος, τόπος become in Latin cothurnus, turnus.

171-2. These lines are both assigned to Men. by Niemeyer, who completes them thus: tibi fuan(t qu)acqu(omque me uis: ita edepol recte omnia) Elocutu's. nam (ab uxore pallam surrupui mea). Certainly some line similar to the latter is needed to explain furtum, just as 173, 174, explain respectively scortum and prandium.

173. hanc: he points to Erotium's house (R.).

174. eu! here simply = Greek εὐ, 'bravo!'; as in 176, if read there extra metrum: for the ordinary Plautine meaning see note on 160, and cf. Epid. 72 eu edepol res turbulentas.

175. inde: i.e. from the end of the prandium.

diurnam stellam: Lucifer, φωσφόρος, the morning star (= Hesperus, the evening star).

176. expedite, 'plainly'.

ferio: colloquial use of pres. indic. for deliberative subj. with iam in questions; cf. Mil. Glor. 1400 iamne ego in hominem inuolo? So with quam mox; cf. 153.

177. uel mane etiam, 'or rather wait a bit yet'.

mille passum: mille is always a substantive in Plautus; passum = passuum. 'You've delayed the flagon by a mile,' i.e. it would have been a mile nearer if you had not said 'mane'. Cf. Truc. 334 tute tibi mille passum peperisti morae.

178. Samiae: i.e. fragile like earthenware. Samian ware was the commonest crockery used at Rome; cf. Stich. 694; Cic. pro Mur. 36, 75.

179-80. eapse: original nom. sing. fem. of ipse (= is-pse); cf. 772 eampse; Most. 346 eumpse; Curc. 538 eopse, &c. For shortening of the final syllable of mine see Introd. 7. I. A. a. ii, and cf. 225 rēdi, 416 tācē, 517 iūbē.

eccam: for the formation of this word see 109 note. Eccum, -am, eccillum, -am, can, as here, be placed parenthetically in a sentence without affecting the construction; cf. 219, 567, 772. Bacch. 611 Mnesilochus eccum maestus progreditur foras. When a noun without a verb follows one of these words, it is normally put into the accusative; cf. 565, 898: Mil. Glor. 1216 ecum praeste militem.

179-81. solem uides satin ut occaecatust: uides is Leo's correction of MSS. uideo. For the late position of the interrogative particle cf. Curc. 18 et heri cenauistine? Solem, logically the subject of the dependent clause, becomes grammatically the object of the main (cf. Greek οἰδά σε θάρσ εἶ); this 'anticipatory' construction is common in Plautus, cf. 246, 1083. Thus the sentence = uiden ut ('how') sol satis occaecatust . . . ? For the indic. in a dependent interrogative clause cf. 207. Acidalius's suggestion solem uide—satin ut occaecatust . . . ? can be paralleled by Stich. 270-1 hoc uide. Satin ut facete, atque ex pictura astitit? where satin ut (= satin est ut) has the force of a very surprised nonne; cf. Mil. 1134 satine ut Commoditas usquequaque me adiuvat! So satin alone frequently stands for nonne or -ne; 522, Mil. 481 satin abiit ille?

181. huius in the text should be written huius to indicate scansion: see page 47, note 2.

182. extra numerum es, 'you don't count'; lit. 'you're not reckoned in'; she means that he is not worth noticing, or that he is de trop; but he contrives to turn it into a compliment 183. In military language extra numerum = not assigned to any definite position; cf. Verg. Aen. vi. 545 explebo numerum.

183. adscriptiuis . . . ad legionem: explains aliis. These were unarmed reserves, who took the place and arms of armed legionaries that fell in a battle. They were, of course, picked troops. Pen. answers Erotium's sneer by saying: 'That's also the case of the picked reserves attached to a legion.' There is a hint, too, that he is ready to take Men.'s place with Erotium if Men. is rendered hors de combat (by the bottle). Niemeyer (Brix⁵), completely misunderstanding the force of Pen.'s remark, and imagining that he is protesting against being considered an adscriptiuus, gives 183-8 to Pen., and alters 188 (embodying a correction of Schöll) to tuae legionis adiudicato, ut cum uiro (Schöll: eo) hanc noctem sies. Scan īdem īstuc; cf. 184 ēgo īstic, 375 ēgo īstaēc, 622 mīhi īstūc, 651, 782, &c.

184-5. istic = apud te: for redundancy cf. Cas. 546 isti apud uos.

iussi: there is no need to adopt Acidalius's correction iussim: we may suppose that the question had been mooted before. There is no inconsistency with 174; the proelium is a drinking-match, different from the prandium, which is not mentioned till 208. At the same time proelium is put παρὰ προσδοκίαν for prandium; cf. potabimus, cantharo, and hanc noctem sies in the next three lines.

187. For uter, relative, cf. 1085; Aul. 327.

cantharo: abl. of instrument.

188. Scan tua est by synizesis; there is hiatus at both pauses; cf. Introd. 7. IV. D. c, d. For cum utro see Introd. 7. IV. A. b. i.

tua est legio, 'he is your regular force'; Men., who is confident of victory, does not hanker after the barren glory of an adscriptiuus.

cum utro: i.e. with the legio or the adscriptiuus. For another reading and interpretation see on 183.

190. interim = 'meanwhile', i.e. 'yet all the same', as Fr. cependant. Erotium catches sight of the palla. Niemeyer gives this line to Pen., explaining that he purposely pulls aside Men.'s pallium to prejudice him with Erotium.

nequis quin = facere non potes quin. The connexion is 'yet you're so fond of her that you must needs', &c.

aliquid: for the acc. cf. 512, 514-15.

191. induuiae: a word invented to contrast with exuuiae; for the style of joke cf. 136.

rosa: cf. Asin. 664 mea rosa, mi anime.

192. superas . . . ut: so in prose uincere ut; tr. 'you easily obtain a higher place on my list'.

quisquam qui impetrant: i.e. any of her other visitors. For plural verb with singular indefinite pronoun cf. Pers. 55-6 numquam quisquam . . . fuit quin parasitando pauperint uentris suos; Epid. 399 exite huc aliquis. See also Quintil. ix. 3.

193. tantisper . . . dum, 'only so long as'. This line and the next are spoken aside.

194-5. si amabas: the indicative is emphatic; 'if you really loved him'. In form the clause is an open condition in the past; cf. similar clauses with jussive subj. in apodosis, Pseud. 286, Truc. 748.

oportebat . . . abreptum, sc. esse: cf. 995; Aul. 754 'non attactam oportuit'; Ter. Ad. 214 morem gestum oportuit. This omission is invariable in Terence, and usual in Plautus. Scan iām oport|ebat; cf. iām ego, 808. For general sense of this line cf. Pseud. 286 si amabas, inuenires mutuom (= inuenire oportebat; cf. 611 comesses).

mordicus: i.e. with kisses; cf. Catull. viii. 18 quem basiabis? cui labella mordebis?

196. hoc: the pallium, which he has now taken off preparatory to divesting himself of the palla.

facere: here used in religious sense, 'offer (in sacrifice)', like Greek πέλειν. Men. compares himself to a victorious general who, in accordance with a vow, dedicates a choice portion of his spoil (exuuiae) to a deity.

197. cédō, 'give (it) here'; cedo is an imperative of dō as originally conjugated, with the demonstrative particle -ce (cf. hunc = hunc-ce, ecce, &c.) prefixed. Cf. 265, 544. The plural is found in the contracted form cette.

sic, 'just as you are', (cf. 351) explained by cum palla; Men. still had it on. Peniculus is reminded by his patron's appearance of effeminate stage dances, which were performed in the palla; cf. 513.

198. *salta*bo? the future indicative is used to echo Pen.'s salta because (1) the imperative has no first person, (2) all imperatives refer to the future.

sanus . . . non es: cf. Cicero's delightfully pompous Nemo fere saltat sobrius nisi forte insanit (pro Mur. 6). Undignified conduct was all but criminal in the eyes of a Roman.

an tu magis? sc. insanis; hinting at his extravagance.

199. saltas: present, as we say 'if you're not (for) dancing'.

200. ab Hippolyta: the queen of the Amazons, whose famous girdle was coveted by Admetes, daughter of Eurystheus. Hercules was ordered to procure this girdle as his sixth (or ninth) labour; cf. Epid. 179.

haud: most edd. transfer this word to the next line, reading Hercules haud aequē, to avoid hiatus after umquam; needlessly, as hiatus is possible at diaeresis.

200-1. haud . . . umquam: emphatic negative; cf. 533. Schöll assigns meo . . . periculo to Pen. (a parasite's flattery); but this makes 202 rather abrupt.

202. una uiuis: stronger than es; 'you're the only girl alive who', &c. For indic. with quando, causal, cf. 422.

morigera moribus: colloquial figure; cf. animo . . . animatos, 203. Scan mēis.

203. hoc animo: i. e. this yielding disposition.

decēt: original length of final syllable retained owing to ictus; cf. 52 uelit, &c.

204. qui . . . properent: sneeringly, 'yes, such as . . .'. This line and 206 are asides.

205. minis: the Attic (silver) mina = 100 drachmae, about £3 15s.

anno: here 'a year ago'; cf. Amph. 91.

206. ut ratio redditur, 'on your own showing', lit. 'according as the account (i. e. of profit and loss) is given (by you)'.

207. quid uolo: indirect questions in Plautus are as often paratactic (with indic.) as syntactic (with subj.); cf. 181, 349, 425, 677, 685. Sometimes the two moods appear together, as Amph. 17 nunc quotius iussu uenio et quam ob rem uenerim dicam.

scio: she has a general idea of what he wants; see on 184-5.

209. scitamentorum, 'dainties'; from scitus (partic. of scisco)

MENAECCHI

in its secondary meaning of 'fine, delicate'. Niemeyer gives ll. 209-12 to Peniculus, as proceeding more naturally from him; but cf. 100 ipsus escae maxumae.

210. glandionidam . . . pernonidam: these comic patronymics, formed respectively from glandium (kernel of pork, i.e. a tasty bit from the neck) and perna (ham), are in apposition to the nouns suillam (pork; cf. agnina, sc. caro) and laridum (fat bacon). 'Pork from Braunston, bacon from Hampton' is a rough equivalent. For this obsolete form of jest cf. Pers. 702-5 (a list of names ending Quodsemelarrripides Nunquamerripides); common in Aristophanes, as Ach. 595-6 πολίτης χρηστός, οὐ σπουδαρχίδης, ἀλλ' ἐξ ὅτου περ ὁ πόλεμος, στρατωνίδης.

211. sincipitamenta: a by-form of sinciput (= semicaput), here 'pig's cheek'. Warner translates freely here, giving the equivalent Elizabethan dainties: 'Some oysters, a mary-bone pie or two, some artichockes, and potato rootes.'

212. madida: i.e. elixa, 'boiled'; cf. 326 madebunt faxo.

miluinam, sc. famem; the kite was a type of voracity; cf. Aul. 316; Rud. 1124, and the old Eng. saying 'As hungry as a gled'.

213. ecastor: a woman's oath, as mehercle was a man's, according to Gellius, xi. 6; cf. 372, 424, 614, 734.

214. iam of the immediate future, as 142, 174, 225.

216. sequere tu: addressed to Peniculus. Hiatus at change of speaker; cf. 380, 401.

217. hodie does not merely strengthen the negative (as it does e.g. Trin. 971), but is to be taken with perdam in the sense 'to-day of all days'.

ut te perdam: lit. 'on condition of losing you'; ut = Greek ὥστε or ἐφ' ὧτε. We should put it round the other way: 'I wouldn't lose you for all the riches of heaven.' Cf. Ter. Phorm. 165-6 ut mi liceat tam diu quod amo frui Iam depecisci morte cupio. At the end of this line exeunt Pen. and Men.

218. euocate: addressed to slaves in attendance.

intus, 'from within'.

Culindrum . . . coquom: from 275 uae tergo meo it is evident that Cylindrus is a slave; for the bearing of this fact on the authorship of the original see Intro. 3, pp. 13-14. Erotium evidently belonged to the upper crust of the demimonde.

219. The hiatus is justified by the break in the sense occurring in conjunction with the diaeresis. See Intro. 7. IV. D. c. i, p. 55.

nummos: in the absence of a qualifying adjective (e.g. aureus), nummus in Plautus usually means a didrachmon or two-drachma piece (about 1s. 6d.); cf. Truc. 561-2 where Cyamus calls quinque nummi the pars Herculeana (i.e. tenth) of a mina (= 100 drachmae). In accordance with the Greek setting of comoediae palliatae Roman coins are not mentioned in Plautus.

220. uide, 'provide'; colloquial use with prandium, uinum, &c.

as objects; cf. Cic. ad Att. v. 1. 3 anteceperat Staius ut prandium nobis uideret.

221. neque . . . supersit: with the punctuation in the text defat and supersit are impersonal, and neque . . . neque stand for neque . . . neque. By removal of the stop at satis, 220, the words may be taken as a continuation of the relative clause. Scan quōtūsmōdi by synzesis; cf. 577.

222. Scan ēgo et Menaechmus; see Introd. 7. I. A. b, and cf. 320 ān dē|sono, 468, 1009.

223. On the hiatus see Introd. 7. IV. F. To avoid it here Palmer reads hominum unus munus, and Muretus munus hominum. There is a similar joke in a fragment of Eubulus quoted by Athenaeus, i. 14.

munus . . . fungitur: the acc. with fungor and similar verbs is the older usage, and appears normally in Plautus with fungor (cf. Trin. 1), potior (dep.), and abutor: with fruor and utor he generally uses abl.

225. cocta sunt: sc. opsonia, or perhaps indeterminate; 'everything is as good as cooked'.

226. Menaechmus II (of Syracuse) and Messenio, as coming from the harbour, enter the stage R. (from the spectators' left), accompanied by sailors with baggage; cf. 350, 436. Men. II has left his conventional traveller's garb of chlamys and petasus at the ship, and appears like Men. I in pallium; hence confusion is easy. On these points cf. Introd. 4.

227. Scan quām quom ēx: this is permissible (cf. Introd. 7. IV. A. b. ii), though quam quando (Lactantius) and quam si quam (Brix) have been suggested.

228. terram conspiciunt: cf. the proverbial terram uidere expressive of relief after anxiety, as in Cic. de Sen. 19. 71 ut . . . quasi terram uidere uidear; so pro Mur. 2. 4.

non dicam dolo, 'I'll speak plainly', lit. 'without subterfuge'; cf. Trin. 90, 480.

229. quasi . . . uideas: quasi here = quam si, as elsewhere in Plautus; cf. Trin. 266 peius perit quasi saxo saliat; Aul. 231; so 1101 below tam quasi = tamquam si. The sense is 'It's a greater pleasure (to see land at all) than if you were to set eyes on the country that was (once) your own': a humorous exaggeration. P has quam si, which must be altered metri gratia; the first foot is a proceleusmatic. Most edd. read si, with the sense 'It would be a still greater pleasure, if you were to see your own country'; but in A the line begins with q . . . Perhaps quom (= ὅταν) is to be read.

fuerit: the tense implies that Men. has been so long a wanderer that he can hardly be said to have a patria. Cf. Vergil's fuimus Troes. Subjunctive possibly due to 'mood-attraction'.

230. Scan quāmbrem.

231. quasi mare: sc. circumit. When circumire is written as one word, -um is not elided; as Curc. 451 circūmīrier; cf. Hor. Sat. i. 9. 17 nīl opus est te Circumagi. When elision is required the parts are separated, as Ter. Andr. 202 circum itione; cf. Asin. 742.

MENAECHEMI

233. nam is here the interrogative particle, usually enclitic (as quidnam); cf. Aul. 42 nam qur, ibid. 44 nam qua . . . caussa.

quid modi . . . quaerere: cf. 244; Poen. 1212 facere occasio est; Aul. 341 ne operam perdas poscere. In Plautus the infinitive is still used to represent all cases of a verbal noun; in classical prose its oblique cases are supplied by the gerund. The latter usage is found in Plautus side by side with the former; cf. Asin. 882 quid modi, pater, amplexando facies; Epid. 271 nunc occasio est faciundi; Amph. 1014 sum defessus quaeritando.

234. Scan sex|tūs ēst pōst|quam ēi | rei ōpērām; rei forms a monosyllable and is elided; cf. 764^a.

235. Hispanos: probably not in the Greek original, as foreign ships were excluded from the Carthaginian sphere of influence before 241 B.C.; the name is introduced here for the sake of alliteration with Histros.

Hilurios = Illyrios.

236. mare superum: the Adriatic.

Graeciamque exoticam: the Greeks of Hellas gave the name of ἡ ἔξω Ἑλλάς to the Greek settlements in South Italy, which the Romans called Magna Graecia.

238. Scan sī ācum: hiatus with shortening of monosyllable bearing ictus; cf. 460, 751.

credo really belongs to the apodosis inuenisses; so hercle Trin. 457.

238-9. si . . . quaereres . . . inuenisses, sei appareret: according to Lindsay (Syntax of Plautus, p. 124), in a conditional sentence of this type, the verb of the protasis is in the imperfect if the protasis refers to the same time as the apodosis (in the pluperfect if it refers to a previous time); in the apodosis the imperfect and pluperfect are apparently used promiscuously; cf. 241, 460.

239. sei appareret: i.e. if it had been forthcoming at all; corresponding to sei uiueret 241.

242. ergo: i.e. because it is so probable.

istuc, 'your guess', object of faciat. certum and 243 scire are emphatic.

245. uiuos = quamdiu uiuam. Final -os after u was not written -us till the end of the Republican period; cf. 141 coquos. (See Lindsay's The Latin Language, p. 234.)

exsequi: sc. rem, 'to prosecute my search'.

246. illum: for this 'anticipatory' accusative see on solem uides, 179-80.

247. in scirpo, &c.: proverbial of fruitless labour. Warner tr. 'this is washing of a Blackamore'.

247-8. quin . . . redimus? used thus in its literal sense, quin (= qui nē, how not? why not?) with the first person pres. ind. has the force of a strong exhortation; with the second person pres. ind. (or, colloquially, imperative, cf. 416) it is equivalent to a command: cf. 382, 561, 639, 660.

248. nisi si: this pleonasm occurs in Cicero's Letters, e.g. ad Fam. xiv. 2. 1.

historiam: in the Greek sense, 'an account of our travels'. Cf. the title of Lucian's Ἀληθὴς Ἱστορία, which was a satire on marvellous travellers' tales.

249. It is best to take the first two clauses as protases, the last as apodosis; for the form cf. Juv. iii. 100 rides, maiore cachinno Concutitur. Onions seeks to avoid hiatus by reading si caueas m., but obviously the logical result should form the apodosis. Tr. 'If you do what you're told, and eat (be satisfied with) your allowance, you'll escape punishment'. Brix⁵ takes dictum facessas alone as a condition; in this case datum edis = 'you'll have your allowance'. The clauses may also all be taken as jussive: this suits caueas better ('avoid incurring punishment').

250. tuo . . . modo, 'your way of going on', referring to his remarks 247-8.

hoc takes up molestus ne sis.

em! 'there!' This interjection is the syncopated imperative of emo, as can be seen from its use to accompany a blow: em tibi, 'take that!' Cf. 1018. It must not be confused with hem, which expresses surprise or emotion. See Lindsay, Syntax of Pl., p. 137.

251-3 are spoken aside.

252. Note the alliteration.

253. Scan tāmēn nequē o, the second foot being a proceleusmatic; cf. 229, 977, 983.

255. uiaticati . . . aestiue, 'we are furnished in summer-fashion', i.e. lightly. In later Rome, people of fashion wore even lighter rings in summer; cf. Juvenal's sneer at the base-born Crispinus, who, to ape the great, uentilet aestiuom digitis sudantibus aurum Nec sufferre queat maioris pondera gemmae (i. 28-9). uiaticati is a comic formation, like patibulatum, Most. 56.

257. geminum dum quaeris qualifies nihil habebis: ubi nihil habebis qualifies gemes. Sense: 'you will have cause to lament, when you find you've spent everything in your search'. Note the play on words.

258. ita est: see on 485.

259. Scan uolūptārii; cf. Introd. 7. I. B. a, p. 43.

260. sycophantae, 'sharpers'.

palpatores, 'flatterers', i.e. 'confidence-tricksters'. Cf. Amph. 506-7.

262. Join nusquam . . . gentium. Warner translates this passage: 'This towne is as full of Ribaulds, Parasites, Drunkards, Catch-poles, Conycatchers, and Sycophants, as it can hold. Then for Curtizans, why here's the currantest stamp of them in the world.'

263-4. The name Epidamnus would most frequently be heard by a Roman in the accusative (e.g. in answer to the question quo is?). To Roman ears Epidamnus (ἐπὶ δαμννυμ) sounded unlucky; hence the joke here, and the actual change of the name to Dyrrhachium when the town became a Roman colony (cf. 32 note). A similar case was that of the Greek colony Μαλόεις, the name of which the Romans first corrupted (from the acc. Μαλόέντα) into Maleuentum, and then changed to Beneuentum.

265. istuc, 'what you say'. For the accus. cf. 786, Asin. 43 caue sis malam rem. See also note on 122.

266. quid eo ueis? sc. facere: eo is instrumental.

aps te metuo: lit. 'I have fears on your side', i.e. 'as regards you'.

de uerbis tuis, 'arising from', i.e. 'in consequence of'. Cf. 934, Cas. 415 de labore pectus tundit.

267. duis: an optative form (used as subjunctive) of the stem dū-, a weakened form of the stem dou-, a variant of dō-. Cf. 308 perduint (a true optative).

268. tu magis amator: magis means 'more than I am'; on amator cf. 128. MSS. of the P group read tu magnus amator (cf. 259 potatores maxumei; Ter. Eun. 665 amatores . . . maxumos), but a break after the first syllable of an anapaest is rare. Fleckeisen reads tu amator magnus.

269. animi perdit is taken to mean 'a desperate fellow'; but perditus means either financially ruined or morally abandoned. Lipsius suggests perciti, 'excitable'; cf. Liv. xxi. 53. 8 ingenium percitum ac ferox; Cic. Mil. 23. 63 animo irato ac percito. Plautus uses the word, Amph. 727, Cas. 628, &c., but not as an adjective.

270. cauero: as a general rule there is little difference in meaning between the future simple and the future perfect as used by Plautus, except that the latter denotes greater certainty; cf. feceris, 272. See Roby, § 1485.

272. serua: humorously emphatic.

me lubente feceris, 'I'll be glad if you (keep it intact)' he means: Men. thinks he means 'take it, and welcome'.

273. The 'Comedy of Errors' begins when Cylindrus, returning from market, mistakes Men. of Syracuse for Men. of Epidamnus. On the dramatic probability of the confusion generally see Introd. 1.

274. pransoribus = ei qui pransuri sunt; cf. raptori, 65. Livy was the first prose writer to use verbal nouns in -tor and -sor participially; properly they denote permanent characteristics.

275. Scan sēd ēccūm; cf. 565 sēd ēccām. Introd. 7. I. C. b.

276. Various suggestions have been made to amend the rhythm;

see App. Crit., to which add Onions's excellent priu' iam conuiuae deambulant (confusion of -ae and de-, and haplography).

277. opsonatu redeo: cf. 288, Cas. 719. For historic present with priusquam cf. Cura. 637 priusquam moritur, mihi dedit.

278. di te amabunt: formal reply to a greeting.

279. Leo restores thus: quisquis sum? non tu scis, Menaechme, quis ego sim? (better, perhaps, quisquis ego sim? nescis, &c.) which would give sense required; but see App. Crit. The eye of the scribe of P jumped from quisquis 278 to quis 279.

280. Hiatus at change of speakers coincident with caesura: or scan ubi; cf. Truc. 506.

conuiuae: plural because the parasite = octo homines, 223. For colloquial omission of verb cf. Cas. 542 ubi tua uxor?

282. Brix gives certe . . . homo to Menaechmus; see App. Crit., and cf. 288-93. The words, if spoken by the cook, are an aside; see 309 note.

283. dixin = nonne dixi: nonne is rare in Plautus, but is found occasionally before a vowel or h, e.g. Amph. 407; its place is taken by -ne, non, or satin, or even ecquid (cf. 146).

284. The Ambrosian palimpsest here shows traces of a line which does not appear in the P group.

286. Messenio takes Peniculum in the sense of 'clothes-brush', which, like a good valet, he has in his handbag.

287. numero: usually 'on the instant': here 'too soon': cf. Poen. 1272 quid numero estis mortui?

289. porci: a pig was the usual scapegoat among the Greeks and Romans, and was offered not only as an expiation for crime, but in cases of madness, which was regarded as a divine punishment. The conventional cure was hellebore, procured chiefly at Anticyra on the Corinthian Gulf; Horace refers to both expiation and cure, Sat. ii. 3. 164 immole! aequis Hic porcum Laribus . . . Nauiget Anticyram; cf. Aesch. Eum. 283 καθαρμοῖς ἡλάθη χοιροκτόνοις.

290. sacres: archaic and religious variant of sacri, as impetriere for impetrare.

sinceri: pigs ten days old were considered puri (free from blemish) and therefore fit for sacrifice, Varro, de R. R. ii. 4. 16.

nummeis: i.e. at a didrachm apiece; cf. 219.

291. Scan iūbē tē; cf. 348, 1106, and see Introd. 7. I. B. b. ii.

292. Better scanned with hiatus at caesura, as the word-accent falls on the penultimate syllable of insanum. Lorenz proposes insane insanum with elision of nam; cf. Aul. 314 parce parcum: but this makes ictus conflict with word-accent. The hiatus is possibly due to emphasis; cf. Introd. 7. IV. D. d, p. 56.

certo scio: in classical prose pro certo; Cicero uses the colloquialism in letters, e.g. ad Att. iv. 3. 1 auere te certo scio.

293. molestu's: cf. elocutu's 172; see Introd. 7. I. D. c. i, p. 46.

MENAECCHI

294. The spondaic word in the fourth foot expresses pained surprise; cf. the same in a similar passage, 499.

295. sei . . . seu: this, instead of siue (seu) . . . siue (seu) is the usual combination in Plautus.

Coriendru's: suggested by coriandrum, a seed used to flavour cakes.

perieris: a wish; this tense is used partly because the meaning required is 'may you be completely confounded', and partly because the perf. subj. in -erim was originally an optative form, just as the fut. perf. in -ero was a subjunctive. Cf. Cas. 399 deliquerit.

297. tantum with quom . . . nomine 298.

quod sciam: limitative, 'as far as I know'; the antecedent of quod is an adverbial acc. understood. Cf. 500.

298. pro sano: cf. 927 hau pro insano.

299. nouisti: here aorist, not perfect as in 294. 296; 'where did you make my acquaintance?' Cf. 337, 501.

ubi . . . nouerim: sc. quaeris? the subj. is usual when a question is thus echoed.

300. Scan quī āmīc|am; see Introd. 7. IV. A. a. ii, p. 51.

302. Scan tībī; so 323, 439, &c.

303. cyathisso, 'fill your glass'; the cyathus was a ladle for transferring wine from the crater to the poculum. From Greek κυαθίζω; for the termination cf. gracissat, &c. 11-12.

quando temporal is used by the comic dramatists of indefinite time.

ēī: an interjection.

304. quom nihil est: generally speaking, Plautus uses quom causal with the indicative when the reason given is a plain fact; cf. Capt. 995 eheu, quom ego . . . feci. See also 309 note.

qui: instrumental ablative; cf. 452, 636, 743.

illic: dative, = illi-ce, as in 828, 841.

dimminuam: this verb is used by the comic dramatists in the phrases dimminuere (= disminuere) caput or cerebrum; cf. Most. 266, Ter. Ad. 571.

307. in illisce aedibus: pointing to the house of Menaechmus I.

308. illi[c]: either illi (adv.) must be written for illic, or we must read with Seyffert habēs for habitus (cf. 69). Onions suggests di illum omnes, qui illic habitat, perduint, on the ground that omnes has been corrupted to homines (as often), and illum and habitat altered accordingly: this certainly suits the next line better.

309. Scan hic|quīdēm qui īp|se. This line is an aside; the cook dares not call Men. mad, except in a roundabout way, 310-315. Cf. 282 note.

qui . . . dicit: contrast 313 qui . . . dicas. Plautus seems to use indic. and subj. impartially after a causal relative; cf. Poen.

1031-3. Perhaps the indicative lays stress on the fact as fact (cf. 904), the subjunctive on the fact as reason (cf. 374, 443).

310. audin draws attention, like our 'I say!' (vulgar 'D'y'ear!').

311. numinum illum: either a case of attraction to the relative, or, more probably, an anacoluthon natural in conversation: 'that half-crown you promised me—you'd better buy a pig with it yourself'. Cf. 64-5, 1052.

314-15. porculum: see on porci 289.

316. eu hercle: cf. 731, 872, 160 eu edepol ne, and on these combinations see note on 160. In the absence of a finite verb they are normally followed by an accusative. Scan cū hēr'clē hōmīnē; hiatus after an interjection, with shortening of vowel or diphthong, is regular, see Introd. 7. IV. D. a. i: hiatus before cases of homo occurs often in MSS. of Plautus, and, when permissible on other grounds, may be allowed to stand, though Brix wished to change hominem, &c., to the archaic forms homonem, &c. (see Lindsay's Lat. Lang. p. 367), in all such passages; cf. Introd. 7. IV. F, p. 57.

multum, 'tedious', 'wearisome'; there is too much of him. The word is so used in classical prose; cf. Cic. de Orat. ii. 87 ne in re nota et peruulgata multus . . . sim. Livy and Tacitus use nimius in the same way.

317-18 are an 'aside' addressed to the audience. Line 317 has more point if 316 is given to Men., as by Brix and other edd. 316, if given to Mess., is an aside, and 317 is an abrupt and awkward continuation of 310-15.

318. quam uis: used here, as always by Plautus, in its literal sense of ' (as much) as you wish' (classical quantumuis).

ridiculus: in active sense.

319. quid ais tu? to call Men.'s attention; cf. 162.

quid ais, inquam. Impatient repetition. Menaechnus and Messenio are whispering together and pay no attention. This is Goldbacher's emendation of MSS. qui uis; most edd. read quid uis, and distribute the line thus: quid ais tu? MEN. quid uis, inquam (cf. 310). CY. satin hoc, &c.

hoc quod uidēs: he shows him the contents of the sportula.

320. an opsono: the 'deliberative' pres. indic. is colloquial, and therefore common in comedy; cf. Most. 774 con, uoco huc hominem? So elsewhere, Juv. iv. 130 conciditur? Cic. ad Att. xiii. 40 aduolone an maneo? So we say 'What do we do next?'

321. tibi . . . mulieri: in apposition to uobis; out of place here; such careless order is colloquial.

321-2. quas [tu] mulieres . . . loquere? An expression of indignant repudiation; cf. Pseud. 1195 quem tu Pseudolum, quas tu mihi praedicās fallacias?; Curc. 546; Cic. ad Fam. ix. 16. 7 quem tu mihi pompilum, quem denarium narras, quem tyretarichi patinam? Unless the first tu is omitted, the lines must be scanned tibi ēt pārā sito ēt | mulier'ī? quās | tū mul'ērēs | quos tu | pārā- sīltos, &c., where the double change of ictus and therefore of accent is impossible, though apparently supported by 281-2 p̄arasitūm . . . parastitūm (where, however, change in place of poss. adj. alone justifies it). For omission of first tu cf. Curc. 613 quod argentum, quas tu mihi tricas narras?

322. quod . . . scelus: i.e. what crime for which you are paying the penalty of madness, as manifested by your behaviour? See on 289.

323. quid . . . rei? 'what have you to do with me?' rei partitive, cf. 369-70; so in good prose, quid hoc rei est? 'what's the matter?' For tibi cf. 302.

325. For hiatus after tu bearing ictus cf. 651, 744.

326. madebunt faxo, 'I'll warrant they'll be cooked'; colloquial paratactic construction, cf. 950 potabis faxo; also with subj. 113 faxo . . . uisas; cf. 539, 644. On the form faxo see 113 note.

nil morabitur: sc. cenam, or perhaps me; morari is always transitive in Plautus.

327. prōin tu, like proinde, introduces a command or exhortation; cf. 782.

ne . . . abeas: in O. Lat. prohibitions in the second person are expressed by ne with pres. subj., perf. subj., and pres. imperat. impartially.

longius ('too far'), if correct, retains the original long vowel of the comparative stem (longiōs-); but see App. Crit. Cf. also 846, and see Introd. 7. III. b, p. 49.

328. numquid uis? polite formula of leave-taking; cf. 548. The proper reply is ualeas. Men. takes it literally; cf. 138, and Ter. Ad. 432 SV. numquid uis? DE. mentem uobis meliorem dari.

maxumam . . . crucem: the simple accus., as well as accus. with in, is found in this phrase in O. Lat. (e.g. Pers. 352, Poen. 496). In the early stage of a language relations are sufficiently defined by case-endings; gradually the force of the case-suffix is weakened, and as the growing complexity of life necessitates greater exactness of expression, relations begin to be more clearly defined by the employment of adverbs which, occurring constantly with particular cases, become what we call prepositions 'governing' those cases. In the final stage prepositions almost entirely replace case-endings, as in modern French. Relics of the older usage in Latin appear in common phrases like domum ire, rure redire, &c.; cf. 396 ire infitias, 1020 suppetias . . . adueni. See Lindsay, Lat. Lang., p. 572. On this permissible double iambic ending see Introd. 6. II. A. f. iii, and cf. 66, 915, 1017.

329. ire . . . te: the line begins as though he were about to return the curse, but finishes with a thoughtful suggestion.

332. potius quam . . . astes: the subjunctive is commonly used in Latin to express an excluded alternative; cf. 726, 1059; Asin. 816; Livy iii. 21. 6 peccate potius quam . . . faciant; here, however, an ut may be understood. Plautus also uses the fut. indic. thus, e.g. Cist. 533 perdam operam potius quam carebo filia.

333. abiit? (abiit): cf. 550. For haplography in MSS. cf. 808.

334. tua uerba: 258-64.

335. meretricem . . . mulierem: cf. Mil. 563 hominem seruom.

336. Scan ut quidem ille.

338. minime . . . mirum: Brix points out that while the copula is never omitted by Plautus in certain phrases (certum est, opus est, &c.), it is nearly always omitted in phrases of an exclamatory nature (e.g. Capt. 176 facete dictum; Stich. 374 nimi' factum bene), especially in phrases with mirum, such as (non) mirum si, mirum nō, mirum quin. He compares Gk. οὐδὲν θαυμάσιον, Germ. kein Wunder; cf. our 'no wonder (that)'. See also 434, 650, 1024.

339. ancillulas: ancilla is the usual feminine of seruus; serua is rare. The force of the diminutive is 'naughty little slaves'.

340. peregrina nauis: literal in this line; with quoiatīs sit it must be supplied in the sense of 'stranger'; cf. the gender of perditum 343; tr. 'foreign merchantman', which can be used in both senses. In 344 nauis is purely metaphorical.

341. quoiatīs: original uncontracted form of quoias (= uias; cf. nostras); cf. Poen. 994; Curc. 407.

343. perditum, 'plucked'.

amittunt: classical dimitunt; cf. 1055; so generally in Pl. and Ter.

344. nūc in istoc portu; i.e. Erotium's house.

nauis, as the text stands, must be scanned as a monosyllable, like uās. Brix quotes parallels (e.g. Bacch. 1017 cauissē), which, however, are doubtful. See App. Crit.

347. monuisse: the subject of the infin. is omitted, as often; cf. Epid. 238 dissimulabam earum operam sermoni dare. In this play 461, 482, 524, 538.

349. hoc: probably the uidulus or handbag; cf. 286.

350. haec: all the luggage.

sultis = si uoltis ('if you please'); so sis = si uis, sodes = si audes.

nauales pedes: comic appellation of remiges, from their function. They had accompanied Men. to carry the luggage; cf. 436, 445.

351. Erotium appears at her door with an ancilla (cf. 524), to whom she is giving orders. On the metres 351-68 see Schema Metrorum.

Scan sinē fōrēs; so 362 fōrēs quōi. See Introd. 7. I. A. a. i; B. b. i, pp. 42-3.

sic, 'as they are'; cf. 197. Menaechnus is to be welcomed with open doors.

MENAECMI

352. For the asyndeton cf. Cic. ad Fam. ii. 5. 2 para, meditare, cogita.

fiat may depend on uide.

353. sternite lectos: i. e. put rugs and cushions on the dining-couches. The plural shows that this is addressed to the inferior ancillae.

odores: by metonymy for 'fragrant spices'.

munditia, 'smartness', not 'neatness'; Horace's simplex munditiis is usually mistranslated.

356. amoenitas, 'pleasant surroundings'.

malost = damno est.

359. item hinc ultro, 'and so by my free gift'; hinc = a me; cf. 799.

potissumus: as long as pallae, &c., are forthcoming; cf. 192.

nostrae domi: so Most. 874; but in nostra domo (Cas. 620).

361. mira uidentur: so often mira sunt, cf. 1046; usually with si or ni, Cas. 191; Pseud. 1216; Trin. 861.

362. quoi pateant: concessive; cf. 397. On quoi see Arg. I.

363. quam domu' tua: sc. est tua; or (removing comma from pateant 362 to tua) sc. patet.

quom . . . sit, 'since my house is more (truly) yours than your own is'. Plautus usually employs the indicative with causal (and concessive) quom; perhaps the subjunctive here implies that the reason given is not a hard fact; cf. 304 note.

367-8. prandium ut iussisti, &c.: repetition of 364-5, as the supposed Menaechmus I has taken no notice.

369. Men. is speaking to Messenio.

equidem: not = ego quidem, though normally used with the first person; the e- is perhaps the prefix found in ecastor, edepol, &c. See note on egoquidem, 1071.

370. quia: elliptical; supply est res mihi tecum (quia).

371. neque id haud, 'and that too not . . .'. This doubling of the negative is found in Plautus (in Terence only once, Andr. 205) with neque (nec) as the first negative; according to Brix, this is because the negative force of neque is weakened by its having to act as a conjunction. The two negatives are normally separated by a pronoun; Bacch. 1037 neque ego hau committam, Epid. 664 neque ille haud obiciet mihi. So nec . . . numquam 1027.

372. ecastor: see on 213. Scan tūis me (or tūis).

florentem facis: for the periphrasis cf. Amph. 1030 quem . . . faciam feruentem flagris; Pseud. 1041 qui te nunc flentem facit.

373-4. The weakness of the plot is obvious here. Menaechmus would surely have remembered his quest in real life. But he does not remember even Messenio's warnings (258, 338), or what the cook said (331).

375. istaec: i. e. what is now happening to you.

376. prāeūt si . . . erimus: praeūt and praequam are used to contrast two occurrences of which one is more striking than the other; cf. 935, Mest. 981 nihil hoc quidem est . . . praequam alies dapsilis sumptus facit; Amph. 374 parum etiam praeūt futurum est praedicās. In the present case either a verb (such as futurum est) must be supplied with praeūt, or the stop at erimus removed; cf. Aul. 507 sed hoc etiam pulchrum est praequam ubi sumptus petunt (i. e. praequam est ibi ubi s. p.). The literal meaning of this passage is 'Mere leaves are now falling (on you in comparison with how (things will turn out) if we stay', &c. Warner gives the general sense: 'These be but leaves that fall upon you now, in comparison of the trees that will tumble on your necke shortly.' Erasmus quotes a proverb of similar meaning, post folia cadunt arbores.

triduom hoc, 'the next three days'; contrast 104 hos dies multos.

377. elecebrae: probably coined by Plautus; also Bacch. 944. Ladies of Erotium's stamp entice money out of one's pockets.

378. sine . . . dum: separation of the enclitic, as in Livy iii. 60. 10 nec omnes dum eductos.

379. Hiatus after emphatic tu not bearing ictus (see Introd. 7. IV. A. a. ii), and at change of speaker coinciding with diaeresis.

nouisti: cf. 299, 337.

381. tetulit: an old reduplicated perfect form of stem tol-, used as the perfect of fero; hence the perfect of reŕfero is rettuli = reŕetuli (as originally accented). Cf. 630.

delicias facis, 'you're joking'.

382. quin . . . is: see on 247-8 quin . . . redimus.

amabo, 'please', is used chiefly by women in O. Latin, mostly with an imperative (as in 405, 541, 678) or equivalent (as here), or with a question (where the imperative of a verb of telling may be supplied). It is to be referred to a suppressed protasis: 'I'll love you (if you do).' Cf. Cic. ad Att. ii. 4 amabo te, cura ut . . . transigas. For another use see 425, 524.

tibi erit rectius: cf. 626 quid tibi aegre est?

384. Scan nīmī mīrōr quid hoc | sīt: cf. 1129-30 sēd mīhi hōc | rēsponde.

oboluit . . . huic: cf. Aul. 216 aurum huic olet.

386. He hands back the purse to Messenio.

scibo: the original form of the fourth conjugation future; the ending -bo (= fuo) is a suffix formed from the stem fu- seen in fui. The ending -am of regular third and fourth conjugation futures is a subjunctive form that replaced the true future-suffix. Cf. 1009 subuenibo, 1101 seruibo.

387. bene uocas, 'it's good of you to ask me': polite refusal; cf. benigne, Hor. Epp. i. 7. 16.

tam gratiast: a similar formula, probably elliptical; e. g.

MENAECHMI

here supply quam si intro cam: cf. Hor. Epp. i. 7. 18 tam teneor dono quam si dimittar onustus.

389. Scan ēgōn te; cf. 653. The hiatus after tibi is permissible; Brix gives a list of nineteen instances after mihi, tibi, stibi. Cf. 827, and see Introd. 7. IV. B. a. i, p. 52.

390. malum: used as an enclitic interjection after an interrogative, e.g. Rud. 945 quid tu, malum, nam me retrahis? Cf. Cic. ad Att. v. 20. 1 qui, malum, isti Pindenissetae? Probably it stands for malum tibi sit.

391. baxae: according to a gloss of the scholiast Placidus, these were high-heeled shoes.

392. scilicet, 'why, of course'.

393. Scan quām āb ūx'ōrē | tūā. Cf. mēāē 394, tūā 643; and for the hiatus cf. 448 quām hodie, 601, and see Introd. 7. IV. A. b. i.

quid est? 'what's that?'

395. cantherino ritu. Horses can sleep standing. The hiatus may be due to the old ablative-ending -d; but see App. Crit. Cf. Cist. 291 utrum deliras, quaeso, an astans somnias?

396. qui lubet, 'how can you like to . . .?'

ire infitias: for the accus, see on 328, and cf. 1020 suppetias . . . adueni. The phrase here takes the construction of nego; so Livy vi. 40. 4.

397. facta quae sunt: i.e. facta (ea esse) quae (facta) sunt: or perhaps direct object; cf. 1057 note.

quod negem: virtually oblique; sc. me fecisse.

quod fecerim: concessive = quom id fecerim.

399. Hiatus at the diaeresis; cf. Introd. 7. IV. C. a; frequent in this play, e.g. 406, 604, 681, 696, 778, 851, 859, 923, 939-40, 1013, 1028, 1091, 1094.

400. penetraui pedem: cf. 816. This verb is always transitive in Plautus (= classical inferre), and generally reflexive, as Amph. 250 penetrant se in fugam.

401. eccere: probably an oath by Ceres; cf. edepol, ecastor.

402. quam tu mihi . . . narras? see on 321-2. Men. takes the question literally; cf. 328.

403. tritam: it suits the rest of the line best to take this as 'planed', not 'battered by storms'.

fixam: i.e. with wooden nails (pali) driven in by the malleus.

excussam: from excudo; for the double s cf. 147 essuri (= ed-suri), 458 essum.

404. quasi supellex pellionis: supply est from end of line. 'It's like a furrier's outfit', i.e. when he stretches out a skin to be cured. Perhaps a play on the words is intended: note the alliteration.

palus palo proxumust: i.e. in the ship, as on the skin.

405. As it stands this line is unmetrical, as iam cannot remain long before a vowel. Fleckeisen proposes iām āmā|bō dē|sistē.

406. nēsciō quem: nescio in conjunction with quis is, in Plautus, generally a dactyl; but cf. Merc. 365. The connexion of thought is: 'I cannot accept your invitation) as you take me for someone else.' There is no need to assume a lacuna with Ritschl. Fleckenstein reads nēs, tōquem (tū).

409-10. ubi, 'where' (referring to Syracuse).

409-12. Agathocles and Hiero were historical characters well known to the Romans. The former was tyrant of Syracuse 317-289 B. C.; the latter was elected strategus in 269, and made himself tyrant by force (not peacefully as Erotium says) in 265. Phintia and Liparo are inventions here, the former being the name of a tyrant of Agrigentum about 280 B. C., the latter probably being suggested by the Liparae Islands off Sicily. Plautus (or his Greek original) is true to life in representing a woman of Erotium's class as guilty of such blunders. An Aspasia was rare. With regard to the bearing of this passage on the date of the play see Introd. 3.

412. Hiero est: sc. regnator.

413. Messenio is startled out of his suspicions (358 seq.); but they soon return (416).

illinc: from Syracuse.

414-15. The connexion is: if she is a fellow-Syracusan, I cannot persist in my refusal.

416. periisti: the perfect indic. expresses the certainty of the result.

intrassis: an aorist-stem subjunctive form used as fut. perf. indic. Cf. faxis 113. For the tense see note on 847.

quin . . . taccē: a substitute for quin with 2 pers. pres. indic., equivalent to a strong or indignant command; cf. 382, and see on 247-8. Cf. also Verg. Aen. iv. 547 quin morere . . . ferroque auerte dolorem.

418. si possum: Plautus uses si with a verb (usually possum) in the subj. to express 'to see if', 'in the hope of', exactly as classical writers do, with one exception; when (as here) the dependent verb is in the first person, and present time is referred to, the indicative is used. Cf. Mil. 1207 nam si possem ullo modo impetrare . . . operam dedi (past time); Verg. Aen. vi. 78 baechatur uates, magnum si pectore possit Excussisse deum (third person); Hor. Epp. i. 7. 39 inspice, si possum donata reponere laetus (a reminiscence of Plautine usage); 1048-9 below, ibo . . . si possum exorare.

iam dudum. So far Men. has been speaking aside to Messenio; he now speaks aside to Erotium, pretending that he does not want Mess. to overhear him.

419-20. non inprudens: classical consulto or de industria.

aduorsabar) (adsentabor 417).

ni here = nē; both represent an original form nei. Both nei and ni are common in inscriptions; this ni is also found in Lucretius, Propertius, and perhaps in Vergil, Aen. iii. 684-6 contra iussa monent Heleni . . . Ni teneant cursus. Cf. also 881, and Prop. ii. 7. 1-3 legem Qua quondam edicta flemus uterque diu Ni nos diuideret.

MENAECHEMI

422. quando uis: causal, cf. 202, Trin. 573 quando ita uis.

424. fecero: i. e. occludam fores, implied in what Men. has said.

425. quid te amabo ut facias, 'what I'll be much obliged to you for doing'; cf. 524-5; Truc. 872 amabo ut . . . sinas eum esse apud me. For the ordinary use of amabo cf. 382; its use with an ut-clause may have arisen by analogy from its use with a prohibition (e. g. Cic. ad Q. Fr. i. 4. 1 amabo te, ne . . . scelere meo . . . assignes), or on the analogy of rogo ut (ne).

426. dederas: the pluperfect means 'on your last visit'.

phrygionem: gold-embroiderers were so designated because the Phrygians were especially skilled in the art; cf. milliner = Milaner (from Milan).

427. opera: e. g. trimming and alterations. What suited a matrona would not be smart enough for a meretrix. See Introd. 4.

428. hercle qui: cf. 1092; Trin. 464; so pol qui. In these phrases qui is sometimes taken as indefinite ('By Jove, somehow'); but it is more probably exclamatory (interrogative) = θαυμαστὸς ὥς: 'Egad, how . . . !'

eādem: adverb. Hiatus may be avoided by adding enim with Vahlen. Fleckeisen suggests eādem (operā) (= simul): operā may have dropped out through confusion with operā, 427.

ignorabitur, 'made unrecognizable, disguised', hence followed by final clause. Cf. 468.

429. The palla was generally worn as a wrap.

430. maxume = Greek μάλιστα, adverb of assent in conversation.

431. hunc . . . conloqui: cf. Pseud. 252, and acc. with conuenire, 401 above.

432-3. Hiatus is not unusual before or after proper names, esp. if in vocative, but see App. Crit.; huc accede is the regular order.

†sussciri: no convincing emendation has been proposed. The best suggestion is Bothe's sussili; cf. Curc. 151, where Phaedromus implores the bars of his lady's door, sussilite opsecro; Cas. 931 supsilite, optundit os mihi. Addressed to Men. it would mean 'up and away!' Brix⁵ assigns sussili ('jump up') to Men.; he supposes that during the conversation of Erotium and Men., Messenio sits sulking on the baggage (cf. 350). If the word is given to Men. it would be simpler to take it in the sense 'jump for joy'; cf. Varro, quoted by Nonius, 135. 28 non supsilis ac plaudis? Possibly suscipe (Ritschl) is to be read; Men. points to the baggage and says, 'take this up' (cf. 436).

434. ut ne dicas, 'to save you the trouble of telling me'; ut ne introduces a final clause, cf. Ter. And. 259; usually separated, as Epid. 356; Pers. 110. The MSS. have ut me dicas, except B², which gives ut me dices; Brix adopts the latter in the sense qualem me dices.

A further difficulty is the division of the speeches. If the arrangement of the present text is accepted, the connexion is as follows (reading sussili 432-3): MESS. 'What's the matter? Up and away!' MEN. 'Why should I?' MESS. 'You must —' (he is going to say 'avoid danger'). MEN. (interrupting) 'I know (what you are going to say), so that you need not say it.' MESS. '(You are) so much the worse (if you are acting thus with your eyes open)'. Brix⁵ divides thus: (432-3) MESS. quid negoti est? MEN. sussuli. (434) MESS. quid eo opust? MEN. opust. scio ut me dices: i.e. 'You must! I know what you're going to call me' (ut = 'how'). Cf. Stich. 95 AN. quid opust? PAN. opust.

tanto nequior: sc. es; for the omission cf. Stich. 749 tanto miserior; Truc. 953 tanto melior, and see note on 338.

435. habeo . . . operis: military metaphor; 'I have the spoil in my grasp, such fine siege works have I begun'. Taken literally, this line is inconsistent with est . . . nobis, 441: perhaps praedam here should be altered to praedem. For the hiatus cf. 431.

quantum potes = quam celerrime; cf. 549; Aul. 119 quantum potero; so quantum potest impersonally, 850, 1056; Aul. 399, &c. Cf. Cic. ad Att. iv. 13, ix. 7.

436. istos: the navales pedes, 350.

437. ante solem occasum: cf. 1022; XII Tab. (Gell. xvii. 2. 10) sol occasus suprema tempestas esto; in this phrase the participle has neuter force, as in iuratus, pransus, potus.

uenias aduorsum: a phrase applied to a slave fetching (or carrying) his master home from a dinner-party; cf. 445, 464, 987; Most. 938, 947. Donatus says that such a slave was called aduorsitor, and in the dram. pers. of the Most., Phaniscus Aduorsitor appears; but the word does not occur elsewhere.

438. Ritschl suggests atque hinc abi to fill the lacuna; Vahlen et fac tuom ('mind your own business'), which suits the next line better. Palmer thinks that uerbero may have dropped out through homoeoteleuton with fecero 439.

440. Warner paraphrases: 'Peace foolish knave, seest thou not what a sot she is; I shall coozen her I warrant thee.'

442. lembum, 'cockboat', not a match for a nautis; cf. 344.

dīdirectum with ducit: 'is towing it to the deuce'; dierectus (lit. 'spread-eagled', i.e. 'crucified') is so used in curses, Poen. 347 i dierecte in maxumam malam crucem. Perhaps, as Nettleship suggests, dierectus is 'some bastard issue of διαπρήγνυμι'; διαπράγνις ('split you') is a curse common in Gk. comedy.

443. postulem, 'expect', takes acc. and infin. on the analogy of uolo. (Gk. ἀξιῶ.) Cf. 767.

445. sequimini: to the sailor-porters. Exeunt Mess. and porters, leaving stage clear; second pause in the play.

446. Peniculus has lost Menaechmus I in a crowd, and returns to Erotium's house as the most likely place in which to find him.

The first hiatus is inadmissible; see App. Crit. On the second see Introd. 7. IV. A. b. ii, p. 52.

interea loci, 'meanwhile'; cf. nusquam . . . gentium, 262.

450. ducere: sc. secum.

451. qui illum . . . perduint: qui ('how') is frequently used thus with the force of utinam (Gk. ὥς); cf. 931-3; so also simple ut, Aul. 785 ut illum di . . . perduint; cf. Hor. Sat. ii. 1. 43 ut pereat positum robigine telum; Verg. Aen. x. 631. Cf. also hercle qui, 428. On perduint see 267 note.

452. qui: instrumental; cf. 636.

occupatos: like himself. The parasite takes his profession seriously.

453. To avoid the hiatus Onions proposes non ad eam rem ni otiosos (not interrogative), Vahlen, non saltem, with the sense: 'if assemblies must be held, at any rate men with nothing to do might be employed to attend them'. (For the restrictive use of saltem cf. 624; Amph. 438; Merc. 637-8.) See, however, Introd. 7. IV. A. b. ii. Perhaps there is a pause at rem to emphasize otiosos (Introd. 7. IV. D. d, p. 56).

454. quom citentur: his suggestion is that whenever a contio is held, the names of ciues otiosi should be read out like those of able-bodied citizens at a dilectus, and that those who failed to turn up should be punished.

census capiat ilico: this is the reading of A and of B², and may be interpreted (1) taking census as nom. sing., 'punishment (the censor's rebuke) should overtake them': there is no parallel for census in this sense, but censio is so used, e. g. Aul. 601 censione bubula; still more to the point is Rud. 1269 seq., where one speaker replies censeo to all questions, until the other says adsum equidem, ne censionem semper facias, which may be taken either 'so don't punish me for non-attendance', or 'don't keep saying censeo'. Perhaps census = fine; see below. (2) Taking census as acc. plur., the subject being magistratus understood (so P, census capiant, sc. magistratūs); 'he should assess them (preparatory to a fine)'; or simply 'he should amerce them in a fine', though the latter meaning of census cannot be paralleled. Still less can it mean pignora (as Pareus says). Leo solves the difficulty by reading pignus capiat. Senators failing to attend meetings of the Senate were liable to seizure of goods (pignoriscapio), which they could redeem by paying a fine. Perhaps censu capiat, 'deprive them of civil rights', may be suggested on the analogy of censu prohibere (excludere) and altero captus oculo.

457. adfatum: used substantively with part. gen.; cf. 91. escas, 'meals'.

458. negoti, 'belly-businesses' (Warner).

459. contioni . . . comitiis: a contio was a non-voting assembly convened by a magistrate when he wished to inform the people on some point; comitia were voting assemblies held for elections, trials, or legislation.

460. Scan sī id ita: see Introd. 7. IV. A. a. i. and cf. 751 si autem, 815-16 sī ego.

461. datum uoluisse: supply eum (i. e. Menaechmum) as subject to datum (sc. prandium) uoluisse; for the omission cf. 347: '(I) to whom I am as sure that he would not have grudged it as that I am alive'. The combination of uolo with a past participle to signify desire (cf. 1120) or (as here) acquiescence is a classical use. For tam . . . quam with verbs cf. Ter. Eun. 718 Parmenonis tam scire esse hanc technam quam me uiuere. Scan dat ūm uoluisse, which forms a word-group like uoluptés-mea or coctūm-dabo, and is accented as a polysyllable.

462. etiamnum = etiam nunc.

463. cum corona: Greeks and Romans put on garlands when dessert appeared; they believed that alcoholic fumes were so prevented from rising too high. Pen. knows from this sign that sublatum est conuiuium.

464. sublatum est: he has no hope even of the reliquiae.

uenio aduersum: sarcastic; cf. 437.

465. hominem: here the 'anticipatory' accusative follows the dependent clause.

466. Menaechmus II is speaking to Erotium within as he comes out of her house; he is tired of her reiterated instructions.

potine ut = potisne es ut, i. e. potisne facere ut. Cf. 627; Pers.

175 potin ut taceas? potin ne moneas? So Poen. 916.

hanc: the palla.

468. non with eam (= eandem).

ita ig̃ norabitur, 'it will be so well disguised': cf. 428.

469. Peniculus hears these loudly-spoken words (466-8), but when Men. moves away across the stage and talks to himself (473-7, 480-5) he can hear only a few words. See Introd. 4, p. 17.

471. Pen. felt bound to avenge such treatment in the interests of his profession. Hiatus is perhaps possible after a monosyllable without ictus: cf. 379 note. But rhythm will coincide with accent if we scan non her̃clēs̃ īs̃ sūm quī sum: for this hiatus cf. 316. See also App. Crit.

472. opserua quid dabo, 'wait and see how I'll pay him out (give him what for)': or, if we are to accept Langen's explanation that in this and similar phrases do has the meaning of -do (= τίθημι) in the compounds condo, abdo, &c., 'wait and see what I'll do'. Cf. Pers. 292 specta quid dederō; Ter. Phorm. 1027 sic dabo. These phrases, used as threats, are to be distinguished from the expression of satisfaction (generally malicious) sic datur; see note on 604, and cf. 628. Sic dederō is used in both ways: contrast Poen. 1286 (a threat) with Asin. 439 (an expression of satisfaction).

473-4. pro di: cf. 957, 1001; Ter. Ad. 447. pro in these cases is followed by a vocative. Where interjectional pro is followed by accus. there is an ellipse of a verb, e.g. pro uostram fidem, sc. imploro.

quoī hōm|ini: for the hiatus cf. 374, 786, 789.

476. Hiatus at a strong pause in sense, accentuated by chiasmus. Warner tr. 'Such cheare, such a dinner, such kinde entertainment!'

477. hanc: sc. pallam.

heres: here in the archaic sense of 'possessor'; cf. 62; Bacch. 849 exheredem fecero uitae.

erit: sc. Erotium.

478. exaudire clanculum, 'hear clearly from my hiding-place'.

479. de parti mea: he has caught the word heres, 477, which he takes in the other sense. Cf. 493.

parti: cf. 492 apsenti. The original ablative-ending of I-stems was -īd, becoming -ī by loss of the -d; consonant stems at first availed themselves of this ablative-ending (cf. 1020 temperi; Capt. 914 carni; and uirtutei on the tomb of a Scipio of date 130 B.C.); later the instrumental and locative termination -ē (= -ī) competed with this I-stem abl.-ending, not only in consonant stems, but also in I-stems, till in classical Latin only a few I-stem nouns preferred abl. in -ī; in Plautus, however, we always find sorti, ciui, nauī, &c. See Lindsay, Lat. Lang., pp. 390-1.

480. The double iambic ending is permitted when, as here, there is an elision after the fourth foot.

481. quoniam here temporal = quom iam. The addition of -iam makes the pres. the appropriate tense; see note on 24 postquam iam.

482. errare: sc. eam: for the omission cf. 347, 461, 524.

res: an euphemism, 'intrigue'. Fr. une affaire. Scan rēs cūm ē|a; cf. 448-9.

483. dixerat: cf. 717 quemquem aspexerat. The pluperf. indic. is used in Latin of the best period to express indefinite frequency; cf. Cic. Verr. II. v. 11. 27 cum rosam uiderat, tum incipere uer arbitrabatur. Later the pluperf. subj. gradually displaces it.

485. bene fui, 'had a good time'; colloquial use of an adverb with esse; cf. 100; Merc. 583 pulchre ut simus; more often the verb is impersonal, as 603, 621; Cist. 59 male mihi est; and bene est (passim). Menaechmus, like the first Duke of Marlborough, was 'thrifty in his vices'.

486. turbare, 'upset him', 'give him fits'.

487. The scansion quīd ā|īs is here to be preferred to quīd ā|īs, as a double iambic ending is avoided except under certain conditions; see Introd. 6. II. A. f. As aiō (properly aiō) was of the fourth conjugation, the final syllable of ais was originally long; cf. 820.

488. leuior quam pluma: proverbial expression; cf. Poen. 812.

489. flāgītīūm hōmīnīs = flagitiōse homo; the genitive is one of definition. Similar phrases are scelus uiri; Ter. Eun. 696 monstrum hominis; Pers. 848 frustum pueri; Poen. 1310 hallex uiri. On the hiatus consult Introd. 7. IV. F, p. 57; cf. 709.

490. perderes: final, but transl., 'that you should wish to injure me'; cf. Aul. 735-6 quid ego (de te) demerui . . . mali, quamobrem ita faceres.

491. ut, 'how (meanly)!' Brix takes it as temporal, and puts comma at foro.

492. fecisti funus: cf. the metaphor, 152-3.

apsenti: cf. 479. In classical Latin, ablative-ending -e of the pres. part. was always used in the abl. abs. construction; this differentiation was not fixed in Plautus's time.

493. quoii . . . heres eram: quoii refers back to prandio: colloquial carelessness of arrangement. As co-heir Peniculus had the right of sharing the arrangements for the burial. Cf. 477, 479.

495. qui . . . dicas: see on 309. Pronounce mi male dicas or mihi mal' dicas to avoid four consecutive short syllables.

ignoto. The P group of MSS. have hic noto, which is altered in B² to hic ignoto ('one who is a stranger here'): see App. Crit. Hiatus may be justified as marking indignant astonishment; cf. 563, and see Introd. 7. IV. D. d, p. 56.

496. malam rem: i.e. a blow. To Peniculus, however, mala res primarily means loss of a free meal; hence his answer.

497. The text is corrupt here. The reading of P is post eam quidem, &c., which is meaningless; A has pol as first word. Pol eam quidem edepol may perhaps be justified on the ground that a repetition of expletives is a natural symptom of excitement. The reading in the text embodies Goldbacher's correction quam for quidem (see App. Crit.). The speech is sarcastic: 'Yes! on the top of that bad turn which I'm well aware you have done me'. Scan cām | quām ēdē pol (hiatus before expletive).

499. nomen: spondaic word in fourth foot; cf. 294.

502. si . . . facias . . . ne sies: this form of expression corresponds to Gk. ἐάν with subj. as protasis to a command or prohibition; cf. 103 note; tr. 'if you are to behave properly, you musn't . . .'. Cf. also 1023. On the hiatus see Introd. 7. IV. A. a. ii, p. 51.

506. sincipūt (? see App. Crit.): comic for caput. Intellego is parenthetic, as scio, credo frequently; the quantity of the final syllable may therefore be justified; see Introd. 7. III. c, p. 49.

508. Hiatus at the caesura is possible in a line spoken with comic solemnity; cf. Introd. 7. IV. D. d. Bothe, however, proposed dedidisti; Müller's detulisti is more probable; cf. 133, 173, 393.

MENAECHEMI

510. pallam is object to both verbs; for the order cf. 1091. Scan sālin sānus.

511. occisast haec res, 'that's an end of the matter'; the phrase is similar to our 'there's no more to be said'; cf. Capl. 539; Bacch. 161 occisus hic homo est, 'his number's up'. Pen. is in despair at Men.'s barefaced lying, but recovers himself sufficiently to make a last appeal (non ego . . . pallam?), which naturally infuriates Men.

513. cinaedos: effeminate persons who danced publicly in the palla; cf. 197-8.

tūēs: see App. Crit.; but hiatus is permissible after an emphatic monosyllable not bearing ictus; cf. 379.

514-15. Scan fūsse.

516. non tu abis? pres. for fut. of eo and compounds is very common in colloquial speech; cf. Gk. εἶμι = ibo, and our 'I am going to-morrow'.

517. piari: see note on 289, and cf. 291 iube te piari.

iūbē: for hiatus before a vocative cf. 1003-4. With Pylades's correction iubes, the stop at dignus es must be removed.

519. iām ūtī sit: see Introd. 7. IV. A. b. i. Brix's correction iam ut siet is unnecessary; siet is very seldom found in any place but the last.

520. istaec: fem. plur. = istae-ce; cf. 766; Trin. 390 haec sunt aedes.

521. faxo . . . comederis: cf. 326 madebunt faxo, 562, 661. The future perfect has its full force; 'I'll warrant you will find you have eaten . . .' Exit Pen.

522. satine: a surprised nonne; 'isn't it clear that . . .?'; cf. 181; Epid. 666 satine illic homo ludibrio nos habet?

523. ita: probably not correlative to uti 522, but = 'in this way', i.e. as Pen. has done.

ludificant: the plural is justified by the notion of plurality in uti quemque conspīcor. See on 192 quisquam qui impetrant, and cf. 779, 785.

ostium: of Erotium's house. The ancilla appears with further commissions for Men.

524. amare ait: sc. se. For omission of the subject of an infin. cf. 347, 482. The present infin. here represents the future indic. (amabo). On amabo followed by final clause see note on 425.

525. hoc: she hands him the spinter (527).

una opera has here the meaning of unā (cf. 536) in classical Latin; 'at the same time', i.e. as the palla. In this sense eādem operā (lit. 'with the same trouble') is commoner; cf. Capl. 450. More frequently una opera is used with potential subjunctive in the sense '(you might) just as well'; cf. 794. The line as it stands is unmetrical, and a word has evidently dropped out; see App. Crit.

526. pondo, 'in weight', an old ablative of pondus. In Cicero and Livy it appears as an indeclinable noun = libram (-as). On the hiatus see App. Crit.; but perhaps the archaic ablative-ending in -d had a tendency to remain in fixed commercial and legal phrases; cf. Amph. 193, where the correct reading may be praedat agrod adoriad. Cf. also our archaic phrase 'pounds sterling' (= Easterling, a reminiscence of the Hansa). See Introd. 7. IV. E. b.

527. spinter = Gk. σφιγκτήρ, from σφίγγω, squeeze; a bangle (i.e. close-fitting bracelet) worn on the left arm above the elbow.

noũom: predicative. For scansion cf. duom 542; see note there.

530. As Men. stares at the bangle in joyful surprise, the maid asks: 'Don't you know what bangle it is?' Men. answers: 'I only know it's a gold one', which to him is the most important point; cf. 549. Scan scin quid hœc | sit; see Introd. 7. I. A. b, and cf. 638, 651, 675.

nisi aureum: sc. id esse scio.

533. numquam . . . factum est: numquam strong negative, as in our 'I never said so'. In his surprise Men. forgets his rôle, but soon remembers it (535), and almost overdoes it (536-7). Cf. 481 ff. Hiatus occurs at a pause; see also App. Crit. Ritschl proposes te obsecro, unnecessarily; see Introd. 7. IV. D. a. iv, p. 55.

535. immo: corrective; 'Yes, I do remember; to be sure, this is the one', &c.

536. istuc stands in anticipatory apposition to the whole sentence; as used here it has the force of 'by the by', Gk. τὸ δέινα; cf. 107 id quoque iam; 734; Stich. 589 illud quidem, 'I mean to say'. Men. here overdoes his part.

armillae: looser than the spinter.

537. nam has asseverative force, owing to an ellipse; '(you're right), for of course . . .'

538. dicam curare? 'shall I say you're seeing about it?' Logically the tense of the infin. is correct; cf. the epistolary imperfect.

539-40. simul: 'dramatic' irony.

541. inauris is the generic term; stalagmia (σταλάγμα), 'drops', are the particular variety she wants.

542. pondo duom nummum, 'of two didrachms' weight': duom nummum gen. plur.; cf. nostrum . . . socium, 134. For scansion cf. noũom, 527. Possibly both are to be scanned as monosyllables by synizesis.

543. She hints that he will have a friend at court if he does so. Cf. Asin. 183 seq., where Cleaereta mockingly describes the lover's anxiety to please all that dwell under the same roof as his mistress, including the lapdog; et quoque catulo subblanditur . . . se ut quom uideat gaudeat.

MENAECHMI

544. cedo: cf. 197, 546. Hiatus is justified by the strong pause (occurring at caesura); cf. 546, 737, 898.

545. da: sc. aurum.

sodes = si audes: see on sultis, 350.

aps te = de tua pecunia.

poste: archaic form of post; cf. 838. Spengel proposes ego post, whereby 546 is a comic echo of 545; but contrast requires ego in the next line; here it is unnecessary.

549. This line is added 'aside' for the benefit of the audience. While he is speaking, the maid exit into the house.

quique: here qui probably represents, not the old instrumental, but the locative (= so-called genitive of value); cf. 1159 quiqui (= quanticumque) licebunt; Pers. 661 qui datur, tanti indica.

551. Cf. Epid. 192.

554. fer pedem, 'step along'.

confer: Brix reads profer on the ground that conferre gradum means 'join or meet some one'; cf. Pseud. 707: but con- may also be an intensive prefix, as in concito, comminuo, &c.

555. ad laeuam: the spectators' right, the way to the forum; cf. 565-7. He himself goes R. towards the harbour to find Messenio, who is waiting at a waterside hostelry, 436.

556. ut si[quis]: see App. Crit. If quis is retained, read sequatur with P, and scan ut siquīs | sequātur (see Introd. 7. I. D. b): for mixture of numbers cf. 522-3 uti quemque conspīcor . . . ludīficant. If quis is omitted, the subject is indefinite 'they'. Brix's original reading was manum ut || Si qui | sequantur.

sequantur: so-called 'subj. by attraction'; cf. Rud. 1128 ac si istorum nil sit, ut mihi reddas. Nonius quotes the line as ut si sequentur. On this question of 'mood-attraction' see Lindsay, Syntax of Plautus, V. 29.

558. To the conjectures given in the App. Crit. add di mihi (hic), Ussing; hic = in Epidamnus, contrary to Messenio's forebodings, 258, 343, 375. (See also Introd. 7. IV. G, p. 57.)

There is an echo of this speech in Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors, III. ii. ad fin.

I see a man here needs not live by shifts,
When in the streets he meets such golden gifts.
I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay:
If any ship put out, then straight away.

When Menaechmus II departs harbourwards the stage is empty, and the third pause in the play occurs.—Soon Matrona (i. e. Menaechmus I's wife) and Peniculus, who has fulfilled his threat of 518-19, come out of Menaechmus I's house.

559. frustra: sc. esse: 'to be hoodwinked'; cf. Amph. 974 et seruos et era frustra sunt duo: more usually 'to be mistaken'; cf. 692.

560. ubi uir compilet: final.

561. ea: referring to quidquid domist; cf. Poen. 505 que, quidquid agit, preperat omnia.

quin tu taces? See on 247-8. Her voice is penetrating; Pen. fears that Menaechmus will receive timely warning.

562. manifesto with opprimes.

hac: towards the left of the stage (spectator's right), where Men. II had thrown his corona; cf. 555.

563. Hiatus is perhaps due to the old ablative-ending -d; cf. 526: but see Introd. 7. IV. D. d. It is better to suppose that Pen. pauses for emphasis after each horrible detail.

565. Scan quā hābuit; cf. 393 note, 695 quā hābēas. For construction of eccum without a verb see note on 179-80; contrast its use, 567.

566. em, 'there!'

uestigiis, 'by his traces'; we should say 'in his tracks'.

567. eccum . . . reuortitur: Menaechmus I enters L. as coming from the forum; cf. 213, 596. So they are ready for him; cf. 562. The hiatus is due to the natural pause after eccum coincident with caesura; so Most. 686.

569. male habeas: i. e. scold him. Warner tr. 'that which ye ever do; bayt him for life'.

sic censeo: assigned in old edd. to Matr.; but she would hardly assent to Pen.'s idem quod semper, and sic censeo always introduces or confirms the speaker's own views; cf. Cist. 769.

570. Cf. Asin. 881 aucupemus ex insidiis clanculum quam rem gerant.

571. For the metres of the following canticum (571-603) see Schema Metrorum. The basis of the metre in ll. 571-84* is the bacchius (∪ ∟ ∪).

ut: exclamatory, as probably uti, 572.

maxume . . . moro: to be taken together and predicatively; see on 572.

moro: Greek μωρός. A favourite pun of Plautus; cf. Poen. 379 huius mores morosi malos; Trin. 669 mores hominum moros et morosos.

572. molesto atque multo: attributive; the sentence then runs: 'How utterly foolish (is) this troublesome and tiresome fashion (that) we follow.' The reading of P is molestoque multum, to be taken predicatively like maxume moro, 571. Note the alliteration. For multo cf. 316.

uti quique sunt optimi: it is best to take uti as repeating ut of 571, and quique as = quicumque (cf. Asin. 404 quisque obtuiam huic occesserit irato, uapulabit; Mil. 156, 160, 460): 'how especially is this custom practised by all our leading men'. Otherwise take uti quique sunt opt. together (cf. Poen. 486 ut quisque acciderat, eum necabam ilico), and supply ut exclamatory from 571.

574. clientes (= cluentes those who listen—and do not speak) were manumitted slaves, protected aliens, descendants of these two classes, and others, who attached themselves to some rich man as patronus; cf. the mediaeval baron's retainers. To have a large number of clientes conferred social distinction. Plautus frequently, as here, introduces allusions to Roman institutions and customs; the framework is Greek, the details Roman (e.g. 451-9). Cf. Shakespeare's treatment of classical and other legends (e.g. the 'nine men's morris' and the Masque in M.-N. D.).

575. Construction: magis quaeritur quoniam modi res (clientum) clueat quam (quoniam modi) clientum fides (clueat).

577. quoniam modi clueat, 'in what estimation it is held': clueo (like the cognate Gk. κλύω) originally meaning 'hear', acquires the sense 'hear oneself called, be named, be reputed'; cf. 854; Trin. 312 qui animum uincunt . . . semper probiores cluent. So audio in classical poetry: Hor. Epp. i. 7. 37 rexque paterque Audisti coram. For the sentiment cf. Juv. iii. 140 Protinus ad censum, de moribus ultima fiet Quaestio.

578. nequam habetur (sc. cliens) forms the apodosis. Scan sī ēst (see Introd. 7. IV. A. a. ii, p. 51).

579. diues: substantival.

580. qui = ii (clientes) qui. Scan quī nēc lēgēs (cretics); so Sch. Metr.; but if the line is taken as a bacchiac with an extra syllable prefixed (anacrusis), the word-accent coincides with the rhythm: quī | nēc lēgēs | nēc aēquōm, &c.

aequom bonum: asyndeton is common in O. Lat., especially in legal and alliterative phrases; e.g. Rud. 839 ui uiolentia; ibid. 882 oro opsecro.

581. sollicitos . . . habent, 'keep them in a state of worry'; not mere periphrasis. The explanation follows.

582. datum (sc. id esse), 'paid' (i. e. to themselves).

584. rem = wealth.

584^a. Most edd. read mens ēst in | querēlis (bacchiac). P reads in quo ire Lis ubi, &c., i. e. E of eis, 585, has been changed to L, and the last syllable of querēlis omitted (haplography).

585. ubi dicitur dies, 'when they are cited to appear in court'.

simul patronis: under the early Republic a cliens could not plead in person, but was represented by his patronus in legal proceedings. See Willems, Le Droit Public Romain, pp. 10-14, and cf. Hor. Epp. ii. 1. 104.

586. quippe qui . . . loquimur, 'who, if you please, plead in their defence'; sarcastic use of quippe qui with indic.; cf. Epid. 618 ST. habe bonum animum. EP. quippe ego quoniam libertas in mundo sitast; Pseud. 1274 a. Brix, following P, reads quippe qui pro illis loquantur quae (mali) male fecerint (trochaic: Vahlen inserts mali); but quippe qui final is a doubtful usage.

quae . . . fecerunt : i. e. de iis quae fec., 'plead in defence of their dishonest acts'.

587. aut ad populum . . . rest : the three principal types of legal cases at Rome: ad populum refers to criminal cases (causae publicae) tried before the comitia centuriata; in iure ('in the magistrate's court') refers (1) to civil cases (causae privatae) settled summarily by a magistrate giving judgment on points of law when the facts were not disputed, (2) to a preliminary judgment by a magistrate on points of law in a civil case where the facts were disputed (the question of fact being tried in iudicio); ad iudicem (= in iudicio, 'before an arbitrator') refers to civil cases of the last-mentioned type, which were referred by the magistrate (after proceedings in iure) to an unofficial arbitrator who gave judgment on questions of fact. In a sponsio (see 590 note), as being concerned with questions of fact, the award was made by a iudex. Cf. Willems, pp. 316-24.

rest = res est; cf. in|sanist, 282, &c.

588. Scan cliēns quīdam or cliēns.

quod uolui agere : i. e. prandere.

589. attinit . . . detinit : the simple verb teneo had an archaic reduplicated perfect tetini, quoted by Nonius, 178, from Pacuvius and Accius; in compounds the first syllable would tend to disappear, owing to the throwing back of the accent (cf. rettuli = rētetuli). With this reading the line is trochaic (scan āt|tīn|īt|ītā) : if the reading of P is retained, me āt|tīn|īt|ītā, ītā dē|tīn|uit, the line is anapaestic.

590. apud aedilis, &c. : the aediles had jurisdiction in iure in cases connected with trade, commerce, and money-lending; cf. Willems, p. 271. Under ordinary circumstances the aedile made a pronouncement on the legal aspects of the case, and appointed a iudex to decide on the question of fact; pending proceedings in iudicio the party in possession of the disputed property or money had to find sureties for the thing or sum disputed and for the mesne profits (praedes litis et uindicarum; cf. 593). Actual proceedings, however, might be avoided by a sponsio, which was a sort of legal wager to decide the question of fact: each of the opposed parties bound himself to pay an agreed sum if his statement were adjudged false by a iudex. The party who desired a sponsio challenged the other in a set form of words; e.g. si res de qua agitur mea est, sestertios xxv nummos dare spondes? In this formula the si-clause (condicio) was of course variable, and might in some cases be so ingeniously worded (cf. 591) as to put the challenged party in the wrong; while the refusal of the latter to accept the challenge, no less than failure to win the sponsio, was tantamount to a praeiudicium (preliminary verdict). In this case Menaechmus, knowing that if the case proceeded in the ordinary way his client would not have a leg to stand upon (594-5), made desperate efforts to substitute a sponsio; efforts which were, however, frustrated by the folly of the client himself (593). The procedure was evidently per sacramentum; see Willems, p. 318. Metre requires eius for eius.

591. condiciones . . . confragosas, 'I proposed (a sponsio in) complicated and difficult terms'.

592. aut plus aut minu' . . . controuorsiam: some edd. take aut plus aut minus in the sense of plus minus (= circiter): 'I spoke on the matter in dispute pretty well as it was needful to speak'; cf. B. G. viii. 20. I non longius plus minus octo milibus: but the use of aut . . . aut seems to indicate a strong antithesis, and probably the meaning is 'either more or less than it was needful to speak'; i. e. he exaggerated some points and minimized others, in order to induce the aedile to allow a sponsio; he was guilty of suppressio ueri and suggestio falsi. See also Appendix, pp. 211-12.

opus erāt | dicto: for ablative of perf. part. pass. with opus est cf. Amph. 505 citius quod non factost usus fit quam quod factost opus.

dixeram controuorsiam: on the analogy of causam dicere. Either scan dīxērām | cōtro|uorsī|am (?) or read con|trōrsī|am.

593. quid . . . dedit? 'what of my cliens, who insisted on finding a surety?' i. e. letting the case proceed to a regular trial. Cf. note on 590. quid ill': sc. fecit? i. e. 'wasn't he an unutterable fool?'

594. manifestum . . . teneri, 'plainly liable'. From this line to 1132 the Ambrosian palimpsest is either lacking or undecipherable. See Introd. 8.

596. corrumpit, 'has spoilt it for me'; present tense, as the result of his action is still going on.

597. corrupti optumum: hiatus at the caesura of a short line must be regarded as doubtful; Bothe reads corruptit, Vahlen corrupti ita; cf. the similar hiatus in 599, where Guyet reads primum licitum est. Note the rhyming half-lines 597-600.

600. These closing lines are spoken in the hearing of the wife and Peniculus.

601. Scan quām hōdī|e: a trochaic line.

602. Peniculus and the wife converse aside. Scan uīrō mē | mālō mālē|; this line is anapaestic (like the next), and has a proceleusmatic in the third foot.

quid ais? 'what do you say to that?' The wife takes his question literally; cf. 138.

male, 'unfortunately'.

603. Men. is still unconscious that he is overheard. Scan mānē: māle ēr|it; proceleusmatic in sixth foot. Cf. 602, and see for both Introd. 7. I. B. b. ii, p. 44.

intro: into Erotium's house.

ubi mi bene sit, 'where I could have a good time'; cf. 621, 626, 677; sometimes the verb is personal; cf. 485 bene fui, where see note.

mane . . . potius : still aside : mane = 'just you wait !'

604. ne : particle of asseveration, often joined with adeo (cf. 160), or, if a woman is speaking, with ecaster (cf. 614). Scan nē illam ēcaster ; there is hiatus at the diacresis also.

illam = pallam. Matrona now confronts her husband.

faenerato apstulisti, 'you've stolen it at interest', i.e. 'you will pay dearly for stealing it'; cf. Asin. 902 ne illa ecaster faenerato funditat.

sic datur : either 'that's a good stroke', 'one for him'; or, taking do in this and similar phrases as having the meaning of -do (= τιθημι) in the compounds abdo, &c., 'that's the way to do it', 'that's your style'. In any case it expresses malicious satisfaction ; cf. 628, and see note on 472 opserua quid dabo. Cf. also Pseud. 155 ; Truc. 634 ; Stich. 766.

On the ground that the original order has been considerably disarranged by the copyists, Wagner reshuffles ll. 604-40 in an arbitrary manner and totally without warrant. The result is a jumble far less intelligible than the conversation as given by the MSS.

605. pote : sc. esse (= posse) : cf. Epid. 227 negant pendi potis (or pote), where, as here, the MSS. read potesse.

606. Menaechmus, thus taken by surprise, adopts a tone of innocent sympathy. Not realizing that he has been overheard, or that he has a double whose actions have brought upon him the wrath of his parasite, he has no inkling of the coming storm.

uin hunc rogem? Men. says this in a conciliatory tone, as not wishing to trouble her ; hence her answer.

607. perge tu : Pen. eggs on the wife, as below, 611.

609. quidam pallam—abstulit she is going to say, when Pen. interrupts her with a remark addressed to Men., who shows alarm at the mention of the palla. The use of quidam implies that the culprit is known.

quid paues? masks were not introduced on the Roman stage until the time of the great actor Roscius, a contemporary of Cicero : before his time wigs and paint were used. The actor representing Menaechmus would here express alarm and perplexity by grimaces. See Intro. 4.

610. nisi . . . incutit : some edd. assign these words to Men. as an 'aside' ; but the next line is thus rendered pointless. Possibly Men. may have added them in a low tone intended for Peniculus's ear alone.

palla pallorem : play upon words. Warner, rendering quid paues? 'Why do ye blush?', translates here : 'He cannot cloake his blushing'.

611. at (= 'well') refers to Men.'s look of surprise when he realizes that Pen. is against him. The word justifies assigning the latter part of 610 to Pen.

MENAECHMI

ne . . . comesses, 'you should not have eaten up'; in past jussive sentences the imperfect subjunctive is always employed in O. Lat., probably as being the past of the imperatival pres. subj.; e. g. ne comedas. Cf. Merc. 633-4 requireres, rogitares quis esset; so Verg. Aen. viii. 643 at tu dictis, Albane, maneres. In classical Latin the pluperfect is more common; cf. Aen. iv. 604-6.

612. non taces? for tense cf. quin taces?

non . . . taceo: the present is normal with non in an answer to a command or its equivalent; cf. Stich. 92-3 PAM. adside hic, pater. AN. non sedeo isti.

nutat ne loquar: addressed to the wife. nutat takes the construction of a verb of command.

613. nuto . . . nicto: nuto is a general term for making signs, but in a special sense = sign with the head; nicto = sign with the eyes (wink).

614. Kiessling places this line after 619. It certainly seems out of place here, and 615 would follow 613 more naturally; 620 comes abruptly after 619, while it would be the natural continuation of 614.

615. nihil hoc confidentius: a colloquialism; cf. 631; Cic. ad Fam. iv. 4.2 uictor quo nihil erat moderatius. Confidentius in a bad sense.

quin, 'actually'; corroborative, as in 635, 687; see 1051 note.

quae uides: his nodding, 612.

616. Scan deosque by synizesis; cf. 655, and see Introd. 7. II. c. Men. tries to draw a red herring across the trail by protesting his innocence of a minor charge.

617. credit . . . de 'isti': Pen. mockingly repeats the word used by Men.; 'she believes you now about "over there"; but go back to the other point.' This is the reading of Pradel, who takes isti as an adverb; it may, however, be dative in both places, no change to abl. being needed in the latter place, as it = the word isti. MSS. read istis, 'those words of yours'. Perhaps Men. used isti as a dative, and Messenio repeats it as an adverb for sake of contrast with illuc.

illuc: i. e. to the palla. Pen. brings him back to the real point.

618. quó ěgō | redeam? Men. uses redeam, as Pen. has just used redi, figuratively; Pen. pretends to take his question literally. The second foot is a proceleusmatic.

619. istaec, 'which you're talking about'.

rem . . . suam: her 'business', i. e. of making it unpleasant for Men. He says this in order to shame her to further efforts. After this line Kiessling places 614; see note there.

620. Menaechmus assumes the rôle of a dutiful and sympathetic husband.

621. responsant, 'answer back'.

inpune non erit, sc. illis.

nugas agis, 'you're talking nonsense', or 'you're making a fool of yourself'. The pitiless repetition of this answer to each of Men.'s hypocritical questions would be effective on the stage.

622. tristis . . . est: as if talking to himself in great concern. One MS. reads es. tristis = 'upset'.

non . . . sati', 'not at all'.

623. familiarium, 'of the household'.

624. num . . . saltem? 'at any rate you're surely not angry with me?'

626. mea uxor: Men. now tries endearments; hence blan-ditur.

bellus, 'the pretty fellow', 'your fine husband'.

627. num te appello? 'am I talking to you?'. Men. tries to silence the parasite, and at the same time, in the hope of dividing the hostile forces, attempts to caress his wife: hence aufer manum: cf. Amph. 903 (Alcmena to Jupiter) potin ut apstineas manum?

628. sic datur: see note on 604, and cf. 472.

properato: ironical exhortation: 'now go and . . .' So deri-deto, 629.

comesse: infin. pres. of comedo, representing original comed-e-se. Cf. comesses (imperf. subj.), 611.

630. huc: pointing to Erotium's house.

633. Scan mīhi ēssē: see Introd. 7. I. A. b, pp. 42-3.

sinciput: cf. 506.

634. negabas: sc. te; cf. 482, 538, &c.

aibas: cf. Amph. 807; Asin. 208, &c.; contrast 532 above, aiebas. The regular termination of the fourth-conjugation imperf. indic. was originally -i-bam (-bam being connected with the root fu- seen in fuī); the form in -iebam, originally regular in verbs of the facio class, was extended by false analogy to fourth-conjugation verbs. See also note on scibo, 386.

635. ut = postquam. 'Why, it's only now at last that I'm getting back home after parting with you a while ago.'

636. noui ego te: referring back to 634 negabas me nouisse, but with secondary meaning, 'I know what your word is worth'.

qui: instr. ablative: 'you didn't think I had the power' (or, perhaps, 'the spirit') 'to pay you out'.

638. eam ipsus [i] roga: see App. Crit. i is bracketed here (as by Ritschl, who reads ēāmpse | rōgā; perhaps rightly, as the sense required is 'ask her') on the ground that the three speakers were standing close together; but i is sometimes used contemptuously without reference to actual motion; cf. Verg. Aen. ix. 634 i, uerbis uirtutem include superbis; in this use i nunc (et) . . . is very common; cf. Ovid, Her. iii. 26 i nunc, et cupidi nomen amantis habe. Omitting i, scan ēam ipsus | rōgā quid | hōc est; retaining

it, scan ēam īpsūs | $\frac{1}{2}$ rōgā | quid hōc ēst; in the latter case cf. for the order Ter. Ad. 917 illas abi et traducc. (Or perhaps in both cases scan first foot by synizesis ēam īpsus.)

639. quasi tu nescias: sc. rogas; but see next note.

639^a. This line is an anticipation of 645 (where the MSS. reading is, as here, surrup̄ta est tibi; see note there). Its presence here is probably due to the error of a copyist, whose eye glanced from nescias 638 to scias 644 with the result that 640-4 were omitted in his copy. When the error was corrected, instead of 640-4 being replaced after 639, 640-5 were replaced after 639^a. There is no need to suppose that 639^a has usurped the place of an original line now lost; if it is omitted, Matrona's speech runs quasi tu nescias me rogas? (indignant question), while the actual disclosure of the offence is thus artistically postponed a little longer.

640. Scan ō hōmīnem; hiatus is usual after interjections ending with a vowel; Intro. 7. IV. D. a. i. For exclamatory accus. cf. Bacch. 759 o imperatorem probum! Most. 1071 o mortalem malum!

641. non potes, &c.: addressed to Men.

642. nil pudet: sc. te; in O.Lat. pudet and other impersonal verbs (as paenitet, oportet) were sometimes used personally, the subject being a neut. pronoun or pronominal word, or n. pl. adj.; cf. Epid. 107 idne pudet te . . . ? Ter. Ad. 754 non te haec pudet? It is, however, possible here to take nil as adverbial accus.

643. tūa uoluntate = sponte tua.

prōfiteri: first syllable long; but cf. Capt. 480 prōf̄itetur. So Plautus varies between prōficiscor and prōf̄iciscor (e.g. Trin. 149 prōfecturus). Profiteor is used of voluntary confession.

ades: sc. animo, 'attend'; cf. Merc. 568 prius hoc auscul̄ta atque ades.

645. surrup̄tast mihi? Men. cunningly pretends chagrin at the loss; what has been stolen from his better half has been stolen from himself as paterfamilias. MSS. have tibi (cf. 639^a), evidently the correction of some dull copyist, rendering the next line pointless; mihi is restored by an unnamed scholar quoted by Lambinus.

646. uiden ut . . . captat? addressed to Matrona; the rest of the speech is addressed to Men.

captat, 'tries to take you in', i.e. by a sophistry; so in Amph. 422, 795.

647. salua non foret: i.e. as it now is safe (apud phrygionem). Camerarius's alteration of non to nunc spoils the sense.

648. nil . . . est: haughtily, to Pen. (cf. 323).

sed . . . ais? with polite interest, to his wife; cf. 626-7.

periit: used as passive of perdo; cf. 665 perdam.

649. Note ille emphatic, with first syllable long and bearing strong ictus) (illam unaccented).

650. quis is homo est? MSS. have hic for is, contrary to usage (cf.

next line and Curc. 581, 652); is was written his, which was changed to hic; the same error occurs Capt. 19, 335.

factum: the verb is omitted, as the expression is exclamatory; cf. 338.

651. quis is Mēn'aechmust? spoken with an air of the most egregious innocence.

Scan tū istic; so in 653, 937. For istic emphasizing second person cf. Amph. 366, 575.

653-4. noctuam . . . 'tu tu': this noctua is our tawny owl (synnium aluco), popularly called brown-, wood-, or hoot-owl. Its note is popularly represented by 'tu-whit, tu-whoo'; this is the owl whose melancholy hoot we hear at night in well-wooded districts of our isles. The Romans represented its note as tu tu (pron. too too), whence a verb tutubare was formed. The Greeks called the bird τεῦτε; cf. Welsh cweddihaw, German Uhu, and Ausonius Idyll. ed. Weber xii. de litt. monos. 8 Cecropiis ignota notis feralis sonans U.

655. Cf. 616.

656. non dedisse: sc. me. It would perhaps give more point to print a dash after dedisse; i. e. to suppose that Men. was going to say non dedisse dono (cf. 657 non condonauit), and that by interrupting him, Pen. made his perjury appear grosser.

nos: sc. adiuramus nos. The comma should follow, not precede, nos.

657. condonauit = dono dedi; but see 689.

sic, 'just', 'merely': the word would be accompanied by a gesture; cf. 197, 1028; Cic. pro Rosc. Am. 26. 71 non sic nudos in flumen deicere.

utendam dedi, 'lent'; cf. Asin. 444 scyphos quos utendos dedi; Aul. 96 utenda uasa . . . rogant, 'ask the loan of'.

658. equidem . . . tūam: emphatic.

chlamydem: a man's extra outer garment, corresponding to a woman's palla: 'cloak'.

do foras . . . quoiquam utendum, 'lend to anyone out of the house'.

pallium: a man's ordinary outer garment in a fabula palliata; cf. 130 note.

661. faxo referetur: colloquial construction; cf. 326; contrast 539-40 faxo referantur.

ex re tua . . . feceris, 'you will find you have done so to your advantage', i. e. 'you had better do so'. Cf. Asin. 538 si quidem ex re consultas tua.

662. Scan ītrō ībīs; cf. 231 circūmimīs.

663. quid mihi futurum est? 'what (reward) shall I get?' (quid me futurum est, 'what will become of me?')

664. quando quid: this form of the indefinite pronoun, which appears in classical Latin only after certain conjunctions (ne, si, nisi, num, cum), is used more freely in O. Lat.; cf. Stich. 201 i quando quem auctionem facturum sciunt. Exit Matrona into her house.

665. domi with nihil est.

666. cum uiro cum uxore: he shakes his fist at Men.'s house and says, 'curse you' (uos = the household), 'husband and wife and all'; cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 605 natumque patremque Cum genere exstinxem. For the form of expression cf. Poen. 588 cum eo cum quiqui ('at all events').

ad forum: where he will try to secure a new victim.

667. excidisse: used metaphorically of missing or losing something one regarded as certain; cf. Ter. Andr. 423 erus... uxore excidit, 'has been disappointed of a wife'. Exit Pen.

668. exclussit: generally used of a mistress refusing to admit a lover; cf. 671; here literal.

670. si tibi displiceo: he apostrophizes his wife, who has gone into the house, 664.

patiundum: spoken in a tone of mock resignation, to imply that it is not so very hard to bear.

at: used after si here and 746 in the sense of 'at least', 'at any rate'. So at... tamen in classical Latin.

673. redimam, 'will buy instead'; cf. 680.

heus! used to attract attention. Scan heus! ēc|quīs hīc ēst.

674. aliquis euocate: for plural verb with singular pronoun cf. 192, 779, 785; Merc. 910 heus! aliquis actutum huc foras exite; Ter. Ad. 634 aperite aliquis actutum ostium. Here it may be explained as a case of partial apposition to the subject; 'call her out, one of you'.

675. Scan quīs hīc mē and quām aētati (but see App. Crit.). On the hiatus see Introd. 7. IV. A. b. ii, p. 52.

aetati tuae = tibi; cf. Rud. 374 uae capiti atque aetati tuae! Propert. i. 2. 31 nostrae gratissima uitae (= mihi).

676. It was necessary for everything to take place outside the houses, i.e. on the stage. See Introd. 4, p. 17.

677. quid est quod: quod adverbial = propter quod; cf. 762; Most. 69 quid est quod tu me nunc obtuere, furcifer? Epid. 570.

tibi... sit uolup: uolup is an adverb, standing for uolupē as facul, simul, for facile, simile; it is cognate with Gk. ἔλπομαι (root ελπ-). The word usually has a bad sense; cf. Asin. 942 hic senex si quid clam uxorem suo animo fecit uolup. For this colloquial use of an adverb with esse see 485 note, and cf. Mil. 747 si illis aegrest mihi id quod uolup est.

679. eam repeats pallam illam; colloquial pleonasm; cf. Poen. 1069 pater tuos, is erat frater patruelis meus.

rem omnem, ut factum est: colloquial constructio κατὰ σύνεσιν; cf. Truc. 851 ut factumst fecit omnem rem palam: in a similar phrase, 519, the concord is observed.

ordine, 'from beginning to end'; with resciuit. Cf. Verg. Aen. iii. 179 remque ordine pando.

680. bis tanta pluris, 'worth twice as much'; one would expect tanto, but one MS. (B¹) here, and all MSS. in 800 (multo tanta . . . amplius) read tanta; cf. Rud. 521 multo tanta miserior; Stich. 339 multo tanta plus; Cic. Verr. II. iii. 97 quinquies tanta amplius. Probably the word thus used is a technical expression employed in arithmetic or commerce. Havet suggests that there is an ellipse of pecuniā; i. e. here bis tantā pluris = bis tantā pecuniā pluris, lit. 'at a larger price by twice as much money', i. e. 'twice as expensive'. This explanation fits the expressions used here and in the passage of Cicero quoted above; the phrase multo tantā with a comparative, which occurs in the other passages quoted, and which is found in late authors (e. g. Appuleius, Met. vii. 15; x. 21), seems to be a popular extension of the usage by false analogy.

quam uoles: either with bis tantā pluris: or take quam as indef. relative (not only is it to be more costly, but she can have the feminine pleasure of choosing it herself). Brix³ reads quom.

681. ut ferrēs: contrast fērres in next line. For change of accent due to difference of grouping cf. 281-2, and see note on 321-2.

682. fieret nouom = reconcinnaretur; cf. 527.

683. mihi tu ut dederis pallam . . . ? 'What? you gave me the mantle?' ut with the subjunctive is thus used in indignant questions rejecting a thought or statement as absurd or untrue; sometimes it is joined to an interrogative particle, as Curc. 616 mean ancilla libera ut sit, quam ego numquam emisi manu? The usage is found in classical Latin, e. g. Cic. Cat. i. 9. 22 te ut ulla res frangat? tu ut unquam te corrigas? Cic. Tusc. ii. 18. 42 egone ut te interellem? The construction is sometimes explained as due to an ellipse of fierine potest; and here it would be possible, though less idiomatic, to take ut dederis as dependent on factum (esse). See also 299 note, and Lindsay, Syntax of Pl., p. 66.

numquam . . . reperiēs: see 533 note, and cf. Poen. 762.

684. postquam, 'since'. Replace the colon at end of line by a comma.

685. nunc: sc. primum.

postillac (= postilla; for form cf. posthac) repeats colloquially the post of postquam. (Not in Lewis and Short.)

quam rem agis, 'what you are driving at', 'what your game is'.

686. quia commisi, &c.: either (1) take ut me defrudes as depending on commisi: 'because I have given you an opportunity of cheating me'; or (2) take quia commisi absolutely, 'because I was trusting', and make ut me defrudes explanatory of ad eam rem. The latter interpretation gives more point to the next line, and has a parallel in Aul. 574-5 scio quam rem agat; ut me deponat uino, eam adfectat uiam. Bothe suggests quae commisi; i. e. ut me defrudes (eis) quae (tibi) commisi.

687. Men. imagines that she means he is now trying to get the things from her.

688. nec te: Erotium interrupts him, mockingly echoing his neque edepol te.

ultro with orauī; she was not the one to mention it first.

689. Scan dēdisti ēlam; but see App. Crit. Shortening is justified by elision of final syllable: see Introd. 7. I. A. a. i, p. 42.

690. patiar: in a sarcastic tone of resignation. She will put up with it, as she must; but she will not forget it.

tibi habe, aufer: the hiatus, if allowed, should probably come after tibi; see note on 389. Guyet proposes habe tibi. We may also scan tibi hābē, | aufer (hiatus at pause).

691. in loculos: sarcastic exaggeration; cf. Hor. Epp. ii. 1. 175 gestit enim nummum in loculos demittere.

692. ne frustra sis: this common phrase may be taken either as a prohibition ('don't make any mistake', 'be assured of that'), or as final, i.e. '(I tell you) in order that you may not deceive yourself'. Cf. Capt. 854, &c.

693. habes despiciatui: the latter word occurs only here and Cic. pro Flacco 27. 65 si quis despiciatui ducitur. Plautus makes very free use of the predicative dative, especially of verbal nouns of the fourth declension; cf. 695 frustratui; Poen. 1281 ludificatui; Cist. 365 remque nostram habes perditui et praedatui.

694. frustra, 'for nothing', 'fruitlessly' (from her point of view). She implies, however, that she will not sacrifice business to revenge.

ductare = domum ducere (meretricem); cf. Poen. 868 ductas gratieis; Asin. 164-5, 169. It is wrong therefore to take frustra ductare as = frustra habere ('cheat'). Ritschl suggests frustra's, me ductare non potes.

695. frustratui: ἀπαξ λεγόμενον; cf. 693 note.

696. nimis iracunde: sc. est: 'Gad, she's tremendously angry at last'. For this use of the adverb cf. Merc. 583 pulcre ut simus, and see 485, note. Seyffert reads hercle iracunde to give the latter word its usual accent: but possibly when the last syllable was elided the accent was thrown back (iracund').

heus tu: cf. 673. Erotium is just disappearing into the house.

697. etiamne astas? etiam (-ne) is joined with second person pres. indic. in impatient commands or despairing requests; cf. Trin. 514 etiam tu taces? Here 'won't you stop?'

etiam audes, 'won't you be good enough . . .?' For dropping of second -ne cf. Pers. 474 sumne probus, sum lepidus civis? and for this use of audes cf. sodes (= si audes), 'please'.

698. exclusissimus, 'utterly out in the cold'; comic formation; cf. Aul. 633 uerberabilissime. Warner renders vividly: 'Now I am everie way shut out for a very bench-whistler.'

700. hanc rem amicos: for double accusative cf. Cic. Att. vii. 20. 2 nec te id consulo. Here there is also an object-clause, quid . . .

cescant. The departure of Menaechmus I is merely a device to clear the stage for Menaechmus II; a short pause here. Men. I has gone off L. (to the forum); presently Men. II enters R., from the direction of the harbour, where he has been vainly searching the quay-side taverns for Messenio.

703. aliquo . . . in ganeum: cf. Ter. Ad. 359 credo abductum in ganeum aliquo. Warner tr. 'I feare he is fallen into some lewd companie'.

704. prouisam, 'I'll look out to see'. She is just stepping out of her door.

quam mox with subj. after verb of expectation = 'how long it will (would) be before . . .'; cf. Livy iii. 37. 5 expectabant quam mox . . . comitia edicerentur; Cic. Rosc. Com. 15. 44 quid expectas quam mox ego dicam? In direct questions, quam mox is always followed by a present tense in Plautus; cf. 153; Rud. 1412.

707. accipiam, 'give him a reception' (a warm one). Warner: 'I will go ring a peale through both his eares.'

709. flagitium hominis: see 489 note.

710. quae te res agitat? agitat is a strong word; cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 471 scænis agitated Orestes; And. 642 larvae hunc . . . agitant senem. Tr. 'What (spectre) is harrying you?' (in reference to 708-9; he thinks she is the victim of hallucination). Brix changes the MSS. order (quae res te) in accordance with Plautine usage; cf. Curc. 92; Merc. 134, &c.

710-11. etiamne . . . audes? not as in 697, but 'do you actually dare . . .?' The real Simon Pure seldom plucked up courage to 'answer back'.

713. For hiatus before interjectional phrase and at pause see Introd. 7. IV. D. a. ii, c. i, p. 55.

audaciam: for exclamatory accusative cf. 640. The same phrase occurs Ter. Heaut. 313.

714. Hecubam . . . canem: cf. Eur. Ilec. 1265 κύων γενήσεται, &c.; Cic. Tusc. iii. 26. 63 Hecubam autem putant propter animi acerbitatem . . . fingi in canem esse conuersam; Juv. x. 271-2 torua canino Latrauit rictu quae post hunc uixerat uxor. The legend was perhaps invented to account for the name Cynossema (Κυνὸς σῆμα).

715. Graii, the Greeks of heroic or classical times) (Graculi, the degenerate Greeks of a later age (cf. Juv. iii. 77-8 omnia nouit Graeculus esuriens). Graeci is the ordinary geographical or ethnographical term.

717. omnia mala, 'all kinds of abuse'.

quemquem aspexerat: sc. in eum (quemquem): ut quemque asp. would have been more in accordance with Plautus's ordinary usage.

718. coepta appellari est: with a passive infinitive the passive of coepti is regular.

Canes : archaic form of nominative ; cf. Trin. 172 ; Phaedrus ii. 4. 2 feles.

719. istaec, 'that you commit'. Ritschl, to avoid hiatus after ēgo, reads nōn ēgo īs|taēc tūā ; for this tautology cf. 721, 735, 738. See, however, note on 389.

720. aetatem : acc. of duration, 'all my life' ; cf. Asin. 274 aetatem uelim seruire : see also 675 note.

uiduam : used of a divorced woman ; cf. 113.

Hiatus here and ll. 737, 739-40, possibly marks utterance checked by sobs ; see App. Crit. on 740.

721. The line repeats 719 and is itself tautological (istaec . . . tua . . . quae tu facis) ; a natural symptom of anger and agitation ; cf. 735, 738.

722. quid id ad me : sc. attinet ? cf. Poen. 1021 quid istuc ad me ? id anticipates the following pair of alternative questions, of which the first lacks an interrogative particle ; cf. Rud. 1106 id . . . seruae sint istae an liberae.

te nuptam : sc. esse, 'endure married life'.

725-6. non . . . patiar . . . quin : lit. 'I shall not endure not to . . . ' ; the quin-clause is due to the sense of non patiar, which = nil me impedit ; cf. Ter. Heaut. 761-2 non possum pati quin tibi caput demulceam.

726. quam . . . perferam : for ellipse of potius cf. Rud. 1114 tacita bonast mulier semper quam loquens. So 969 below quam = tamquam. Subjunctive of rejected alternative ; cf. 332 potius quam . . . astes, 1059 ; or perhaps perferam is fut. indic. ; see note on 332.

727. mea . . . caussa, 'for aught I care' ; cf. 1029. Gk. ἐμὸν γ' ἔνεκα.

728. dum with fut. indic. = quamdū ; cf. 93.

729. at mihi negabas, &c. : the omission of the object seems curious ; see App. Crit. Niem. reads at mihi hānc (cf. 732). This statement is not consistent with Men. I's words, 655-7, but such inaccuracy is natural on the part of an angry woman ; Ritschl, however, reads haut for at, while Ladewig and Fleckeisen, followed by Wagner, completely disarrange the MSS. order of ll. 729-41. Brix⁵ supposes that Matrona made an attempt to snatch away the palla, which Men. frustrated ; hence at. Take mihi with surrupuisse.

732. Scan tūn tibi hānc ; see Introd. 7. I. A. b. and cf. 1072.

734. istuc : in 'anticipatory' apposition to the following sentence, drawing attention to it ; 'look here !' Cf. 107 id quoque iam, 536 istuc.

736. i, Decio : she calls to a slave within the house.

737. ut ueniat : Langen, followed by Brix⁵, holds that quaere here = quaese ('ask' : for constr. of quaeso see Bacch. 179) ; but it is probably better, with Sonnenschein, to take ut ueniat as final, and quaere as 'try to find'.

ita rem esse: almost 'that it is necessary'; lit. 'that there is profit in so doing'; cf. 661 ex re tua . . . feceris (Capt. 296 tua re fec.), and the phrase in rem alicuius, 'to one's profit'. On the double hiatus see App. Crit., and note on 720. Cf. Introd. 7. IV. C. b and D. c. i, d, pp. 54-6.

739. pallam: probably the hiatus should here be avoided by reading with Vahlen pallas, plural of exaggeration or of generalization, as 796 uiros, 803 pallas; in the latter line B² has pallam.

740. On the second hiatus see App. Crit., and note on 720. Cf. Introd. 7. IV. B. b and IV. D. d, pp. 53, 56.

741. fabulor: in allusion to fabulas 724.

742. quod bibam: i.e. an antidote or a prophylactic.

743. qui possim, 'to enable me'.

744. quē tū hōm inēm {med}: Ritschl inserts med before hominem; but the hiatus after tū is regular: Introd. 7. IV. A. a. i.

arbitrere: MSS. have arbitrare, corrected by Luchs on the ground that elsewhere Plautus invariably uses subjunctive in a clause dependent on nescio. See Sonnenschein's Rudens, notes on 356, 385.

745. simitu . . . cum, 'just as well as', ironical; cf. 748 noui cum Calcha simul. Possibly the meaning is: 'I made your acquaintance on the same day as Porthaon's'; cf. 749. simitu is said to be a compound of the I.-E. root sem- (= one), and itu, abl. of verbal noun itus (= going); cf. Stich. 743 simitu exissem uobiscum.

Porthaone: Porthaon was the grandfather of Hercules' wife Deianeira. The name is chosen here as that of an obscure mythological character.

746. at pol, 'surely at least'; see note on 670.

748. illum here and in 746, 749, is emphatic, as the scansion shows; 'do you know him?' (ironically).

cum Calcha simul; see note on 745. In view of 749, probably noui is here at any rate to be taken as aorist; cf. 299, 501. Calcha, heteroclitic form, for usual Calchante; cf. Chremem, -is, side by side with Chremetem, -is, in Terence. The name of Calchas (the aged seer of the Greeks before Troy) is chosen here as that of a doting greybeard.

749. eodem die: cf. 539-40 simul.

750. The parallelism of the two halves shows that the meaning is 'Do you deny knowing my father just as you deny knowing me?', and partly accounts for the double iambic ending, on which see further Introd. 6. II. A. f. iii, p. 29.

751. dicam: fut. indic. corresponding to si uis adducere (= si adduces) in the protasis; cf. our use of auxiliary 'will' to form futures.

752. pariter . . . soles: elliptical, = pariter hoc (facis) atque alias res (facere) soles; cf. 766 ita istaec solent; Bacch. 203; Stich. 530.

753. The Senex has entered L., l. 747, and now totters slowly across the stage to the centre, where his daughter and Men. II have been conversing; by the time he reaches his daughter (775) Men. has moved away R. (cf. 777). As the Roman stage was very long (cf. Introd. 4, p. 17), there was plenty of time for him to deliver this canticum as he approached. The halting, rather jerky, bacchiac metre suits the old man's gait. See Schema Metrorum.

ut aetas mea est, &c., 'as (far as) my age allows, and in so far as it is necessary to do so'.

hoc usu' facto est: usus est takes the same construction as opus est; hoc may either agree with facto, as Rud. 398 iam istoc magis usus factost, or be nom., as often with neuter pronouns in these phrases; cf. Amph. 505 citius quod non factost usus fit quam quod factost opus. For abl. of pass. partic. used thus cf. 592.

754. progredi: so Bothe alters MSS. progredi, on metrical grounds; for the form cf. Cas. 862 progredi; Pseud. 859 progredimino. Consonant-stems with the -YO suffix gave rise to two classes of verbs; in one, -i- predominated (third-conjugation verbs in -io), in the other, -i- prevailed (certain fourth-conjugation verbs). In O. Lat. the two classes were not clearly differentiated. It is possible that we should here retain the MSS. reading and take the first syllable of properabo as long (cf. profiteri 643; see note there, and Lindsay, Lat. Lang. p. 590 § 45). The line would then run gradum prō|ferām, prō gredi prō|perābo, and we may suppose that each repetition of prō- was accompanied by a step forward with the aid of the scipio (856).

756. consitus: cf. Cat. 64. 208 caeca mentem caligine Theseus Consitus; Verg. Aen. viii. 307 ibat rex obsitus aeuo.

757. onustum: sc. senectute; cf. Merc. 671-3.

758. mers: this word also appears in the forms merx, mercis, merces (cf. frux, frugis, fruges, stirps, stirpis, stirpes, &c.). In these and similar cases the longer forms are the earlier (cf. Cas. 380 sortis). In popular speech x and hard s seem to have differed little in sound, to judge by forms appearing in late inscriptions such as milex, ariex, conius. See Ritschl, Opusc. ii. 652-6.

ergo is often used thus when a sentiment is repeated: 'yes (after all) it is a bad business'. Edd. take it here as = ἐργον, and quote Mil. 1043, where, however, it has its usual meaning of 'accordingly' if we accept the conjecture deus for heus at the beginning of the line.

759. res . . . pessumas is taken as a single expression, and hence can be qualified by another adjective without et; cf. 66 maxumam malam crucem, 849.

760. longu' sermost: indicative (in spite of si autumem) as in the phrase longum est dicere, where we should say 'It would be tedious'. The length of the tale is represented as actually brought to the test; cf. Cic. pro Archia, § 15 difficile est . . . confirmare.

761. in . . . corde: an inversion of Homer's κατὰ φρενα καὶ κατὰ θυμόν. Cf. Merc. 590.

763. irem: regular sequence, as expetit is aorist-perfect.

763^a. mihi certius facit = me certiozem facit; cf. 242 certum qui faciat mihi.

763^a-4. quid uelit: dependent on certius facit, but amplifying quid id sit. Lambinus continues the construction by reading quid uelit, quid me accersat.

767. postulant = ἀξιοῦσι. Cf. 794, 796.

dote fretae: his daughter was dotata; cf. 61. For the sentiment cf. Epid. 180 AP. pulchra edepol dos pecuniast. PE. quae quidem pol non maritast; Hor. Od. iii. 24. 19 Nec dotata regit uirum Coniunx. Mommsen ascribes the abuse of wives, especially rich wives, which is a feature of Roman Comedy, to the Catonian opposition to the growing emancipation of wives from their husbands' manus or marital power. Wives were beginning to manage their dowries de facto, though de iure a married woman had no property of her own.

768. haud . . . saepe are not to be taken together: saepe qualifies the whole sentence; 'in many cases', 'it often happens that . . .'

769. modu', 'a limit'.

quoad, 'up to which (and no further)'. It is implied that a wife ought to put up with a good deal. quoad in Plautus is not temporal, but is the relative corresponding to adeo ('to that point'); cf. Asin. 296 quoad uires ualent.

770-1. A general statement.

771. commissi . . . iurgi: partitive genitives depending on quid; caussa: sc. arcessendi, 'without some fault or quarrel's being at the bottom of it'. Hiatus after second foot; but see App. Crit.

772. eampse: cf. 179-80 eapse ecceam exit, and see note there. eampse is found also Aul. 814; Cist. 170. In classical Latin the old form of declension survives in the Ciceronian word reapse (= re cāpse), e.g. ad Fam. ix. 15. 1.

773-4. See App. Crit. for various ways in which the line has been scanned. Taking it with Lindsay as a trochaic octonarius, read ēiūs, and scan uirūm uidē o id est quōd (proceleusmatic in fifth foot). Brix transposes ēiūs | uirūm uidē o tristem, taking ante . . . tristem as bacchiac, the rest as an iambic clausula; cf. Capt. 783-4. The scansion ēiūs gives either a dactyl in the fourth foot before diaeresis, which is not allowed, or a dactyl followed by an anapaest, which is very rare; see Introd. 6. II. E. b, d, D. f, pp. 52-3.

tristem: predicative.

775. appellabo hanc and ibo aduorsum are 'asides'.

776. saluen = saluisne rebus? 'Do I come (to find) all well? Isn't all well, that you send for me?' Cf. the expression sat in salve? sc. agitur.

777. destitit: here and in the corresponding line, 810, desisto is used in its original sense of 'stand aloof'; cf. Most. 787. Lambinus prefers to read distitit from disto. Men. II has walked away to the right, really to look out for Messenio.

778. uelitati: a verb derived from uelites, light-armed troops attached to a legion, skirmishers; so we say: 'You've had some sort of a skirmish.' Cf. Cic. ad Fam. ix. 20. I scurram uelitem; Asin. 307 uerbiuelitationem, Gk. λογομαχία; Herod. viii. 64 ἔπεισιν ἀκροβολισάμενοι.

779. uter meruistis: a natural colloquialism; so we carelessly say: 'Have either of you seen it?' Cf. 674, 785, 1105, 1119; Epid. 259 quod laudetis . . . uterque.

paucis: sc. uerbis; cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 116 paucis (aduerte) docebo.

non longós logos: cognate acc., non going closely with longos (hence not ne), 'no long rigmarole': logos is contemptuous; cf. Stich. 221, where a parasite, selling his stock-in-trade, says logos ridiculos uendo: a foreign word is adopted as slang; cf. Christopher Sly's paucas pallabris.

780. nusquam = nulla in re.

hoc primum: adverbial.

te apsoluo, 'I settle your business', i.e. 'set your mind at ease'. The word is sometimes used of money payment; cf. Epid. 466 te apsoluam breui.

781. hic: she points to Men.'s house.

durare: sc. hic; 'continue'; cf. Amph. 882 durare nequeo in aedibus.

782. proin tu: see 327 note.

quid istūc . . . est? 'What's your trouble?'

Iudibrio: cf. Shakespeare, Com. of Err. II. i. 101: 'Poor I am but his stale' (i.e. laughing-stock). Warner uses the same word here.

783. mandauisti = in manum dedisti, here in legal sense of manus (marital power).

784. The hiatus perhaps is justified by his deliberate preaching tone; but Ritschl's id edixi is reasonable (haplography).

785. ut caueres: colloquial neglect of strict sequence, edixi being true perfect; contrast 787-8 monstrauī . . . ut . . . geras. See Lindsay, Syntax of Plautus, V. 10, pp. 56-7, for numerous instances of a similar kind.

786. quī ego is|tūc . . . cauere: for accus. cf. 265.

787-8. nisi non uis: sc. respondere; 'Yes, unless . . .' Courteous affirmative.

monstrauī = praecepi.

789. Scan quid illē | faciāt | nē id op|seruēs | quō ēāt; hiatus with shortening of monosyllables ending in long vowels; cf. 786; Introd. 7. IV. A. a. i, p. 51. The three indirect interrogative clauses depend directly on opserues, id being redundant. For the sentiment cf. 115.

COMMENTARY: LINES 776-803

790. at enim, 'but indeed', introduces an objection of the speaker; not, as in classical Latin, a supposed objection which the speaker disposes of.

hinc . . . ex proxumo: to be taken together, 'next door to this (my) house'; hinc = a me.

sapit, 'shows sense'.

791. ob is tanc industriam, 'owing to that diligence of yours', i. e. in spying upon him; 'for your pains'; cf. 123-4.

faxo amabit, 'he'll love her all the more, I'll warrant'.

794. una opera . . . postules: the subjunctive is potential; 'you might just as well claim'; cf. 796-7; Most. 259 una opera ebur atramento candefacere postules. For postulo in this sense cf. 767, 796.

ad cenam . . . promittat, 'accept an invitation to dinner'. Cf. Stich. 596; Cic. De Orat. ii. 7 quod ad fratrem promiserat. The phrase arose on the analogy of ad cenam uocare.

795. accipiat, 'entertain'. Scan āfūd sē with hiatus at the diaeresis.

seruirin = servire-ne: unaccented ē is weakened to i; cf. 928 facilin: so quippe unde inde make quippini undique indidem.

796. uiros: generalizing plural; cf. 803-4.

pensum: as if he were a female slave; cf. next line.

797. inter ancillas, &c.: perhaps an allusion to the story of Hercules and Omphale. Spinning and weaving were among a Roman matron's chief duties; cf. the picture of Lucretia, Livy i. 57. 9, and the laudatory epitaph on a Roman lady's tomb: Domi mansit; lanam fecit.

cārere: from the same root come carmen (carding instrument for wool), carminare, and carduus (teasel). Gk. καίρειν.

798. non equidem: sarcastic; 'it seems I did not . . .'

799. hinc = a me, 'on my side', i. e. as an advocate stands by his client; cf. Rud. 1409 huc = huic.

illim = illinc (here for ab illo): cf. Poen. 455.

800. multo tanta . . . amplius: multo is pleonastic; on tanta see 680 note.

801. auratam . . . uestitam, 'furnished with jewels and clothes'; cf. 120-1.

802. praehibet: original form of praebet. Scan praēhībet, or as disyllable; cf. 979.

melius . . . est, 'you had better'; see 1091 note.

sanam, 'sensible'; in an emphatic position.

803. pallas: generalizing plural, with a touch of exaggeration.

MENAECHMI

One MS. reads pallam, but cf. meretrices in next line. See also note on 739.

domo (not domi) through the influence of ex arcis; cf. 740.

804. Scan mēa orn- by synizesis.

805. istuc, 'what you accuse him of'.

806. quae . . . insimules: causal; subjunctive used as the case is hypothetical.

807. spinter: cf. aurum, 739, 803; ornamenta, 804. How did she know this? Probably Men. II was displaying the trinket conspicuously, just as in all innocence he was carrying the palla; cf. 730, 739.

hanc: she points to Erotium's house.

808. scibo. (ibo): hiatus at diaeresis coincident with pause in sense. ibo, restored by Camerarius, dropped out through haplography. On the form scibo see note on 386.

809. istuc . . . quod . . . dissertatis, 'the subject of your dispute'. One good MS. (D) has the stronger word discertatis.

812. qua | dé re aut | quōiūs rēi, 'concerning what matter, or of what fact in all the world (do you offer them as witnesses)?' The redundancy of the expression marks the old man's astonishment at Men.'s solemn exordium.

813. neque: the corresponding neque does not appear; owing to Matrona's interruption, 814, Men. starts afresh, 815, and confirms his new asseveration by an imprecation.

814. deierat? 'is he taking oaths (again)?' Matrona is thinking of the other Menaechmus's oaths, 616, 655. She was standing apart (cf. 810, 822), and could hear their words only imperfectly. Schöll proposes peierat; see App. Crit.

815-16. penetraui (pedem): cf. 400.

820. āis: cf. 487.

821. tu negas? &c.: cf. 631.

uero . . . inuere: Men. uses uero in the ordinary adversative sense: 'in truth I do deny it'; Senex counters with 'no, it's not in truth that you deny it', i. e. you're lying. MSS. have ludere, which Lindsay regards as an error for luuere, i. e. inuere (found nowhere else, but possible in sense of haud uere). Ritschl reads ludicre; Niem., incorporating a suggestion of Schöll, non uere. With either of latter two readings there is no hiatus at diaeresis.

822. nocte hac, 'last night'; to-night = proxima nocte. Perhaps with the suggestion 'in your sleep'.

824. non tu [te] tenes? 'don't you grasp that?' The -te is due to dittography; a dactyl in the seventh foot is inadmissible.

825. hanc rem gere, 'attend to the business in hand' (alias res agere = to pay no attention. Cf. Pseud. 195).

826. To fill the lacuna at end of line Leo suggests quid debeo (which would also complete the sense of 827); cf. Poen. 1233; Bacch. 884-5 numquid debetur tibi? quid illi molestus?

827. molestiaest = molestiae est (predic. dat.). See App. Crit.

828. Scan uident tu illic.

uirere: see App. Crit. Ritschl reads liuere; but cf. uiridis . . . coles; a greenish hue would indicate excess of bile, which the ancients regarded as a cause or concomitant of madness; cf. Hor. A.P. 301 o ego laeuis Qui purgor bilem sub uerni temporis horam!

829. ut . . . scintillant, uide! For these symptoms of madness cf. Capt. 594-6 ardent oculi . . . uident tu illi maculari corpus totum maculis luridis? atra bilis agitat hominem. So Ben Jonson, The Silent Woman, iv. 2: 'Lord, how idly he talks, and how his eyes sparkle! He looks green about the temples; do you see what blue spots he has?'

831. quid mihi meliust quam . . . adsimulem: without ut, cf. Rud. 328 quid mi meliust quam . . . opperiar? The subj. in these cases may be hortatory; cf. Rud. 377 capillum promittam optimumst, lit. 'Let me grow my hair long—'tis best so'. quam ut is more usual; cf. Rud. 220 quid mihi meliust . . . quam . . . ut secludam?

praedicant: i.e. by their enumeration of his symptoms. There is no need to mark a lacuna here with Ritschl, or to follow Acidalius in placing 843 after 829-30, and 831-2 after 834. Men. speaks these two lines aside, and immediately begins his pretended paroxysm with alarming contortions and grimaces; hence Matrona's exclamation, 833, and her father's advice, 834.

834. quam potest: MSS. have potes, for which cf. 435.

835. euhoe = εὐοῖ: cf. Hor. Od. ii. 19. 5, 7. See App. Crit. Men. now bursts out into wild Bacchic cries, followed by threats which constantly increase in violence until 869.

Bromie: an epithet of Bacchus, 'the noisy one', in reference to his noisy revel-bands; cf. Eur. Bacch. 141.

quo . . . in siluam: cf. 703 aliquo . . . in ganeum.

837. femina . . . canes: cf. 714-18; for the form canes, 718. For the expression cf. Truc. 284 musca . . . femina.

838. poste: for this old form of post, corresponding to ante, cf. 545, 1090.

hircus talust: see App. Crit. Lindsay thinks that alus may be an adjective ('rank-smelling') cognate with alium, garlic. Niem. imagines a compound hircosālius (hircus, salio), i.e. 'frisky goat', but hircosālius would seem to be the proper form; cf. Bacch. 362 crucisālum. Müller's hircus caluos seems an absurd combination; and Senex is grey, not bald, 854. Madness displays, not inconsistency, but the idée fixe. It is, however, inconsequent; cf. next line (unless Dionysus's trial before Pentheus is there referred to). Schöll suggests squalus (= squalidus), used by Ennius (ap. Non. 172. 20).

840. capiti: perhaps here in special reference to his affliction;

Warner tr. 'Out upon thee Bedlam foole!' For hiatus after mihī cf. 827, 389 note. Schöll, to avoid hiatus, reads tu mi ex óraclo ímperas.

841. illic: dat. = matronae; cf. 828.

lampadi[bu]s: a heteroclitic form lampada (= lampas) is found in late Latin, and may have been a popular form; cf. Calcha (= Calchante) 748, cassida = cassis, &c. lampadibūs is not impossible; cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 64 pectoribūs inhians, and see Introd. 7. III. c, p. 49.

842. minatur . . . exurere: after verbs which are normally followed in Latin by acc. and fut. infin. it is quite usual to find in Plautus pres. infin., the subject of the infin. being omitted; cf. 938 minitatu's prosternere; Trin. 5 si quidem operam dare promittitis. In these cases the infin. has the function of a verbal noun, the object of the introducing verb; here, e.g. 'he threatens me with burning out of eyes'. At this point Matrona begins to run off the stage; her father follows, to stop her.

843. This aside is perfectly in place here; their terror, which he knows to be groundless, seems so ridiculous to him, that he begins to think they must be mad.

ultro: here in its etymological sense, 'on the other side'; it has the same force as our 'the boot's on the other leg'.

844. heus! cf. 673. He calls his daughter back, as a new idea strikes him.

quid si . . . cito? 'what if I summon?' i. e. 'hadn't I better?' The subjunctive is more usual: e.g. Poen. 330 quid si adeamus?; Capt. 612 quid si adeam hunc insanum?

845. abducam: i. e. from the house.

hunc hinc: cf. Mil. 377 quo modo haec hinc huc transire potuit.

Senex is prevented from carrying out his intention by Men.'s tactics (848 seq.). Men. gets rid of the woman first, as he knows that the old man will be easier to hoodwink (872 seq.).

846. turbarum . . . amplius, 'any more disturbance'.

ampliūs: cf. 327 longiūs. The quantity is less remarkable here owing to the pause; possibly it may be a case of syllaba anceps.

enim: asseverative; 'I am in a fix'. These words and the next line are spoken aside; in 848 he breaks out again.

847. ni occupo, 'unless I'm beforehand with some plan', i. e. carry it out before they can carry out theirs. Cf. Hor. Sat. i. 9. 6 'numquid uis?' occupo.

ni occupo . . . auferent: Lindsay (Syntax of Plautus, VIII. 5, pp. 125-6) points out that in threats to which a condition is attached Plautus uses the pres. indic. in the protasis with nisi (nī), but the fut. perf. with si. Cf. Mil. 828 periisti iam, nisi uerum scio with Men. 416 periisti, si intrassis intra limen. It is supposed that this distinction corresponds to the distinction between the tenses usually employed in commands and prohibitions; Lindsay sums up: 'Thus da--nisi das, uapulabis and ne dederis--si dederis uapulabis would be the full forms of the two types of sentence.' Men.'s expression here is equivalent to a threat to himself; cf. Ter. Heaut. 730 faciet nisi caueo.

COMMENTARY: LINES 840-58

aliquid: adjectival; cf. Truc. 425.

848. pugnis . . . parcere, 'to be sparing with my fists'.

uotas = uetas; cf. Asin. 789 uotitam. He is addressing Apollo.

huius = Matronae.

849. malam magnam crucem: found only here; the usual expressions are in malam crucem, in maximam mal. cr., in malam rem. Sonnenschein contends that mala crux forms a single idea, and if qualified, cannot have its parts separated by an adjective (yet cf. res plurimae pessimas 759, where see note). He reads here magnam malam crucem. On double iambic ending see 328 note.

851. amabō, ādserua: see note on 382. On hiatus following parenthetic word (here at diaeresis) see Introd. 7. IV. D. a. iv, p. 55.

852. sumne = nonne sum.

quae . . . audio: indicative of fact in causal clause. audio here means 'live to hear', as uideo sometimes means 'live to see'; cf. Livy iii. 67. 11 Esquilias uidimus ab hoste prope captas. Matrona now exit.

853. haū māle illānc amoui; (amoueo): Lindsay adds the last word. Bothe, reading ā me amoui; nunc, &c., and Leo, reading hau male, Apollo, illānc amoui; nunc, &c., suppose an anacoluthon in what follows, hunc . . . Titanum being taken up by huius, 855. hau male, 'cleverly'.

854. Titanum: Men. pretends to regard the Senex as one of the Titans warring against Apollo. Not perceiving that the combination tremulum Titanum is a comic absurdity purposely introduced, most edd. follow Meursius in altering to Tithonum (the husband of Aurora, cursed with immortality without immortal youth).

qui . . . patre: quoted thus by Priscian, probably from now missing part of A; P has Cuono prognatum patre.

Cyigno: because of the Senex' white hairs. More than one mythological character was changed into a swan as a punishment for blasphemy. Ritschl restores Cicino, as being what Plautus wrote: y does not appear in Latin versions of Gk. words till Cicero's time; for the form cf. techina = τέχνη, &c.

855. huius: metre requires huius (disyllable).

artua: a neuter form of the plural of artus, found only here. Cf. pecua, tonitrua. On gender variation in O. Lat. see 168 note.

857. si attigeris: see note on 847 ni occupo.

858-9. Addressed to Apollo.

ancipitem: here in its original meaning (ambi + stem of caput), two-headed; i. e. 'double-headed axe', in classical Latin bipennis.

hunc senem . . . dedolabo . . . uiscera : apposition between whole and part.

859. osse fini : apparently fini is used as a preposition (= tenus) ; cf. Cato, R. R. 28. 2 postea operito terrā radicibus fini. Possibly, as Lindsay suggests, the phrase was originally an abl. abs. (osse fini, lit. 'the bone being the limit'). In classical Latin fine is used prepositionally with genitive (cf. again tenus), e.g. Ovid, Met. x. 536 fine genus uestem ritu succincta.

assulatim : cf. Caët. 832. Hiatus at the diaeresis ; see also Introd. 7. IV. D. d, p. 56.

uiscera : everything inside the skin and outside the bones ; 'flesh'.

860. Scan ēnim uēro.

illud : what he threatens. Senex here begins to edge away ; hence Men. must drive him down (862 seq.).

861. ut minatur : quasi-causal, 'considering his threats', 'such are his threats' ; cf. Ter. Ad. 389-90 DE. cho an domist habiturus ? SY. credo, ut est dementia.

faxit : subjunctive (originally optative) of S-aorist. Cf. Mil. 283 dixis, 316 empsim.

864. uetulum . . . edentulum : diminutives of contempt.

865. astiti in currum : 'pregnant' construction.

iam stimulum : in manust : the punctuation of the present text gives a staccato effect which interrupts harshly the rapid rhythm of 863-4, 866-7. If stimulum is to be taken as a second object of teneo, it is better (with Brix) to read iam stimulum in manu, and to suppose that est was added by an ignorant copyist who took stimulum for a neuter noun in the nom. Possibly, on the other hand, there was such a neuter variant of stimulus (cf. 168 nasum = nasus), and we should read iam stimulum in manust : so Lambinus.

866. appareat, 'be plainly heard'. Warner tr. 'Hait' (= gee up) ; 'come ye wilde jades make a hideous noyse with your stamping : hait, I say'.

867. inflexa sit : the force of the perfect is 'be quite bent' ; the line means : 'Take heed that your tireless limbs bend themselves double in swift trot', a vivid expression to indicate high-stepping action. Cf. Verg. Georg. iii. 192 sinuetque alterna uolumina crurum. Note the mock-tragic diction (pedum pernicitas) and alliteration.

868. mihin . . . minare ? Men. is probably prancing about like a horse, and the Senex is trying to humour him ; cf. Hor. Sat. i. 5. 56-8.

869. qui stat, 'who stands his ground', i.e. does not run away like the Matrona. Sonnenschein's suggestion qui astat is unnecessary.

870. capillo . . . deripit : just as Pallas prevented Achilles from attacking Agamemnon; cf. Hom. Il. i. 197 στῆ δ' ὄπισθεν ξαυθὴς δὲ κόμης ἔλε Πηλείωνα. Finding he cannot frighten away the Senex, Men. adopts the device of falling down in an assumed fit; at the same time he maintains his rôle of madman by pretending to attribute his sensations to supernatural agency.

871. tuom . . . Apollinis: the genitive stands in apposition to the possessive pronoun (which is equivalent to a genitive); cf. Cic.
Phil. ii. 43. III tuum hominis simplicis pectus; Eur. Hec. 430 θαυροΐσης ὄμμα συγκλήσει τὸ σόν. It is used here partly for emphasis, and partly metri gratia. Men.'s voice gradually grows fainter as he delivers this line, and at the end of it he collapses.

872-3. Most edd. mark a lacuna as in text; it is supposed that some generality has dropped out (e.g. Niem. suggests ita nunc hic iacet Miser. nihilist uita hominum) which is illustrated by the particular example introduced by uel ('for instance') in ll. 873^a-4.
 But surely eu . . . durum is itself a generality; there is no need either to mark a lacuna or to adopt the faulty scansion criticized in the App.
 Crit. if we read with Hare: eu morbum hercle acrem ac durum! di, uostram fidem! Vel hic, &c.: 'Gad, how violent and severe a disease (this madness is)! Heaven protect us (from it)! (Look at) this poor madman, for instance—how strong he was a little while ago!' A further objection to the present text of l. 872 is that stress is thrown on ac.

873^a. uel = 'for instance'; cf. 1042; Ter. Hec. 60; Cic. ad Fam.
 ii. 13. I sed suavis accipio litteras, uel quas proxime acceperam, quam prudentes!

875. Here exit the Senex; but the break between scenes should come at 881, where see note.

877. ut ualidus insaniam? neither the accentuation uālidus nor the scansion uālidūs can be justified (see, however, note on 841):
longius, 327, is no parallel, as its final syllable was originally long.
 See App. Crit. Brix's suggestion improves sense and metre; with Bothe's proposal uesaniam cf. his proposal uesania (subst.) 921;
 but neither verb nor substantive is found in the Dramatists; the verb, indeed, appears once only in Catullus; nowhere else before the sixth century A.D.

879-81. For the comic device of a direct appeal to the spectators cf. 1000, 1157; Amph. 376; Aul. 406, 715-20; Cist. 678; Most.
 280-1, &c. It is a favourite trick of Aristophanes; cf. Vesp. 74 seq.
 where actors distributed among the audience take part in the dialogue, as in a modern Revue.

881. For ni = nē see note on 419-20. Here Men. II goes off R., just before Senex, returning from the doctor's, enters L.; the break between scenes should therefore occur here. See Introd. 4,
 p. 19.

882. sedendo . . . spectando: i.e. waiting in the consulting-room, and looking out to see whether the doctor was coming: the gerunds are instrumental. The hiatus may be justified by the antithesis.

883. manendo : modal, = dum maneo.

ex opere, 'from his rounds'.

884. odiosus : predicative ; almost = 'swaggering'.

885-6. Medical men in the Rome of this day were mostly Greek immigrants; the first Greek physician came to Rome about the beginning of the Second Punic War (Pliny, H. N. xxix. i. 6). As many of them were pompous charlatans, they were frequently satirized by the Comic Dramatists. Here Plautus is laughing at the habit (not unknown to-day) of certain doctors of boasting about their aristocratic clientèle. The joke is pointed by the fact that Aesculapius and Apollo were the gods of healing. Scan ait.

887. fabrum : there is no need to suppose that the Senex, by a humorous error, takes Aesculapio, Apollini as referring to the gods' statues; the joke is more simple; the doctor has boasted of mending legs and arms, and the Senex says: 'I'm wondering whether I'm to say I'm calling in a doctor or—a joiner.' Scan either du|cĕrĕ mĕ- (cf. Mil. 27 di|cĕrĕuō-) or du|cĕrĕ (cf. Asin. 250 fin|gĕ|rĕ). Brix suggests medicum me dicam ducere (medicum has dropped out before me dicam, and been restored in the wrong place).

888. incedit : incedo is used of slow and deliberate walking, e.g. Aul. 47 ut incedit, followed by the threat testudineum istum tibi ego grandibo gradum; cf. Asin. 705; Amph. 330, &c. It is also used of pompous or dignified gait; cf. Mil. 872; Truc. 463; Verg. Aen. i. 46 diuom incedo regina, 405 uera incessu patuit dea.

moue . . . gradum : not addressed directly to the doctor.

formicinum : in reference not merely to his slow pace, but to his mincing and affected gait; Muretus remarks here: formicae multum quidem mouent, sed parum promouent. The doctor makes a great show of bustle, but does not make much actual progress.

889. dixerat : pluperf. referring to their previous conversation. Scan quid ēsse illi.

890. lārūātust : haunted by laruae, or ghosts of wicked men, whose visitation was supposed to cause madness. Cf. Aul. 642 laruae hunc atque intemperiae insaniaeque agitant senem. For the form cf. lymphatus = visited with madness by nymphae. Laruatus is always four, larua three syllables in Plautus. Tr. 'hag-ridden'.

cerritus : probably = cereritus, driven mad by the influence of Ceres: cf. Amph. 775-7 quin tu istanc iubes Pro cerrita circumferri? . . . laruarum plenast. Preller's derivation from cerus (in Carmen Saliare; = creator) is needless, as Cerus is the masc. form of Ceres (Sanskrit √kri-, to make).

891. ueternus, 'coma'.

COMMENTARY: LINES 882-902

aqua intercus (i.e. inter autem), 'dropsy'. Warner, displacing the order, translates 890-1: 'Is it a letarge or a lunacie, or melancholie, or dropsie?'

894. mea . . . fide, 'on my honour'. Such promises are part of the quack's stock-in-trade.

895. The Senex does not like the doctor's airy perfacile: he wants to be sure that great pains will be taken. The doctor therefore rushes to the other extreme, 896.

896. Both the reading and the interpretation of this line are questions of great difficulty. (1) Niem. retains sescenta, taking it as agreeing with suspiria understood (cognate acc.); he also adopts an arrangement suggested by Lindsay, and transfers ita (897) to the end of this line, reading at the beginning of 897 ego illum (latter word as in MSS.). He scans thus: in diēs: itā || ego illūm. This will give the sense: 'Why, then, I'll heave scores of (painful) sighs each day, such great pains I'll spend you over his treatment'. For in diēs distributive cf. 457; sescenti is the usual expression for a vaguely large number. (2) Ritschl arranges 894-6 thus: 896, 895, 894. In this line, embodying suggestions of Scaliger (sospitabo) and Camerarius (sescentos), he reads quin sospitabo plus sescentos in die, 'why, I'll cure six hundred (such) a day', which thus continues the casual tone of perfacile id quidemst. This gives good sense, but shows little regard for the MSS. (3) Palmer, in an Appendix to his edition of Amphitruo (p. 253), suggests keeping Ritschl's order, and reading quin subus piabo plus sescentis in diēs (referring to expiation by sacrifice of swine); but (a) the swine had to be ten days old, not sues (= full grown swine); cf. note on 290; (b) this reading would render 895 (the next line according to Ritschl's arrangement) pointless; (c) the religious act had to be performed by the patient, and is to be distinguished from the medical treatment by hellebore; cf. 913, 950; Hor. Sat. ii. 3. 164-6. (4) Lindsay's suggestion sescenta sexies (a comic exaggeration of sescenta, to be taken as (1) above) is a likely solution; see App. Crit. for source of error.

897. tibi: ethic dative.

899. peruorsus: lit. 'wrong way round'; everything has turned out exactly contrary to his wishes; the day has 'gone awry'. Cf. Cicero's word-play, pro Cluent. 26. 71 ut erat semper praeposterus atque peruorsus, initium facit a Bulbo.

901. flagiti, 'disgrace'; for genitive after compounds of -pleo cf. Aul. 454; Amph. 470; the ablative is more usual; cf. Cist. 127 me compleui flore Liberi; Cas. 123; Merc. 795.

902. meus Vlixes: the parasite is compared to Ulysses as being a cunning accomplice in rascality; perhaps there is also a reference to the estrangement between Agamemnon and his wife, and Ulysses' services to the former in the matter of the sacrifice of Iphigenia (cf. Eur. I. in A. 524, 1361).

MENAECHMI

regi: a flattering title often bestowed by a cliens upon his patronus; cf. Asin. 919; Ter. Phorm. 338; used here also in allusion to Agamemnon. Scan sūō; cf. mēō 905.

903. Scan quēm ēgō | hōmīnēm; to avoid these hiatuses, Müller inserts hodie (frequent in threats) before hominem; but for hiatus after pyrrhic not bearing ictus cf. 1061, and see Introd. 7. IV. B. a. ii, p. 53: the first hiatus is quite regular.

si . . . uiuo, 'as sure as I'm alive'; cf. Aul. 573; Bacch. 766; Pseud. 1325. The future si uiuam is also used in this form of asseveration, as Most. 4. The apodosis is always in the future. Cf. the similar variation between si sapiis and si sapiēs. Note the alliteration.

euoluam, 'unwrap from', and so 'strip of'.

904. illius esse: sc. uitam; referring to uita . . . sua, 903. The point of this line lies in the double meaning of uita (life, livelihood); Menaechmus says in effect: 'The meals he consumes, which to him are uita, are really mine; I'll deprive him of his sole possession, namely, the breath he draws.'

905. educatust: cf. 98.

906. condigne, 'just as badly', i.e. as Peniculus; used similarly Aul. 465.

907. palla: outside its clause, and therefore emphatic. Men. I knows that the palla is a sore point with Erotium, though he is ignorant of the real cause of her annoyance.

908. Scan eū | ēdēpōl! | nē ēgo.

uiuo: emphatic for sum; cf. 202. Or perhaps: 'It's a wretched life I lead.'

909. The Senex and the Doctor have thus far remained hidden (cf. 898), but catch Men.'s last words. After this brief conversation aside, they suddenly advance to Men., to whom the doctor is known (cf. 957).

se miserum praedicat: a symptom of melancholia.

910. cur . . . brachium? Men. has accompanied his last words (908) with a gesture of declamation, and so displaced his robe.

911. nunc tuo: not redundant with isti, but = 'which you're now suffering from'.

mali with quantum.

912. quin . . . suspēdis? Men., already in a state of high irritability owing to his mysterious misfortunes, naturally treats this new nuisance with impatient rudeness, which is regarded as a further proof of derangement.

ecquid sentis? 'do you notice anything (wrong with him)?' Hildyard ingeniously suggests that the doctor, under cover of shaking hands, or perhaps under pretence of putting Men.'s robe straight (910), has surreptitiously felt Men.'s pulse; and that the Senex, perceiving the manœuvre, asks: 'do you gather anything (from the state of his pulse)?' This would make excellent sense, and give additional point to Men.'s exclamation. Hildyard quotes Tac. Ann. vi. 50 medicus . . . per speciem officii manum complexus pulsus uenarum attigit.

quidni sentiam? 'of course I do'; quidni (-ni = nei, i. e. nē in the O. Lat. sense of non) is thus used in answers with the verb of the question repeated in the corresponding tense of the subjunctive (potential); cf. Mil. 923; normally in timē, as Mil. 1120 PV. itan tu censes? PA. quid ego nī ita censeam? So frequently cur non? Cf. quippini? 948.

913. ellebori iungere: (1) the correction of B², unguine, is accepted by Wagner and by Brix-Niem.; but hellebore, the traditional remedy for madness, was administered in the form of a draught, not of an ointment; cf. 921 potionis, 950 elleborum potabis; Hor. Epp. ii. 2. 137; Pers. iv. 16; Auson. Ep. 4. 69 Anticyramus bibes; Aristoph. Vesp. 1489 πῖθ' ἐλλέβορον. (2) The rest of the MSS. give iungere, which Lindsay retains (supposing a nom. iungus = ζεύγος), apparently in the sense of 'mixture' (i. e. containing hellebore); but ζεύγος nowhere occurs with this meaning. (3) Schöll proposes iumento in the sense of 'wagon-load' (cf. Plato, Euthyd. 229 B ἐλλέβορον ἄμαξα); but iumentum is nowhere else so used, and even iugum and quadrigae, though they sometimes mean 'wagon' or 'chariot', are never like ἄμαξα used in the sense of 'load'. (4) Leo's suggestion, with the same meaning, uno onere, is better. (5) The conjectures iugero (Sonnenschein) and iugere (Ital., from a supposed heteroclitic singular of iugerum) give the best sense ('an acre of hellebore'), and require a very slight alteration only of the MSS.; the error may have arisen through dittography of u.

optinerier, 'managed'.

915. atrum: Italian natural wine was very dark.

quin tu is, &c.: this line is quoted with a different ending in a note on Curc. 242 by a later hand found in the margin of B; see App. Crit. The words suggested by Lindsay may easily have dropped out through similarity to the beginning of this line.

916. As it stands in the MSS. this line will not scan; it can be made metrical by bracketing tu (see App. Crit.) and scanning primūlūm. Vahlen and Schöll mark a lacuna, which Niem. fills thus: primūlūm. {quin tu mihi || id respondes quod rogavi?} MEN. quin tu me⟨d⟩ interrogas, &c. Some such words may have dropped out owing to quin tu occurring near the end of three consecutive lines. On the scansion primūlūm see Introd. 7. I. E. d.

insanire primulum, 'to show the first faint signs of a (coming) fit of raving'; cf. 921, 934.

917. purpureum . . . puniceum, 'dark-red . . . bright red'.

esse: cf. 628 comesse. The original form was ed-(ē)-se; cf. surrexe, Hor., which is strictly a present, not a perfect, infinitive.

lūteum: from lūtum, 'yellow-weed' (lūteus from lūtum, 'mud').

MENAECHMI

918. squamossas: Plautus did not write the word thus, as no consonants were written double till Ennius's day; but the form given here by the MSS. indicates that the adjective-suffix -ōsus was originally -onsus (cf. formonsus), or rather -uent-tos, where -uent- = Gk. adjectival suffix-stem -οεντ- (nom. -όεις).

papae! an explosive interjection; cf. atat, Gk. παπαί, βαβαί, πόποι, Eng. 'tut-tut'.

919-20. deliramenta loquitur: cf. Amph. 696; Capt. 598.

921. percipit: sc. eum; in its original sense, 'gets a thorough grip on him'; cf. Amph. 1118 horror membra . . . percipit. Contrast 916 occepat . . . primulum. The use of indicative here after priusquam, though the idea of purpose is present, may imply that the Senex believes the fit is almost upon him; cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 27 ante, Pudor, quam te uiolo. For the lengthening of the final syllable cf. 759 aduenit, 1101 emeris: Bothe proposes percipit uesania, but see note on 877.

922. occidis fabulans, 'you're boring me' (or, 'him') 'to death with your jabber'; or, if occidis is used vividly for future, 'you'll be the death of me', &c. Perhaps it is best to supply me, not eum, as the object; the Senex is weary of the quack's pseudo-professional interrogatory, which he thinks quite unnecessary after what he himself has seen (cf. 835 seq.): he wants the man to do something; cf. 921, 946. In B¹ the words are assigned to Men., perhaps rightly.

923. duri: probably of appearance, 'staring', 'set in a fixed stare', referring to the glare of a madman.

924. locustam, 'lobster', which has staring prominent eyes; cf. Pliny, H. N. xi. 37. 55 locustis . . . praeduri eminent (oculi).

925. enumquam . . . crepant: Warner tr. 'Doo not your guttes gripe ye, and croake in your belly?'

926. nulla crepitant: nullus in agreement with the subject is used (as a rule colloquially) as a strong negative; cf. Rud. 143 ill' qui uocauit nullus uenit; Trin. 606 at tu edepol nullus creduas; Cic. Att. xi. 24. 4 Philotimus . . . nullus uenit; Verg. Aen. iv. 272 si te nulla mouet tantarum gloria rerum.

927. pro insano, 'like a madman'; cf. 945, 298 pro sano; Capt. 542 proque ignoto me aspernari.

928. facilin . . . cubans? repeats the former question in a more definite form; 'do you sleep easily' (i. e. without bad dreams such as visit the insane) 'when you are in bed?' Ritschl makes this a distinct question by reading obdormis, with the sense 'do you go to sleep easily' (i. e. readily) 'when you go to bed?'; but cubo does not seem to bear this meaning elsewhere.

929-30. Cf. the opening scene of Aristoph. Nubes, where Strepsiades cannot sleep for thinking of his debts.

931-3. qui = utinam; cf. 451 note.

There is no need to suppose a lacuna after 930; Men. suddenly realizes how foolish it is to answer these absurd questions seriously (cf. percentator); the recollection of his predicament returns, and he bursts out with a curse at his tormentor.

934. insanire occeptat, 'his fit is really beginning'; contrast 916.

de illis uerbis, 'in consequence of'; cf. 266 iam aps te metuo de uerbis tuis. Niem. takes the phrase with insanire occeptat, in the sense of 'judging by those words'.

935. Nestor: the Homeric King of Pylos, famed for wisdom and eloquence.

de uerbis: not as in 934, but 'in the matter of', 'with regard to'; cf. Most. 569 quid de argentost?; Pseud. 123; Caecil. (161 Ribbeck) nil peccat de sauiō. Or possibly it may be taken as 'judging by his words'.

praēt . . . fuit: lit. 'in comparison with how he was', &c., i. e. 'compared with what he was a while ago', referring to Men.'s speeches, 835 seq. For praēt see note on 376; cf. Mil. 20.

937. dixti insanus, 'you said it in a mad fit'; dixti is Leo's correction of MSS. dixi, which Schöll retains, arranging thus: MEN. quid ego dixi? SE. insanus, inquam—, the speech of the Senex being interrupted by Men.'s exclamation. Niem. adopts Schöll's arrangement, but reads insanu's, which, however, is inconsistent with 935.

938. Ritschl marks a lacuna after this line, which Vahlen fills thus: ME. quis se dicit haec me facere uidisse aut quis arguit?

939-40. haec ted arguo: sc. fecisse. Note hiatus at the diaeresis combined with emphasizing anaphora.

941. coronam . . . Ioui: proverbial expression for a daring and outrageous crime; cf. Trin. 84; Hor. Sat. i. 4. 93 mentio siquae De Capitolini furtis iniecta Petilli Te coram fuerit. Men. answers the seemingly absurd charges made against him with charges still more absurd and violent; cf. 945.

Iōui (<scio>): see App. Crit. It is highly probable that this line ended in scio like the next three. The repetition indicates loss of temper.

943. ēs: always long in Plautus.

sub furca: the furca was a heavy wooden yoke, shaped like a V or Π, which was fastened on the neck of a delinquent slave, his hands being bound to the arms of the implement, which projected in front over his shoulders. Sometimes the victim merely had to walk through the city bearing the yoke, and proclaiming his fault as he went; sometimes his progress was rendered more painful by the application of rod or lash; cf. Livy ii. 36. 1 seruom quidam pater familiae . . . sub furca caesum medio egerat circo; Cic. Diuin. i. 26. 55.

946. face: for the form cf. 948, 1014; Aul. 153; so duce, Aul. 452; dice, Capt. 359. Fac is also found, e.g. 890 above; Trin. 1008.

947. quid facias optumumst? lit. 'what you must do, it's best?' i.e. 'what you had best do?' The arrangement is paratactic, as usually with optumum est, the subjunctive being jussive; see note on 831, and cf. Asin. 448; Epid. 59; Aul. 567 tum tu idem optumumst Loces eferendum; similarly with iustumst, Bacch. 994 (MSS.); certumst, Aul. 676.

948. ad me, 'to my house'; so also 952, 956.

face uti deferatur: more commonly ut is omitted, e.g. 890 fac sciam.

quippini? = quippe ni (i.e. quippe non, see 912 note; for the weakening of the vowel see note on seruirin 795) has the same sense as quidni, but is rarely followed by a verb, while the latter rarely stands without one; cf. 912, 1109.

949. meo arbitrato, 'just as I please'; cf. 91.

950. aliquos gives a tone of vagueness to the phrase, as we say 'some three weeks'; cf. Pseud. 321 ut opperiare hos sex dies aliquos (but hos without aliquos generally refers to past time; cf. 104 hos dies multos): the usage is colloquial; cf. Cic. ad Att. iv. 46. I uelim mihi mittas de tuis librariolis duos aliquos. Warner translates here: 'Oh, Sir, I will make yee take neesing powder this twentie dayes' (cf. German Nieswurz = hellebore); to which Men. answers: 'Ile beate yee first with a bastanado this thirtie dayes.'

951. pendentem: when slaves were flogged they were sometimes suspended to a beam by the hands, a weight being attached to their feet; see the locus classicus, Asin. 303-5. The object of this detestable cruelty was to prevent their struggling. Men.'s threat is an insult, as it implies that the physician is a slave; many physicians in Rome actually were slaves, and, if skilful or popular, were a source of great profit to their masters.

953. próinde ut: lit. 'in proportion as'; tr. 'considering the degree (violence) of madness I perceive (in him)'.

954. immo: corrective. The doctor is ready with a plausible excuse.

955. quibu' paratis: for abl. of passive partic. with a pronoun in agreement after opus est, cf. Pers. 584 opusnest hac tibi empta? so perhaps with usus est, 753, where see note.

956. ferant: for paratactic subjunctive with iubeo cf. Most. 930 curriculo iube in urbem ueniat; Rud. 708; so syntactic subj. (introd. by ut), Amph. 205; (alone), Epid. 627.

illic = apud te.

Scan erit; cf. 921 percipit, and note. Perhaps syllaba anceps.

The Senex and the Doctor now exeunt. Men., not suspecting what is in store for him, since ll. 946-9 and 952-6 have been spoken out of his hearing, decides to remain where he is (965).

957. This line can be scanned only by taking the second foot as a proceleusmatic. Müller transfers nunc to the next line, there reading quod nunc me (see App. Crit.), and here abit medicus (natural rhythm). Socrus, suggested by Lindsay, occurs as a masc. noun in two fragments of archaic Latin.

958. quid illuc | est quod: more emphatic than quid est quod, on which see 677.

hisce: a Plautine form of the nom. plur. masc., used before a vowel or h; cf. illisce 997.

960. neque pugnās . . . coepio: i. e. nor even am I quarrelsome or litigious (signs of nervous irritability). The present-stem of coepio (= co-ip-io, where -ip- is a weakened form of the root ap- found in apiscor; cf. ad-ip-iscor) is found only in early Latin; cf. Pers. 121 coepere; Truc. 232 coepiat.

ego: emphatic; he is not the one to start them.

961. saluos saluos: nom. sing. and acc. plur. respectively, in the usual order of such phrases; cf. alius alium, absens absentem. 'Sound myself, I see others sound', i. e. do not regard them as mad. A mad or drunken man thinks all others mad or drunk, but himself sane or sober.

noūi (ego) homines: a further proof of sanity; cf. Amph. 448.

962. perperam, 'erroneously'; for this adverbial termination cf. quam, clam, palam, promiscam (Pseud. 1062), protinam (Mil. 1193). Adverbs in -am, like those in -sim, -tim, are usually called accusatives sing. fem., though possibly they are relics of the old A-stem instrumental sing. in -am.

ipsi: the asyndeton marks the contrast.

964. huc: he points to Erotium's house.

nimi' prouentum est nequiter, 'things have turned out shockingly'; this sense of the verb is colloquial or late; cf. Pers. 456 rem . . . prouenturam bene confido mihi; Tac. Hist. iv. 18 si destinata prouenissent; more often with a living subject, as Rud. 837 edepol proueni nequiter multis modis; Truc. 385.

965. ad noctem, 'by nightfall'; cf. Poen. 844 ad postremum, 'by the time the end comes', i. e. 'in the end'.

966. Messenio returns from the quay-side inn, where he has bestowed the baggage and sailor-porters. He thinks he has arrived in ample time to assist his master from the banquet as arranged (cf. 436-7, 701-3, 986-9). He enters the stage R., as coming from the harbour, and fails to perceive Men. I, who is at the opposite end of the stage; and we are to imagine that Men. does not see or hear Mess. till 1003. For the ensuing soliloquy, in which Messenio describes the qualities of the seruos frugi in a tone of self-righteousness, cf. Aul. 587 seq.; Most. 858 seq. On the metres of this canticum consult the Schema Metrorum. It opens with a simple system of bacchiacs; cf. 571 seq.

spectamen, 'mark', or perhaps 'guarantee of worth'.

seruo: dative of advantage, exercising the function of a genitive; cf. Rud. 935 monumentum meae famae et factis.

MENAECHEMI

id, the subject, is explained by ut . . . rectius, 968-9.

qui rem, &c.: the relative clause amplifies bono: 'It is the mark of a good slave, one such as manages, &c., his master's business, that he . . .'

967. conlocat, 'arranges'; cogitat, 'spends thought upon'.

968. rēm | ērī: hiatus at the end of the first hemistich.

968-9. diligenter . . . quam si: for omission of tam cf. Rud. 943 non edepol piscis expeto quam tui sermonis sum indigens.

970-1. tergum . . . crura . . . oportet potiora esse, 'he must have more regard for his back and his legs' (i. e. to save them from uerbera, compedes; cf. 974).

971. potiora esse: sc. ei; lit. 'be more important in his eyes'; an antecedent to quōi . . . situmst must be supplied here in the dative (of the person judging), and in the next line as subject.

quōi . . . situmst: if situmst is equivalent to διάκειται, the phrase means 'whose mind is discreet', lit. 'is in a discreet condition'; but possibly modeste means 'not too much one way or the other', and the expression is a colloquialism corresponding to our 'whose heart is in the right place'. Bergk suggests modēstumst, which certainly has a Plautine ring.

972. id: explained by the clause quid . . . eris; cf. id, 966.

qui nihili sunt (= οἱ μηδὲν ὄντες) qualifies eis in the dependent clause.

quid . . . preti: explained by uerbera, &c., 974-5. For pretium in a bad sense cf. Hor. Od. iii. 24. 24 pretium est mori.

973. ignauis . . . uiris: in apposition to eis qui nihili sunt. The words are so awkwardly placed (after eris) that they have been bracketed as a gloss by Ritschl.

975. molae: refractory slaves were sometimes punished by being sent to work at a pistrinum (flour-mill), where corn was ground between mill-stones (molae) kept in motion by manual labour; cf. Pers. 22; Most. 17; Ter. Phorm. 249-50. The rest of the line indicates the circumstances under which the work was done. The pistrina were generally situated on the owner's country estate, and a town-bred slave thought it the worst of all punishments to have to work really hard in a chained gang, and to live on short rations in a bleak country village; cf. Asin. 31-5; Most. 16-19; and see Ramsay's Mostellaria, Excursus xv.

If magna is omitted the line is a perfect bacchiac tetrameter.

977. id . . . malum: referring to 974-5; malum in its common Plautine sense of 'punishment'. This line, like the next two, is trochaic. Scan the second foot as a proceleusmatic. In the absence of the usual diaeresis there is caesura in the fifth foot, and a dactyl is allowed in the fourth: Introd. 6. II. E. c, p. 33.

bonum esse: sc. me.

certumst, 'it's my resolve'; cf. Aul. 676.

978. magi' . . . faciliu': sc. quam uerbera; for the double comparative cf. 55; Aul. 422. Scan quām mālūm |; nām. The fifth foot is a proceleusmatic.

uerba : uerbera : cf. Ter. Heaut. 356 tibi erunt parata uerba, huic hominī uerbera; Ovid, Iler. x. 38 uerbera cum uerbis mixta fuere meis. Messenio can put up with a scolding.

979. nimio = multo, but has stronger force. Scan lūbēntiūs mōlitūm | quām mōlitūm.

mōlitum : sc. far; mōlitum, 'strenuous effort', verbal noun from mōlier, with punning reference to mōlitum: 'I much prefer eating what others grind to the dreadful grind—of grinding': the word-play balances that in 978. Mōlitus is not found elsewhere, but there are several other verbals in -tus (e. g. frustratus, perditus) that Plautus alone uses, and he only once. To take the line otherwise involves the scansion lūbēntiūs mōlitūm quām | mōlitūm, but such variation of stress (mōlitūm, mōlitum) cannot here be justified (see 321-2 note); moreover the repetition of mōlitum would be both utterly pointless, and bad Latin. On praehibeo see 802 note.

980. seruo id : cf. Pseud. 698 seruas imperium probe.

982. alii sei . . . sint, ego . . . ero : the indicative of the apodosis expresses certainty, the subjunctive of the protasis leaves the question open. The MSS. read aliis ēē (= esse), from which Lindsay gets alii sei by change of one letter and redivision (see also App. Crit.). The second hand of B gives alii esse, which Niem.-Brix adopts, taking the first esse as subject to in rem esse. A literal translation of this reading would run: 'Let others be as they think it to be to their interest to be'. A 'monströses Wortspiel' on esse (edere) such as Brix⁶ suspects would here be feeble and un-Plautine. Scan ēro ūt mē | ēsse: the line is trochaic.

983. metum id . . . adhibeam . . . apstineam : cf. 249; a conditional sentence without si expressed, apstineam being apodosis; 'If only I keep this before me as a matter for anxiety,' &c.: id is explained by ero ut . . . sim praesto; for careless order cf. 966-9, 972-3. See also note on 984. Scan mētum id mīhi ād- (proceleusmatic), and lōcis sīm: the line is anapaestic.

culpam apstineam : for this acc. cf. Mil. 1309 si apstinuissem amorem; contrast 768 above, apstinent saepe culpa.

983^a. metuont : i. e. behave cautiously, show a wholesome awe. This line and the next closely resemble Most. 858-61 both in sentiment and language. Scan cārēnt mētūont ī | sōlēt ēs se ēris ūt ībiles (anapaestic). For shortenings see Introd. 7. I. B. b, p. 43.

983^b. nil metuont : metuont as in last line.

postquam . . . metuont : here metuont has a stronger meaning, 'are frightened'. Various emendations of this line have been suggested; the general sense is obviously that reckless slaves, after they have done something to deserve a beating, then (when it is too late) do become afraid. Vahlen, incorporating a conjecture of Pylades, reads promeriti, tunc ī metuont (see App. Crit.); for omission of auxiliary in a dependent clause, cf. 119 ut facturus dicam. Perhaps the best suggestion, as being closest to the MSS., is promeriti, tum qui metuont! 'how frightened they are then!' Scan māliūm prō-.

984. metuam hau multum: the sense seems to require an emphatic ego here. Possibly therefore Hermann is right in rejecting 983^{a-b} as an interpolation from Most. 858-61; if those two lines are omitted, met. hau mult. will be apodosis to adhibeam in 983 (culp. apst. in that case also being protasis), with the meaning 'I shall have little cause for anxiety'.

prope est quāndo: cf. Ter. Andr. 152 prope adest cum alieno more uiuendumst mihi. This line is an anapaestic tetrameter catalectic, 982-3^b being acatalectic.

quando + ceruso faciam†: the initial c of ceruso following -o of quando probably conceals hoc (agreeing with pretium), which gives good sense if taken as referring to metuam hau multum: 'this reward', namely, immunity from the cares and anxieties of slavery, i.e. manumission; cf. 1148. With regard to the rest of the puzzle, Lindsay's suggestion (see App. Crit.) quān|do hōc ērūs | quāē fāc|am (= pro eis quae faciam) entails a rather harsh ellipse. Bothe, on the ground that -m is often added wrongly to a word in MSS. (cf. MSS. readings in Mil. 58, 154, 236-8), suggests ōb fāc|tū prēt|um ēxs-; but this would give a tribrach (which cannot stand for an anapaest) in the sixth foot. Possibly -o faciam of the MSS. (or -o fatiam, as some read it) conceals the word optatum.

985. (eo) . . . exemplo (= strong ita), 'after this fashion', explained by tergo ut . . . arbitror.

seruio, 'perform my (servile) duties'.

tergo: dative of advantage, cf. Ter. Andr. 546; Merula reads tergi; for genitive or equivalent with in rem esse cf. Trin. 628; Pers. 342; Ter. Hec. 102.

986. uassa, 'our traps'; cf. Livy xxi. 47. 2 uasa colligere (of military baggage).

ut iusserat qualifies ita uenio aduorsum, for which phrase see 437 note. Mess. thinks that his master is still in Erotium's house.

988. †neque utrum†: Brix formerly read atque eum, after Gronovius; Niem., with Bothe, prefers atque uirum (cf. his uiro for utro, 188, quoted in note on 183); Ritschl, neumque erum. One is tempted to suggest reque uirum, or reque ut eum (colloquial repetition of ut, as in Capt. 248): i.e. re . . . saluom (sc. si non animo), 'with purse (if not heart) intact': cf. Truc. 46-50 (47 esp.). Mess. must have momentarily forgotten that he has the purse (cf. 386, 701); otherwise the metaphor in this line and the next is pointless.

saltu damni: i.e. Erotium's house; cf. 133, and Trin. 314 damni conciliabulum, used in a similar connexion. Saltus is properly used of a mountain pass or forest ride, such as affords good ambush for brigands; cf. the metaphor of the pirate-ship, 344, 442.

COMMENTARY: LINES 983^b-1003

990. The Senex now returns, with four lorarii, who are to remove Men. I to the doctor's. Here he is giving them final directions. A lorarius (from lorum: classical Latin carnufex) was a strong slave employed to chastise others. The term is found in this sense in stage directions only; cf. Capt. 110 seq.

per ego uobis deos . . . dico: pronouns are thus frequently placed between per and its case in oaths and adjurations; cf. Ter. Andr. 834 per ego te deos oro.

991. sapienter, 'skilfully', 'without bungling'.

quae . . . impero: colloquial redundancy, defining imperium meum with exaggerated minuteness; cf. Epid. 526 si quid est homini miseriarum quod miserescat.

992. medicinam, 'surgery'.

sublimen: this word is found in some MSS. here and 995, 1002, 1052; Mil. 1394. Ritschl accepts the form in all these passages as an adverb ('aloft' = Gk. ὑψόν), and reads it against the MSS., which have sublimem, in Asin. 868; Ter. Ad. 316; Andr. 861. Lindsay, in a list of Corrigenda et Addenda published in vol. ii of his edition of Plautus (Script. Class. Bibl. Oxon.), now accepts here the reading sublimis, which is supported by Heraeus (Philol. 55, 198), and in 995, 1002, 1052 reads sublimem. In any case the meaning will be 'carried away on your shoulders'.

994. cāuē quisquam . . . fecerit: the sing. caue is perhaps due to the influence of quisquam, but sometimes the word is quasi-interjectional, e. g. Poen. 117 caue dirrumpatis; so age, Mil. 928 age . . . abite. caue in prohibitions is normally followed in Plautus by the tense in -sim (S-aorist optative), or, as here, the perf. subj.

995. The metre now becomes iambic (octonarii). Scan dūbītā tīs iām: see 999, note.

raptum oportuit: sc. eum esse; see note on 194-5 oportebat . . . abreptum.

996. illi: adverb, = illic; cf. 308.

occidi! Men. sees the lorarii approaching.

998. He addresses the lorarii, who are now close to him.

999. fidem in this phrase = 'protection'. So often in Cicero and Livy fidem deūm implorare. Scan quō fēr'tīs mē, as nothing but an iambus is allowed in the fourth foot of an iambic octonarius before diaeresis. Cf. 995, and see Introd. 6. II. C. c, and footnote 2, p. 30.

1001. The fifth foot is a proceleusmatic; Introd. 6. II. C. c.

1002. Messenio imagines that he sees his master attacked by kidnappers; cf. 1005.

nesciō|qui, 'some fellows or other'.

1003. suppetias: a Plautine word, found also in Appuleius, and more generally in the phrases suppetias ire, s. venire; see note on 1020.

audet: polite use, as in sodes = si audes, 'please'; cf. 149, 697.

Scan fēr|rē? ēgō, | ēre: hiatus at change of speaker is normal; for hiatus after ēgō cf. 719; here it also precedes a vocative. See further, Introd. 7. IV. D. a. iii. It is possible also to scan ēgō, ēr|ē, with hiatus following the vocative. Schwabe suggests (audeo) audacissime, needlessly.

1004. The hiatus is legitimate, occurring as it does before a vocative and at the diaeresis of an iambic octonarius; see Introd. 7. IV. D. a. iii; 6. II. C. c.

Epidamnii: for the form cf. 258; the form in -ensis is more frequent in this play, occurring in 32, 57, 1000.

1004-5. erum . . . deripier: acc. and infin. in apposition to facinus; or perhaps exclamatory, as in Amph. 882-3.

1005. pacato: i. e. a town with which his own town of Syracuse was then on friendly terms) (hostili. Lambinus points out that pacato, luci, in uia, liber form a sort of climax emphasizing the indignitas of the facinus.

luci, 'in broad daylight'; cf. Amph. 165; Cas. 786; sometimes joined with a masc. or neut. adjective, as Aul. 748 luci claro; Cist. 525 cum primo luci. That luci in these phrases comes from an I-stem with nomin. lucis (masc.) or luce (neut.) is evident from Capt. 1008 lucis das tuendi copiam. Luci is not 'temporal locative', but simply ablative of time; cf. Cist. 525 (quoted above); Merc. 255 mane cum luci semul; Ter. Ad. 841 cum primo luci; so the abl. of lux is used in classical Latin, e.g. Verg. Aen. iv. 186 luce sedet custos. Similar ablatives of time are uesperi, heri, temperi (cf. 1020, note).

1007. mittite, 'let him go', addressed to the lorarii; cf. 1000, 1013, 1016.

The line is a trochaic octonarius.

1008. insignite: cf. Mil. 560 eam fieri . . . tam insignite iniuriam; Cic. pro Quinct. 23. 73 insignite improbus.

1009. Scan dābo ēt dē-; but see App. Crit. Shortening legitimate; Introd. 7. I. A. b, p. 42.

subuenibo: see note on 386 scibo; cf. 808, 1101.

1010. numquam: cf. 683 numquam factum reperies, and see note on 533.

By this time Messenio has reached the struggling group; he now tackles three of the four lorarii (cf. 1052), leaving the fourth to Men.

1011. istic = isti-ce: dative (of disadvantage); cf. hisce 1012, huic 1014. MSS. here read isti; Onions, supposing haplography, suggests isti, te ab umero.

ab umero: lit. 'on the side of the shoulder'; the prep. is unnecessary.

1012. sementem . . . faciam: as we say, 'plant blows'; the metaphor is continued in opseram. Sometimes the metaphor is, so to speak, reversed; the blows are a crop gathered from the sufferer's back, e.g. Aul. 45, where Staphyla is called stimulorum seges:

Rud. 763 iam hercle tibi messis in ore fiet mergis ('pitchfork') pugneis.

1013. maxumo . . . malo . . . uostro . . . fertis, 'you're carrying him off to your very great sorrow', or 'at very great risk to yourselves': i. e. 'you'll rue bitterly your attempt', &c. For this (modal) ablative cf. 133 meo malo, 134 nostrum salute socium; Amph. 366; so frequently with cum, Asin. 896 cum malo magno tuo; ibid. 909; Aul. 425. The latter usage is classical in certain phrases, e. g. cum summo (maximo) alicuius periculo (detrimento, emolumento, &c.). There is hiatus at the diaeresis; scan māxūmo hō dīē. Bothe needlessly transposes to māxūmo hērcle hōat ē; Havet proposes uos uo|stro.

hodie: used colloquially to intensify threats or threatening expressions; cf. Amph. 366 ne tu istic hodie malo tuo . . . aduenisti; or to strengthen negatives; cf. Amph. 398 hodie numquam facies quin sim Sosia.

1014. oculi locus . . . appareat: i. e. that the socket appear where the eye once was; the injunction of 1011 is repeated. Cf. 156.

1015. uós . . . uós . . . uós: we may suppose that with each utterance of this ictus-bearing word, Messenio inflicts damage on one of his three opponents, striking each in turn till they cry for mercy in a chorus.

perimus! 'Murder!'

1016. opsecro hercle! conventional mode of expressing a cry for mercy; cf. Asin. 411; Ter. Eun. 669.

ergo, 'well then', i. e. if you want me to let you off.

quid me uobis tactiost? 'What business have you to lay hands on me?' me is governed by the verbal noun (governing the same case as the allied verb), the logical subject being in the dative. In interrogative sentences of this type, introduced by quid, Plautus uses the verbal noun in -io precisely as the gerund of transitive verbs was used in O. Lat. (e. g. Trin. 869 mi . . . agitandumst uigilias; Lucr. i. 111 poenas in morte timendumst); cf. Amph. 519 quid tibi hanc curatio est rem . . . aut muttitio? Asin. 920 quid tibi hunc receptio ad te est meum uirum? Aul. 423 quid tibi nos tactiost? Curc. 626; Truc. 622 quid tibi hanc aditio est? quid tibi hanc notio est? Terence uses verbal nouns in -io in similar sentences, but the verbal noun, instead of governing the same case as the allied verb, is followed by a genitive; cf. Eun. 671 quid huc tibi reditio? uestis quid mutatio?

1017. pecte: as we say, 'give them a dressing' (an appeal to Mess.). For the metaphor cf. Capt. 896 fusti pectito.

1018. em tibi etiam! 'there's one for you too'; Messenio has routed his three opponents, and now attacks the lorarius with whom Men. has been engaged. For this phrase accompanying a blow cf. Asin. 431 em ergo hoc tibi; Curc. 195, &c.

1019. commetaui, if correct, means 'mapped out', 'explored thoroughly'; lit. 'measured', 'surveyed'. Other readings are commentaui (inferior MSS., = 'drawn patterns on'), and commutauī (Ital.; cf. Amph. 316-17).

1020. suppetias . . . adueni: suppetias (cf. 1003) is accus. of motion; cf. 396 ire infitias, 328 eas . . . malam crucem, where see note. The phrase suppetias ire (uenire, proficisci) often occurs in the Bellum Africanum.

temperi . . . modo, 'just in the nick of time'; cf. 445, and see note on luci 1005. For this ablative-ending see note on 479 parti.

1021. quisquis es: cf. 1007. Why does not Messenio take any notice of the words?

1022. apsque ted esset: apsque, as used by Plautus and Terence, appears only, as here, in the protasis of a conditional clause, joined to a personal or demonstrative pronoun, and followed by esset or foret; cf. Capt. 754; Trin. 832; Pers. 836. Scan nam āpsquē tēd | ēssēt (? Introd. 7. I. B. b. ii, p. 43: a doubtful case). Perhaps te should be written: see also App. Crit.

ad solem occasum: cf. 437, note.

1023. si . . . facias, 'if you did the right thing'.

emittas manu: cf. Aul. 817, and for methods of manumission see 1148, note.

1024. liberem ego te? liberem either repeats the mood of emittas, and is potential, or, more probably, is deliberative. Men. speaks in astonishment; Messenio thinks his tone is indignant or contemptuous.

uerum, 'yes', lit. 'that's right'; cf. Asin. 790; Ter. Ad. 543; factum is used similarly, e.g. Trin. 429; Ter. Ad. 561. For omission of est in these quasi-interjectional phrases see note on 338.

1025. quid, erro? lit. 'what (do you say)? am I mistaken?' i.e. 'what? mistaken?'

1026. non taces? colloquial mode of answering one who seems to be talking nonsense or telling a lie; as we say 'Oh, shut up!'. Cf. Amph. 700 AM. numquam factum est. SO. non taces? Here Mess. thinks Men. is joking.

1027. nec . . . numquam: for this double negative cf. 1117, Pseud. 136 neque ego homines magis asinos numquam uidi; more often neque . . . haud; cf. 371, note.

meu' seruos, 'slave of mine'.

1028. sic with liberum; for this 'deictic' use cf. 197, 351, 657 note.

Scan sī tūōm | nēgās mē | ēsse; double shortening, with hiatus at diaeresis. Brix proposed to omit sic, but this would give a bad rhythm. See Introd. 7. I. B. b. i, D. a. i, pp. 43, 45.

After this line the MSS. of the P group give ll. 1037-43, which were omitted from some previous copy owing to homoeoteleuton

COMMENTARY: LINES 1019-41

(1036, 1043, marsuppium), and wrongly replaced here, also owing to homoeoteleuton (1029, 1044), as well as restored to their original position; see 1041-2^a, note.

1029. mēa . . . caussa: cf. 727.

liber esto: the formula of manumission; cf. 1148, note.

1030. nemp' iubes? the verb is emphatic; 'do you really order me (to be free)?' i. e. as master.

imperi . . . in te: cf. Hor. Od. iv. 4. 2 cui rex deorum regnum in aues uagas permisit. Possibly te is abl.; cf. Mil. 611 (MSS.). Messenio takes si quid . . . mihi as strengthening iubeo.

1031. patrone: the manumitted slave was the cliens of his old master. Messenio adapts himself to the new conditions at once; cf. 1032, 1033 fui.

1031-2. 'quom tu liber es . . . gaudeo': Messenio imagines himself returned home and receiving the congratulations of his fellow-slaves; cf. the actual congratulations he receives, 1148. For a similar imaginary scene cf. Merc. 946-50. quom, when used thus as equivalent to quod, 'whereas' (after gaudeo, &c., cf. 1148; Epid. 711), is generally regarded as an old neuter sing. (acc.) of the relative.

1032. credo . . . uobis: Messenio's imaginary answer to the imaginary congratulations. Credo was the conventional answer to such congratulations; cf. Ter. Ad. 972, Andr. 939, 946-7.

1034. domum: i. e. to Syracuse, where his real master lived.

1035. minime: spoken aside. Men. had had enough of clientes.

1036. opsignatum: in the absence of locks and keys of the modern diversity of pattern, householders guarded against pilfering on the part of slaves by affixing seals to bags, chests, cupboards, and even wine-jars.

1038. reddibo: cf. Cas. 129; this form of the future seems to indicate an original distinction between -do = δίδωμι and -do = τίθημι: the original future of reddo in the sense 'give back' may have been réd-dābo, which by natural weakening of the unstressed syllable would become réddibo. Mess. here exit, leaving Men. to meditate on the strange vagaries of fortune he has experienced.

1039. nimia mira, 'very strange occurrences'; cf. Amph. 616, 1105; Cas. 625 tanta mira.

1041-2^a. The true reading in these lines is very doubtful; the difficulty of restoring the original is increased by the fact that ll. 1037-43 appear in P twice, (a) between 1028 and 1029, and (b) in their present place, and that differences of reading occur between the lines as given in the first place and as given in the second: the readings of the two passages will be hereafter referred to as (a) and (b) respectively. It is reasonable to suppose that the passage had been omitted in some early copy owing to homoeoteleuton, marsuppium being the last word in both 1036 and 1043 (for the same reason 1044 appears in P after both 1036 and 1043), and that it was restored to the text, first in the wrong place, before 1029 (owing to another homoeoteleuton, 1044 quo uolet, 1029 quo uoles), and then in its original position. The most serious difference of reading between (a) and (b) occurs after excludunt foras (1040), where (a) gives uel ille qui se petere modo argentum. modo qui seruom se meum || esse aiebat. quem ego modo emisi manu, while (b) gives etiam hic seruom esse se meum aiebat quem ego emisi manu: it will be noticed that the last nine words of (b) are almost identical with the last ten of (a). From the traces that remain in the Ambrosian palimpsest, it is clear that that MS. gives ll. 1037-43 in their right position only, but omits 1042 and 1042^a. So much for the facts; three suggested elucidations may be given. (1) Lindsay suggests that the omission of 1042-42^a in A and (b) was due to homoeoteleuton (emisi manu 1041 and 1042^a), and that the variation of reading between (a) and (b) arose from the lines having originally been arranged as he gives them in the text. According to this arrangement hic . . . quem ego emisi manu will be contrasted with alii 1040, and uel ille will mean 'even he'. Objections are that the passage thus displays repetition to the point of incoherence; that hic 1041, ille 1042, is 1043, all refer to the same person; and that uel ille should naturally mean 'for instance, that fellow' (cf. 873^a). (2) As elsewhere the readings of (a) are inferior to those of (b), we may here adopt the reading of (b) with the slight change of esse se meum to se meum esse, and delete lines 1042-42^a, the reading of (a), as being a clumsy interpolation made up from 1041 and 1043. This would give a triple contrast between alii 1040, hic . . . quem ego emisi manu 1041, and socer et medicus 1046, ll. 1043-5 being a parenthesis. (3) We may with Niem. prefer the reading of (a) here, and suppose that uel ille introduces a particular example of a general statement given in a missing line contrasting in sense with 1040. In the confusion of the double restoration, such a line as Niem. suggests, alii appellant me eum qui non sum, et subueniunt, adiuvant, may well have dropped out after 1040 owing to similarity of beginning. Niem. further conjectures that etiam hic of (b) may be a corruption of words omitted before seruom in 1042 as it stands in (a), and proposes to insert etiam ignotus mihi after [modo] argentum [modo] qui, deleting each modo (for a similar corruption in P cf. 495). If both suggestions are adopted, the passage 1040-3 will stand thus:

- 1040 alii me negant eum esse qui sum atque excludunt foras;
 1041 (alii appellant | me eum qui | non sum, | et subueniunt, adiuvant :)
 1042 uel illē | qui se petere argentum, | qui (etiam ignotus mihi)
 1042^a seruom se meum esse aiebat, quem ego modo emisi manu, 1043 is ait se, &c.

This arrangement would give the sense required, without repetition; there would be a triple contrast, alii . . . alii . . . socer et medicus, 1042-5 being parenthetical, and illustrating the generalization of 1041 by a particular case introduced by uel; cf. 873^a.

1042. se petere argentum: sc. aliebat; 'said he was fetching (going to get)'.

1044. quo uolet: original mood retained.

1045. quando . . . factus sit: the force of the perfect is 'when he has been completely restored to sanity'; or perhaps the tense simply represents the fut. perf. indic., which would here be normal. The subjunctive is used here either to mark indefinite time (quando = ōtrav), or to hint at the improbability of his recovery; or may be due to 'mood-attraction', on which see Lindsay, Syntax of Pl., pp. 67-8. Scan sit, which retains its original quantity (= siet). As Messenio has offered to bring him some money for no apparent reason, Men. naturally concludes that he is mad, but proposes to profit by that madness. Neither of the Menaechmi has a high standard of honesty; cf. Men. II's trickery, 524-49.

petat = repetat.

1047. nihilo esse . . . sētius quam somnia: sc. sunt; the adverb in conjunction with esse as in the phrases bene fui, &c.; cf. Truc. 172 longe aliter est amicus atque amator; Ter. Phorm. 529-30.

1049. si possum, 'in the hope of'; for tense and mood see note on 418. Men. thinks he had better at least pacify his wife.

Men. I now disappears into the house of Erotium; at the same moment Men. II enters R. with Messenio. Men. II had gone harbourwards with the intention of sailing away at once (878); failing to find Messenio he had started back again, and had then met Messenio, who was on the way to fetch the money for his supposed master (1038), and whom he rates for giving him the slip.

1050. men . . . te: object and subject respectively of conuenisse.

1051. aduorsum mi . . . uenires: cf. 437, note.

quin modo, 'why, didn't I just now . . .?' Used thus, quin (= quī-nē, 'how not?') is equivalent to nonne introducing a rhetorical question that makes or corroborates an assertion; cf. 1058; Capt. 1017 quin, inquam, intus hic est.

1052. homines qui = (ab) hominibus qui; so where antecedent should be abl. alone, cf. 311 above; or dative, cf. Aul. 595 pueri qui = pueris qui; Mil. 598. This attraction of the antecedent to the relative is normal in O. Lat. when the antecedent stands in the relative clause, as Mil. 155 hic ille est lepidus quem dixi senem. It was in imitation of the less ordinary usage that Vergil wrote urbem quam statuo uestra est, Aen. i. 573.

sublimen: see note on 992.

1054. quom̄ ego āc̄curro: the indicative is quite normal after quom̄, even in classical prose, when the quom̄-clause contains the more important statement (so-called 'inverted' construction); here the historic present is used for vividness ('when suddenly I rush up').

ingratiis : a modal ablative used in the sense of 'against his (her, their, &c.) will', without qualifying word where no ambiguity can arise; cf. Amph. 371; Mil. 449; rarely qualified by a gen. or possessive adj., as Cas. 315 amborum ingratiis; Merc. 479 tueis ingratiis.

1056. petere : cf. 1042. It is wrong to say that in these lines the pres. infin. is loosely used for the future; petere means 'go to fetch', as uisere means 'go to see'.

quantum potest : cf. 850; the verb, when impersonal, does not suffer tense-change, as the clause, being equivalent to an adverb-phrase (summa celeritate), is treated as fixed and unchangeable. When the verb is personal it varies in tense; cf. Aul. 119 quantum potero.

1057. praecucurristi obuiam : a pregnant expression, lit. 'you ran on ahead in my way'; what he means is 'you ran on ahead (by a secret route and then came back) to meet me'. Messenio imagines that his master has repented of the promise he supposes him to have made (1029), and has played him this trick in order to repudiate it.

quae fecisti : i. e. in giving him his freedom.

infitias eas : cf. 396, and for the accusative (of motion) cf. 1020, 328. Livy often uses the phrase infitias ire, followed by acc. and infin. or a quin-clause; the construction here may be acc. and infin. (supply te ea fecisse), or (ea) quae fecisti may be the direct object, infitias eas being = infiteris; cf. Most. 100 gnaruris uos uolo esse hanc rem. The force of the present eas after a historic verb is 'in order to deny (as you intend to deny)'.

1059. mepte : the emphasizing suffix -pte is elsewhere found attached to possessive pronouns, as Capt. 371 tuopte ingenio; Most. 156 meopte ingenio, &c.

1060. Men. I now comes out of Erotium's house, shouting back to Erotium and her slaves; cf. 110 seq. This line and the next two are iambic octonarii. Scan hērcle ēā.

1061. facietis ut . . . apstulerim : lit. 'will you bring it about that I have taken', i. e. 'will you establish it (as a fact) that I have taken'. Hiatus after unstressed ego, cf. 903; but see App. Crit.

1062. Messenio now catches sight of Men. I.

speculum tuom : cf. Amph. 442, where Sosia is puzzled by the resemblance of the false Sosia (Mercury) to himself, and says quem ad modum ego sum (saepe in speculum inspexi), nimi' similest mei. Shakespeare has an echo of this line in Com. of Err. v. I. 417 : 'Methinks you are my glass, and not my brother.'

1063. consimilest = consimilis est (for consimili' est); cf. Amph. 537 qualest = qualis est. For the phrase cf. Amph. 443 tam consimilest atque ego. (Possibly these phrases should be printed consimilist, qualist = consimilis't, qualis't; see Introd. 7. I. D. c. i).

quam potest : probably impersonal.

1064. noscito, 'take stock of'. Cf. Amph. 441 quom illum contempho et formam cognosco meam.

1065. Men. I now catches sight of Messenio, and hastens to address him, having designs on the marsupium.

1068. Menaechmo: cf. 43. The use of the appositional dative in this and similar phrases is common in O. Lat.

1069. domus et patria: Bücheler's correction eadem urbs is unnecessary, as domus and patria refer to Syracusae and Sicilia respectively. Havet suggests domus et patri(a e)a est mihi: he thinks that the bracketed letters have been omitted by haplography, and ea restored in the wrong place. This certainly improves the rhythm.

1070. hoc . . . est: Men. II, thinking the other a trickster (cf. 1077-8), answers churlishly.

res, 'the truth'.

noui equidem hunc, 'well, at any rate I know this one'; here Mess., who has himself got confused between them, points to Men. I. His error continues throughout his speech; he sets himself right in 1076; cf. 1084-5. Similarly in the Com. of Err. the Duke addresses the wrong Antipholus, v. 1. 362: Duke. Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first? Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse. Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which.

1071. egoquidem evidently emphasizes the first person more than equidem 1070.

huius . . . huius: pointing to Men. I and Men. II respectively.

1072. ego hunc cēn sebam: this line is addressed to Men. I.

hunc . . . huic: referring to Men. II.

exhibui negotium: i.e. by asking him for his freedom; Gk. πράγματι παρείχων.

1073. This apology is addressed to Men. II.

stulte . . . atque imprudens: for union of adv. and adj. used adverbially cf. Capt. 960. We should say, 'if I said anything foolish unawares'.

1074-5. Men. II clears up the confusion by a pertinent question.

1076. The sentences in this line are addressed alternately to Men. II and Men. I. Mess. now distinguishes them correctly. A speaker similarly addresses two interlocutors alternately in Rud. 1089.

tu seruom quaere: to Men. I, 'you must look for (another) slave'. For this use of quaerere cf. Livy iii. 45. II sciat . . . conditionem ('a new match') filiae quaerendam esse.

tu salueto: tu uale, 'greeting to thee' (to Men. II); 'farewell to thee' (to Men. I). This seems better than to take both these sentences as addressed to Men. I in the sense 'farewell and prosper', or 'farewell for ever' (the formula uttered over the dead).

Edd. who adopt the latter view quote Capt. 744; Verg. Aen. xi. 97-8. Havet, who takes these words in the way preferred above, states that as a general rule saluto is used by characters in Plautus only in reply to a greeting; the opening greeting is always salve. He gives as illustrations Asin. 296-7; Curc. 234-5; Merc. 283-4 (reading of A); Rud. 416. He adds that it is used here either as a more ceremonious formula, or that it has full future imperative force, and = 'to you (Men. II) I shall presently say salve'; i.e. when he formally greets his old master as patronus on receiving his freedom; cf. 1031; Most. 746. The former and simpler of these explanations is to be preferred. Rud. 103 is against Havet's view.

1077. hunc: pointing to Men. II.

quae haec fabulast? 'What's all this business?' A slang use of fabula (cf. Germ. Geschichte), as in Most. 937; Pers. 788; Ter. And. 747: pl. fabulae = foolish tales, nonsense; cf. 724 above.

1078. Why did not Men. II express incredulity in 1068-9? Probably because he thought that Men. I was either joking or attempting a confidence trick (cf. 1087). Again, why does not Men. II at once perceive that Men. I is the brother whom he is seeking? The answer is that dramatic requirements make it necessary that the ἀναγνώσις should be slow and gradual; that it is so slow, however, is one of the improbabilities of the plot.

Moscho: cf. 407.

1081. Messenio's words down to seuocabo erum are spoken aside.

spem . . . quam suspico, 'that consummation of which I have a presentiment' (explained in next line): for spes = 'fulfilment of hope' cf. Merc. 843 spem speratam quom optulisti; and for this use of suspico(x) cf. Rud. 1091, Ter. Heaut. 614.

suspico: but cf. Rud. 1091 suspico. So in Plautus we find opino, ludifico, mereo, vago, as well as the deponent forms.

1083. patrem et patriam: 'anticipatory' construction. Singular, because the Menaechmi mentioned only one father and one country between them.

commemorant pariter, 'mention in identical terms'.

quae: either neuter, as referring to nouns of different gender, or feminine, agreeing in gender with the last noun.

1084. quid uis? naturally both answer in a duet to the call Menaechme.

1085. uter: relative; cf. 187; 'but (I want the one) of you two that . . .' Cf. Com. of Err. v. 1. 369: Adr. 'Which of you two did dine with me to-day?'

uostorum: a colloquial form of the partitive gen.; cf. Aul. 321; Stich. 141.

1087. Scan hōmō aūt; but see App. Crit. Legitimate hiatus: Introd. 7. IV. B. a. i, pp. 52-3.

1088. If the reading of the text is accepted, it is best to mark hiatus, not after hominem (see App. Crit.), but after uidi; the last three words are spoken slowly and impressively; see Introd. 7. IV. D. d, p. 56.

hominis: sc. alterius. It is probable that similis was invariably followed by a genitive in Plautus; in the few places where MSS. give dative, they should be altered (as here, where the source of error is obvious). See Lindsay's Captiui, note on 582.

similiorem numquam uidi: sc. quam hic tui est similis; or, better, read comma at end of line.

1089. aqua aquae: cf. Mil. 551-2, and Fr. comme deux gouttes d'eau.

nec lacte est lactis, &c.: the same expression Amph. 601; Mil. 240; the English equivalent is 'as like as two peas'. For the archaic nom. lacte cf. passages just cited, and Bacch. 1134.

1090. autem, 'moreover'.

poste: introducing another argument; Gk. ἔπειτα. On the form cf. 838, note.

1091. meliust: classical prose melius erit with perf. infin. Cf. 329.

hunc (= Men. I) is the object of both infinitives. Hiatus at the diaeresis. Havet suggests hunc (<me>) percontarier; this would improve the rhythm, and give point to perge . . . esse, 1093-4; and it is Messenio alone that conducts the investigation.

1092. hercle qui: cf. note on 428.

1093. si inuenis: for colloquial substitution of pres. for fut. in the protasis of a conditional sentence referring to the future cf. Mil. 1213 diuitias dabo, si impetras; Capt. 331, and the phrase si sapiis. See also 847, note.

1094. spero: sc. me inuenturum (as then he would get his freedom).

1095. quid ais tu? addressed to Men. I.

1096-8. Messenio addresses Men. I: huic . . . hic . . . huic refer to Men. II.

1098. dixti: huic: hiatus at a pause between antithetical clauses, or scan dixti: hū'ic. Possibly dixisti should be read; but for dixti closely following dixisti cf. Merc. 658.

1099. operam . . . mihi dare: in a double sense, 'give me your attention', and 'do me a service' (i.e. by procuring me my freedom). With uobis, operam dare has latter sense only.

1100. quod uelis: object of impetres; cf. Mil. 1200 quod uolui . . . impetraui; Capt. 232-3.

1101. tam quasi = tamquam si, quasi being a shortened form of quam si. Cf. Curc. 51 tam . . . quasi soror mea sit with Asin. 427 tamquam si claudu' sim.

emeris: cf. 921 percipit.

seruibo: for this form cf. Merc. 546, and see note on scibo, 386 above.

1105. possum : spoken with a lordly air.

agite uterque . . . dicite : cf. notes on 674, 779, 1119.

1106. quod sciam : not here limitative, but relative with subjunctive of generalization.

1107-22. This long-drawn interrogatory is tedious to read, but would be made amusing on the stage by the airs assumed by Messenio in his rôle of detective, and by the evident enjoyment with which he conducts the cross-examination ; cf. 1114, 1121.

1110. conueniunt, 'tally' ; cf. 1131 ; Ter. Phor. 53 conueniet numerus quantum debui.

1111. longissime, 'furthest back' ; i.e. 'what is your earliest recollection ?'

1112. ut abii, 'when I went away' ; this temporal clause is resumed by a redundant postea. It is better to take it thus than to suppose a double construction after the unexpressed memini, namely ut abii . . . me decerrare, 'how I went . . . (and) that I strayed'. For the facts cf. 24-33.

abii Tarentum : the best MS. available (B) here reads habitarem tum ; other MSS. abii tarentum variously divided ; while for auehi in 1113 B¹ and B² read abiit and abii respectively. Havet, ingeniously arguing from the order in which the circumstances would have impressed themselves on a child's memory, proposes cum patre ut nauī Tarentum, supposing that nauī was corrupted successively into nabi, habi (B), and abii (P^{CD}). He further suggests that the abiit(t) of B at the end of 1113 represents an abii displaced from 1112, which he replaces thus : cūm patre ut nauī Tarentum a(bii á)d mercatum, póstea. (Cf. 26-7, clearly derived from this line.)

1113. Scan mē dēerrāre, or mē dēerrārē with hiatus at diaeresis.

1114. serua me ! 'protect me', i.e. grant that I be not disappointed. A phrase used when an un hoped-for joy seems to be on the verge of fulfilment ; cf. Capt. 976 ; Curc. 640. Cf. the complementary phrase used when there is no longer any doubt, 1120.

quid . . . taces ? to Men. II. Messenio will have no interruption ; he wishes to complete his detective triumph ; cf. 1121.

1115. Messenio further questions Men. I.

patria has first syllable short in Plautus, and is therefore followed by hiatus here, perhaps owing to the influence of the lost ablative-ending -d ; but see App. Crit. Cf. 1151.

1116. septuennis : cf. 24.

cadebant primulum, 'were just beginning to be shed'. Domestic detail of this sort is often introduced to evoke laughter from a modern music-hall audience. It was scarcely necessary for Lambinus to quote three Latin authors in proof of this physiological fact ; for literary references to it cf. Aristoph. Ran. 418 ; Juv. xiv. 10 cum septimus annus Transierit puerum, nondum omni dente renato.

1118. ut . . . maxume memini, 'to the best of my recollection'.

1119. uter eratis . . . maior? (sc. nati) = uter uostrorum erat (as 1085); colloquial, cf. 779, 785, 1105.

1120. di . . . uolunt: his hope is realized; see 1114, note.

1121. si . . . tacebo: Messenio's great detective act is not yet completed.

dic mihi: Messenio turns to Men. I again.

1122. uno nomine: for this abl. (of description) cf. Capt. 590 neque . . . ullus seruos istoc nominest.

1123. Hiatus at a pause between two contrasted sentences; cf. 1098, and see Introd. 7. IV. D. c. ii, p. 56.

Sosiclem: cf. Arg. 4. Note that this is the first mention of this fact in the play itself.

1124. contineri . . . queo: same expression Rud. 1172. contineri has middle force.

1125. Scan sāluē. | ēgō sum: the hiatus is due either to a dramatic pause preliminary to Men. II's surprising disclosure, or to his embracing Men. I at this point. See Introd. 7. IV. D. d.

1127. Niem. fills the gap thus: te (dēcrasse a patre | et surruptum ab homine ignōto) et patrem, &c.; cf. 37-9, 1113. Hildyard does not mark a lacuna (no trace of one appearing in the MSS.), but reads renuntiatum est de te, et patrem mortuom.

1128. mutauit: cf. 40-4.

nomen . . . fecit mihi: i. e. indidit; cf. Livy viii. 15. 8.

1129-30. Scan sēd mihi hōc | rēspōn|dē; or, better, read sēd mi hōc.

1131. Teuximarchae: this is Merula's correction of MSS. teuximarce, for which Stowasser reads Teuxinarchae, taking the name as = Θεοξενάρχη.

conuenit: cf. 1110.

1132. From this line to the end the Ambrosian palimpsest (A) is again available, but in a partly legible state only; see 594, note.

annis multis post: see App. Crit. The order given by A may be justified on the ground that the hiatus after the vocative insperate marks either a dramatic pause or a fraternal embrace; cf. 1125. The expression ('many years afterwards') is elliptical, the sense being obviously 'so many years since I last set eyes on you'. For this combination of adverbial post with ablative of measure cf. Verg. Aen. vi. 409 longo post tempore; similarly post is combined with abl. of time, Amph. 481 decumo post mense; Hor. Sat. i. 6. 61 nono post mense.

1135. hoc erat quod . . . uocabat: according to the usual explanation quod uocabat is subject, and hoc complement, of erat; lit. 'the fact that she called you . . . is after all (i. e. means) this'; more freely 'so that's the explanation of her calling you . . .' The expression hoc est (erat) quod . . . is a formula used when a speaker has hit upon the explanation of something hitherto mysterious; cf. Merc. 711; Asin. 864; Cas. 531 hoc erat ecaster quod me uir . . . orabat meus, ut properarem; Verg. Aen. ii. 664 hoc erat, alma parens, quod me . . . eripis? Cf. also illuc (istuc) est quod (Rud. 1258, &c.). It is possible in all these cases to take the relative as adverbial (= propter quod; see note on 677 quid est quod) and the demonstrative as subject; or, still taking the relative-clause as subject, to regard the demonstrative as adverbial.

MENAECHEMI

huius uocabat nomine: it is best to take this in the sense 'called you by his name', i. e. 'called you Menaechmus', huius referring to Men. I, to whom the name really belonged. Messenio is addressing Men. II, who is properly Sosicles. If the words are taken as meaning 'invited you on his account', i. e. 'in mistake for him', the sentence will be illogical, the explanation being mixed up with the fact to be explained. Again, in 1136, where uocat does mean 'invites', its sense is defined by the words ad prandium.

1136. hunc (i. e. Men. I) is complement, te subject, of esse.

quom uocat: historic pres. with quom was a colloquial usage; cf. 1115 quom . . . auehit; Amph. 668 quom abeo; Hor. Sat. ii. 3. 61 and 277.

1137. namque, '(yes,) for . . .'

hic: he points to Erotium's house: so huic 1139, huc 1140.

1138. clam as a preposition is followed by acc. in Plautus; cf. 152.

1138-9. quoi pallam surrupui . . . eam dedi: loose asyndetal arrangement of clauses; or perhaps paratactic (eam for quam). See App. Crit. quoiam, suggested by Redslob, would necessitate scanning uxōrem, and would here be relative, though quoius -a -um is usually interrogative in Plautus; cf. however Rud. 745. Ritschl reads quoi quam pallam . . . eam dedi, which would be too stiff for conversation; Brix puts a colon after domo 1138.

1139. hanc: he holds out the palla.

1142. Cf. 476, from which the missing word is supplied.

aurum hoc: he now displays the spinter.

1144-5. memet esse: supply te as subject. See App. Crit.; Müller proposes me esse, (<credo>), credidit. Havet's suggestion med adesse (corrupted into med esse) is perhaps the best; Erotium had been expecting Men. I back from a walk (cf. 213-15), and when Men. II appeared, thought that Men. I had arrived.

1146. numquid me morare quin . . . siem? 'I suppose you put no obstacles in the way of my receiving my freedom?'. Cf. Aul. 612 ne adfinem morer quin . . . meam . . . filiam ducat. Or perhaps, if moror negatived + quin is here used as Livy (e.g. iii. 54. 4) uses moror negatived + quominus, 'I suppose you have no objection to . . .?' me being anticipatory. In any case the words are addressed to Men. II; cf. the next line.

ut iusti (= iussisti); referring to 1093 liber esto, &c.

1147. fac : sc. ut liber sit.

1148. liber esto : cf. 1029, 1093. Manumission of a slave at Rome was effected by one of two methods : by a formal ceremony in the praetor's court, which consisted of the owner's striking the slave with a vindicta (liberating rod), turning him round, and then dismissing him with the words liber esto (cf. Pers. Sat. v. 75 una Quiritem uertigo facit; ibid. 78 uerterit hunc dominus, momento turbinis exit Marcus Damas) ; or, as here, by an informal pronouncement of the formula liber esto in the presence of a witness ; cf. Ter. Ad. 970.

quom tu es, &c. : Men. I jokingly congratulates Messenio in the very terms in which the latter had, in his presence, imagined his fellow-slaves to be addressing him, 1031-2. At the same time, congratulations to a newly emancipated slave were usually expressed in this formula ; cf. its ironical use, Epid. 711. On this use of quom (= quod) see 1031-2, note.

1149-50. meliores . . . auspicio : he means either (1) that as he has already been deluded by an informal manumission (1029), he would this time like one 'under better auspices', i.e. carried out formally before the praetor, which it would be impossible to revoke ; or (2) that the gift of freedom without a more material gift would not carry with it certainty of freedom for ever (e.g. he might fall into debt, and become the bond-slave of his creditor) ; he wishes for some 'still better luck' to enable him to keep up his new dignity : this wish he obtains, 1155. For similar requests cf. Epid. 727 nouo liberto opus est quod pappet ; Ter. Ad. 980-2. Probably Messenio speaks this line aside, as the next lines contain no reference to it ; when a suitable opportunity occurs he prefers a definite request openly, 1154-5.

1151. nóstra éx : the hiatus may perhaps be due to the disappearance of the abl.-ending -d ; but see App. Crit. Brix suggests éx nostrá, which gives a bad rhythm.

1153. auctionem : cf. Poen. 1421, where Agorastocles sells his property by auction before departing for Carthage with Hanno. In classical prose the phrase for holding an auction is sub hasta uendere.

quidquid est : sc. mihi.

1154. eamus intro : into which house ? See 963-4.

frater : see App. Crit. here and 1152. The repetition of frater is natural under the circumstances ; it occurs six times between 1133 and this line.

scitin : to draw attention.

1155. praeconium, 'the job of auctioneer'. Praecones were of two kinds : public praecones, appointed publicly to conduct auctions of state property, booty, &c. ; and private (professional) praecones, who combined the callings of crier (equivalent to modern bill-sticker ; cf. 46) and auctioneer : the latter gave public notice of auctions (cf. 1156 conclamari) as well as conducting them. Cf. Cicero's metaphorical use of the term, ad Att. xiii. 12. 2 Ligarianam (his speech pro Ligario) praeclare uendidisti (advertised): posthac quidquid scripsero, tibi praeconium deferam.

nunciā qualifies conclamari, but if Bergk's reading is accepted (see App. Crit.) it qualifies fore. The word = nunci-am; see on 962.

1156. fore quidem diēsēptimi, 'yes, as taking place this day week'. For diēsēptimi cf. Pers. 260; die as 'temporal locative' has in agreement with it an adj. in the locative case; cf. 1157 mane . . . septimi; Most. 881 die crastini, and the ending of the first component in postridie, quotidie. See also 1005, note.

1157. Menaechmi: sc. honorum. Messenio here invites the audience to the auction; cf. 880-1.

sane, 'without fail'. Alliteration and jingle are part of the auctioneer's stock-in-trade.

1158. supellex usually means all movable property except uestis and aurum; probably these are included here, as Men. I was leaving the country.

fundi: country estate with house attached; aedes: town house; cf. Dig. l. 16. 211. To avoid hiatus Havet reads praedia, aedes, supposing fundi to be an error for ῥῑdi or ῥῑuidi, i. e. praeuidia (cf. praeuides = praedes), final -a having dropped before aedes. (The assonance would certainly be suitable here; cf. note on sane, 1157.) See, however, Introd. 7. IV. D. d, p. 56.

1159. quiquilicebunt, 'at whatever price they will fetch' (lit. be bid for); quiqui probably represents the locative of quisquis, and = quanticumque; see 549, note.

praesenti pecunia: as in modern auctions. For the phrase cf. Cic. ad Att. ii. 4 praesentem pecuniam solui imperavi.

1160. uenibit: retention of original long quantity here is due to pause before comic παρὰ προσδοκίαν.

quoque etiam: colloquial redundancy. Brix denies, however, that the phrase is ever tautological in Plautus, and says that here quoque = 'besides' (the other goods), and etiam = 'actually', 'even'. See also note on 1161 quinquagesies.

emptor: participial, = empturus; cf. 274 pransoribus.

1161. uix credo, &c.: spoken in a depreciatory tone: 'I scarcely think the whole sale will bring him in as much as—five million.' The joke lies in the παρὰ προσδοκίαν.

capiet: sc. Menaechmus I.

quinquagesies: (for the usual quingages, probably a vulgarism introduced metri gratia; cf. Joe Gargery's architectooralooral) = quingages centena milia sestertiūm, nearly £45,000, reckoning the sestertius at 2½*d.* When sums of money are mentioned, a numeral adverb with sestertiūm denotes so many hundred thousand sesterces, a distributive numeral with sestertia so many thousand sesterces. Leo suggests quingagesimas (sc. partes), i. e.

two per cent. of the real value of the goods. Havet accepts this conjecture, and, on the ground that Messenio had not met the Matrona, while Men. II had experienced her tongue and temper, alters and redistributes ll. 1160-1 thus:

MEN. II. Venibit(ne) uxor quoque? MEN. I. Etiam si quis emptor uenerit, nix, credo, tota auctione capiet quinquagesimas:

the last speech meaning, '(Yes, but) even if any purchaser turns up, I hardly think that she will fetch two per cent. of the proceeds as she stands (totā)'. Havet does not, however, adequately prove that auktionē = auktionis by his reference to Capl. 569; and both his suggestion and Leo's weaken the comica uis of the passage. The text used by Warner seems to have assigned etiam . . . uenerit to Men. I, as he translates 1160 thus: Mess. . . . 'Will ye sell your wife too Sir?' Men. Cit. 'Yes, but I think no bodie will bid money for her.'

1162. plaudite: cf. Hor. A. P. 155 donec cantor 'uos plaudite' dicat. The plays of Plautus and Terence regularly end with a request for applause, made either by the last speaker in the play, as for instance here and in Amph., Mil., Most., Rud.; or by the grex or caterua (the whole troupe of actors), as in Capl., Trin., &c.; or by the cantor (actor employed to sing the cantica), as in Terence's plays. Shakespeare imitates this usage, e.g. in the Epilogue to All's Well, 'Your gentle hands lend us', and in the closing words of M. N. D., 'Give me your hands, if we be friends'.

APPENDIX ON LL. 590-5

592-3. Of the many suggested emendations of this verse perhaps the best is Ritschl's dixi, eam (better, dixei, eam) controuersiam ut || sponsio finiret (Vahlen differret: i. e. put off the final decision). This gives the same sense as the present text. Brix⁹ adopts these changes, and further alters aut plus aut minus to haud . . . haud m. (or haut . . . haut m.). Teuffel supports the latter change, and interprets the passage as meaning, either: Men. being in a hurry said no more than was necessary, but at the same time no less; or, preferably: Men. did not fall into the error of saying (claiming) too much or too little. To illustrate the latter rendering he refers to Cic. de Orat. i. 36. 166-8, where a story is told of an advocate's endangering his case by claiming too much through ignorance of the law; cf. Most. 631-2 DA. nihilo plus peto. TR. uelim quidem hercle ut uno nummo plus petas (i. e. for then you would lose your case). These parallels are hardly appropriate; for (i) if the cliens was making a claim at all, his claim was evidently a fraudulent one: Cicero's point was that the advocate had a just claim, but claimed slightly more than was due; and (ii) since Men. knew his cliens to be in the wrong (594), it must surely have been his aim to get more or less than the truth inserted in the terms of the sponsio. On the other hand Teuffel's first rendering lacks point, though it does not conflict with his interpretation of praedem dedit (see below, iii).

A few other suggestions may be noted. Ritschl, followed by Brix^{1, 2} reads plus minus (= circiter) ; but in the passage given as a parallel, Capt. 995, the phrase used is plus minusque, which there means 'both more and less'. Sicker, followed by Niemeyer, reads dixeram in controuorsiam (haplography). Onions shows that comparatively few and trifling changes are needed to rearrange ll. 592 to 597 (meis) as a continuous passage of trochaic septenarii.

593-4. quid ill' qui praedem dedit? nec magis, &c. There can be no objection to taking nec here in its ordinary adversative meaning of and yet . . . not, the general sense of the passage being : 'I took the utmost pains to get the case settled by a sponsio—and what d'ye think of my cliens, who was fool enough to insist on a regular hearing? And yet (in that case he was bound to be defeated, for) never have I seen a man who was more obviously in the wrong: there were three strong witnesses against him (whose evidence might, however, have been evaded by means of a tricky sponsio).' Teuffel raises the curious objection that, if praedem dedit is taken here in its usual sense of 'gave security for the mesne profits', i.e. 'let the case proceed to a regular hearing in iudicio' (see Notes, 590), nec will be meaningless. Apparently he imagines that nec must mean nor indeed (i.e. must be corroborative, and cannot be adversative). He takes praedem dedit in the sense of 'gave security for the penalty' (i.e. as though already convicted), and interprets the passage as follows: 'What of my cliens, who caved in?—and indeed I never saw a man more obviously in the wrong: (more rascal he for wasting my time).'

This interpretation is open to grave objections, namely :

(i) Men.'s general complaint about having his time wasted is contained in ll. 585-9: in ll. 590-5 he gives vent to the particular complaint that in this case he wasted not only his time but his labour and ingenuity. He would in any case (even if his cliens had won) have wasted his time; his labour would not have been wasted if his cliens had acted sensibly.

(ii) According to this interpretation Men., with absurd inconsistency, first complains that his cliens caved in, and then immediately uses words which imply that he was right in doing so.

(iii) If the cliens gave surety for a penalty (i.e. a fine), the point at issue must have been some offence committed by him; therefore this interpretation conflicts with Teuffel's second interpretation of haut plus haut minus as given above.

(iv) A surety for a penalty was vas not praes.

Teuffel's alternative proposal, to take praedem dedit in the sense here preferred, and to shift ll. 594-5 so as to follow l. 589, is quite unnecessary if nec is taken in its adversative sense.

SCHEMA METRORVM

- Arg., Prol., vv. 77-109 Iamb. Senarii
 110 Choriamb. Tetram.
 111 Glyconicus cum Ithyphallico
 — ◡ — ◡ — ◡ — ◡ — | — ◡ ◡ ◡ ◡ ◡ ◡ ◡
 112-3 Cret. Tetram.
 114 Duo Glyconici
 — ◡ — ◡ — ◡ — ◡ — | — ◡ — ◡ — ◡ — ◡ —
 115-8 Cret. Tetram.
 119 Troch. Octonarius
 120-2, 128-9, 131-4 Iambici
 123-7, 130, 135-225 Troch. Septenarii
 226-350 Iamb. Senarii
 351 Anap. Dim. Acat.
 352 Iamb. Dim. Acat. cum Anap. Monom.
 353 Anap. Trim. Acat.
 354-6 Iambici
 357-8 Anapaestici
 359 Iamb. Senarius cum Colo Reiziano
 (◡ — — | — — ◡ — | ◡ — ◡ — | — — — —)
 360 Iamb. Dim. Acat.
 361-4 Anap. Dim. Acat.
 365 Iamb. Dim. Acat.
 366 Colon Reizianum (— ◡ ◡ — — ◡)
 367-8 Anap. Tetram. Acat.
 369-465 Troch. Septenarii
 466-570 Iamb. Senarii
 571-9 Bacchiaci, sed 577 Colon Reizianum
 580 Cret. Tetram.
 581-3 Bacchiaci
 581 — ◡ ◡ — | ◡ — — | ◡ —
 ? 582 ◡ — — | ◡ — — | ◡ — — | ◡ — — | — — | ◡ — — 584 Versus Reizianus (vel Iamb. Dim. Acat. cum Bacch.
 Dim. Acat.)
 585 Iamb. Senarius
 586 Glyconicus cum Dochmio
 (— ◡ — — — ◡ — — | — ◡ ◡ — — —)
 587 Bacch. Tetram.
 588 Anap. Tetram. Acat.

SCHEMA METRORVM

- 589-92 Trochaici
 ? 593 Glyconicus cum Dochmio
 (— ∪ — ∪ ∪ — ∪ — || — — — ∪ —)
 594-5 Trochaici
 595^a-600^a Iamb. Dim. Acat.
 601 Troch. Septenarius
 602-3 Anap. Tetram. Cat.
 604-700 Troch. Septenarii
 701-52 Iamb. Senarii
 753-72 Bacchiaci
 762 — ∠ ∠ | ∪ ∠ ∠ | — ∠ ∠ | ∪ ∪
 763 ∪ ∠ ∠ | ∪ ∠ ∠ || ∪ ∠ | — ∠ ∠
 763^a — ∪ ∪ ∠ | ∪ ∠ ∠ || ∪ ∠ | ∪ ∠ ∠
 764 ∪ ∠ ∠ | — ∠ ∠
 771 ∪ ∠ ∠ | — ∠ ∠ || — ∠ | — ∠ ∠
 773-4 Troch. Octonarius
 775-871 Troch. Septenarii
 872-98 Iamb. Senarii
 899-965 Troch. Septenarii
 966-71 Bacch. Tetram. Acat. et Cat.
 ? 972 Iamb. Senarius
 ? 973 Versus Eupolideus (— ∪ — ∪ — ∪ ∪ — — — — ∪ — ∪ —)
 ? 974 Bacch. Dim. Cat. (— ∪ ∪ ∠ | ∪ ∠)
 975 Bacch. Tetram.
 976 Iamb. Dim. Acat.
 977-9 Troch. Tetram.
 980 Iamb. Septenarius
 981 Colon Reizianum (— ∠ ∪ ∪ ∠ —)
 982 Troch. Octonarius
 983-4 Anapaestici
 985 Duo Glyconici (∪ ∪ — — — — ∪ — || — ∪ — ∪ — ∪ —)
 986-7 Iamb. Octonarii
 988-94 Troch. Septenarii
 995-1005 Iamb. Octonarii
 1006 Iamb. Dim. Acat.
 1007 Troch. Octonarius
 1008-59 Troch. Septenarii
 1060-2 Iamb. Octonarii
 1063-1162 Troch. Septenarii

INDEX TO NOTES

Numbers refer to notes on lines indicated.

A.

Ablative, instrumental 187, 266, 882.

modal 134, 883, 1013, 1054.

of description 1122.

of time in -i 1005, 1020 (cf. 1156).

Ablative-ending -d, traces of 91, 395, 526, 563, 1115, 1151, Introd. pp. 56-7; extended to accusatives me and te 147, Introd. p. 56.

-endings of third declen. in Pl. 479, 492, 1020.

Accent, variation of 321-2, 681, 696, 979.

Accusative, adverbial 121, 146, 642, 677, 1135.

after verbal noun in -io 1016.

cognate 779, 896.

exclamatory 640, (with infin.) 1004-5.

of motion without prep. 328, 396, 1020, 1057.

Acrostic Arguments p. 118.

ad fatim 91.

ad iudicem (= in iudicio) 587.

ad me (to my house) 948.

ad noctem 965.

ad umbilicum mortuos 154-5.

adeo 21, 123.

ad fatim hominum 457.

ad porto 3.

adscriptum 183.

ad simulo similiter 146.

Adverb of place for personal relatives or demonst. (quo) 96, (hinc) 359, 790, 799, (illim) 799.

Adverbs in -am 962, 1155.

aduorsitor 437.

Aediles, Jurisdiction of 590.

aequom oras 153.

Aesculapius 885-6, 887.

aestive 255.

aetati tuae (= tibi) 675; cf. 720.

Agathocles 409-12.

agitare 710.

agitator 160.

agite uterque dicite 1105.

ābas 634.

aio)(nego 162.

āis 487, 820.

āit 885.

aliquid, adjectival 847.

aliquos uiginti dies 950.

alitus Arg. 7.

Alliteration 252, 404, 461, 572, 867, 903, 1157-8.

ālus (?) 838.

amabo ('please') 382, 851; with ut-clause 425, 524.

amator)(amans 128, 268.

amitto = dimitto 343.

amoenitas 356.

Anacoluthon Arg. 1-2; 59, 64, 311.

Anaphora 939-40.

anceps 858.

ancillula 339.

animus despondere 35.

ante solem occasum 437; cf. 1022.

antelogium 13.

Anticipation of subject of dep. cl. 179-81, 246, 465, 1083, 1146.

Anticipatory apposition 107, 536, 734.

ānus 85.

Apollo as god of healing 885-6, 887.

Appeal to spectators 879-81, 1157, 1162.

INDEX

Apposition of whole and part 858-9.
aps te = de tua pecunia 545.
aps te metuo 266.
apsoluo 780.
apsque led esset 1022.
apstinere, cases after 983.
aqua aquae (similis) 1089.
aqua intercus 891.
armillae 536.
artua 855.
assulatum 859.
 Asyndeton 352, 580, 962, 1138-9.
at in apodosis 670, 746.
at enim in O. Lat. 790.
atque adeo 11, 123.
atrum unum 915.
attinit (perf.) 589.
 Attraction, 86, 169; of antecedent
 311, 1052.
auctio 1153.
aucupare 570.
audes, polite use of 149, 697, 1003;
 cf. sodes.
audin? 310.
audio = live to hear 852.
aurum 121, 1142; cf. 801.
aut plus aut minus 592; Appendix
 pp. 211-12.

B.

Baxeae 391.
bellus 626.
bene fui, 485; cf. 603.
bene uocas (polite refusal) 387.
bis tantā pluris 680.
Bromius 835.

C.

Cadere (of teeth) 1116.
caesum sub furca 943.
Calchas 748; heteroclitic declen. of 748.
canes (nom. sing.) 718, 837.
cantherino ritu 395.
capital 92.
captare 646.
captiuos)(seruos 79.
cārēre 797.
Catameitus 144.
catena)(compes 79.

Cato's influence, traces of 767,
 Introd. p. 15.
caue, quasi-interjectional 994.
 tenses of dependent verb after 994.
caueo, cases after 122, 151, 265, 786.
caueo cautius 151.
cēdō 197, 544.
census capiat ilico 454.
Cerialis cena 101.
cerritus 890.
certo scio 292.
 † ceruso † 984.
chlamys 658.
cinaedus 513.
circūmīre 231.
clam, prep. with acc. 1138.
clamore flagitauer 46 (cf. 1155-6).
clauos 86.
clientes 574, 585, 1031.
clueo 577.
coepti, passive of, with pass. infin.
 718.
coepio 960.
comesse 628; cf. 611.
comitia 459.
commemorant pariter 1083.
commentare (?) 1019.
commetare 1019.
commoditatis articulos 140.
condicere 124.
condiciones confragasas 591.
condigne 906.
 Conditional sentences, peculiar 194-5, 249, 416, 760, 847, 857, 903, 982, 983, 1022, 1093.
 sequence of tenses in 238-9, 847.
 Conditions attached to threats, tenses in 416, 847, 857.
condonare 657.
conferre gradum (= festinare) 554.
confidens (in bad sense) 615.
 Confusion between 3rd conj. -io verbs and 4th conj. verbs 754.
conlocare (arrange) 967.
conloqui with acc. 431.
consimilest 1063.
consitus 756.
 Constructio κατὰ σύνεσιν, 561, 679.
consulere with double acc. 700.

INDEX

contineri non queo (quoniam) 1124.
conito 459.
conuenire 'tally' 1110, 1131; 'meet',
 with acc. 431.
 Cooks in Plautus, 218, Introd.
 pp. 13-14.
cor modeste situmst 971.
Coriendrus 295.
coronam surrupuisse Iouis 941.
credo (ans. to congratulations) 1032.
 Critical notes, important 26, 85,
 105, 152, 179-81, 183, 200, 223,
 229, 268, 269, 276, 279, 292, 308,
 319, 405, 428, 432-3, 434, 438,
 453, 454, 495, 497, 508, 526, 556,
 558, 584^a, 589, 604, 614, 617,
 638, 639^a, 645, 647, 680, 696, 729,
 739, 744, 754, 773-4, 784, 808,
 821, 824, 828, 831, 838, 853,
 854, 865, 872-3, 877, 887, 896-7,
 913, 915, 916, 937, 941, 957,
 982, 983^b, 984, 988, 992, 1009,
 1011, 1013, 1019, 1028, 1041-2^a,
 1069, 1088, 1091, 1112, 1127,
 1131, 1138-9, 1142, 1144-5, 1155,
 1158, 1161, Appendix, pp. 211-12 (on 592-3).
cum uiro cum uxore 666.
cyathisso 303.
Cygnus 854.

D.

Dammum (of a meretrix) 133, 988.
Dative, appositional 42, 1068.
 ethic 897.
 of advantage or disadvantage 966, 985, 1011.
 of person judging 971.
 predicative 693, 695, 827.
datum uoluisse 461.
de tuo 149.
de uerbis tuis 266 (cf. 934, 935).
deerrare, scansion of 1113.
deferre 133, 508.
deierare 814.
delicias facere 381.
deliramenta loquitur 919-20.
de mensum 14.
 Deponents appearing as active forms in Plautus 1081.

desisto = disto 777.
despicatus habere 693.
detergeo 78.
detinit (perf.) 589.
di me seruatum uolunt 1120.
di te amabunt (reply to greeting) 278.
dicitur dies 585.
diērectus 442.
diēseptumī 1156.
discertare (?) 809.
disputare 50.
dissertare 809.
 Dittography 824, 913.
diurna stella 175.
dixeram controuersiam 592.
dixi 937, (following dixisti) 1098.
-do = τιθημι 472, 604, 1038, = διδωμι 1038.
domitus 105.
dote fretae 767.
 Double comparative 55, 978.
 Double construction after memini (?) 1112.
 Double iambic ending 66, 328, 480,
 487, 750, 849, Introd. pp. 28-9.
 Double negative (neque haud) 371, (nec numquam) 1027.
 Doubling of medial s 403, 918 (cf.
 727, 986).
 Doubtful lines 13, 39, 67, 405,
 432-3, 434, 497, 525, 556, 558,
 638, 896, 916, 957, 982, 983^b,
 984, 988, 1041-2^a, 1160-1.
 Dramatic irony 539-40.
dūcere 887.
ductare 694.
duis 267.
-dum 161, 378.
dum = quamdiu 93, 728.
durare 781.
duri (oculi), 923.

E.

ēaldem 428.
eampse 638, 772.
eapse 179-80.
ecastor 213, 372.
eccere 401.
eccum, -am 109, 179-80, 565.
ecquid = nonne 146.

INDEX

coquid sentis? 912.

edit 90.

educare)(alere 98 ; cf. 905.

egoquidem)(equidem 1071.

ei (interjection) 303.

elecebrae 377.

ellebori iungere (ingere?) 913.

en 250, 566, 1018.

Emendations suggested 229, 279,

435, 454, 984, 998.

emeris 1101.

emittere manu (seruom) 1023.

enim (asseverative) 162, 846.

enunquam 143, 925.

Epidamnienses, Epidamnii 1004.

Epidamnium 33.

Epidamnus 32, 51, 55, 263-4.

equidem 369, 1070-1.

ergo emphasizing previous statement 758 ; = εργον 758.

es, quantity of, in Plautus 943.

esca (meal) 457.

esca uinciri 88.

esse = edere 917 (cf. 628), 982 (?).

esse with adverbs, (impersonal)

382, 603, 677 ; (personal) 100,

258, 485, 692, 696, 1047.

etiamne (= 'actually' in qns.) 710 ;

(in requests) 697.

etiamnum 462.

eu (= εὖ) 174.

eu edepol 160.

eu hercle 316.

euax 127.

euho 835.

euoluere (deprive) 903.

ex re tua 661.

examussim 50

exaudire clanculum 478.

excidere (metaph.) 667.

excludere 668.

exclusissimus 698.

excussus (= excisus) 403.

exemplo eo = ita 985.

exhibui negotium (= πράγματα παρ-εἶχον) 1072.

expeditē 176.

expetit (perf.) 763.

extra numerum 182.

F

Fabre 132.

fabula, colloquial use of 1077.

face (imperat.) 946, 948.

facere (= ῥέειν) 196.

facere ut ('establish it as a fact that') 1061.

facilin 928 (cf. 795).

faenerato 604.

familia 74.

faxit 861.

faxo, uses of 113 ; with fut. indic.

parat. 326, 661, 791 ; with fut.-

perf. parat. 521 ; with subj. 113.

femina canes 837.

ferre pedem 554.

fides (protection) 999.

fini, prepositional use of 859 (cf. 13).

flagitium hominis 489, 709.

florentem facere 372.

formicinus gradus 888.

frustra = gratis 694.

frustra esse = errare 692.

= falli 559.

frustratui habere 695.

fundi)(aedes 1158.

fungor with acc. 223.

furca (instrument of punishment)

943.

Future in -ibo 386, 808, 1009, 1101

(cf. 1038).

of generalization 87.

-perf. in -so 113, 416.

-perf., use of 54, 270, 521, 661.

G.

Garlands at feasts 463.

gaudeo quom (with indic.) 1031-2.

Gender in Plautus 168, 855, 865.

Genitive in apposition to pers.

pron. 871.

of definition 489.

of description 100.

of O-stems in -um 134, 542.

of respect 110.

partitive, with adverbs 262, 446,

457.

genius (of patron) 138.

Gerund, modal 883.

INDEX

glandionidam 210.

Graecia exotica 236.

gracisso 11.

Grati Graeculi 715.

Greek words, corruptions of 144,
205, 303, 527, 854; cf. 11-12, 13.

H.

Habet = habitat 69; cf. 308.

hanc rem gerere \ alias res agere 825.

Haplography 26, 276, 333, 428,
453, 584^a, 784, 808, 853, 887,
1011, 1069, 1088, 1144-5, 1158.

hau male 853.

haud umquam (strong negative)
200-1.

Hecuba (canis) 714.

Hellebore a remedy for madness
913, 950 (cf. 289).

hercle qui 428, 1092.

heres (= possessor) 62, 477, 479.

Heteroclitic declen. 748, 841, 913.

heus 673, 844; heus tu 696.

Hiatus: after disyllables (mihi, tibi, ego, &c.) 389, 690, 719, 740, 840, 903, 1003, 1061,
1087, Introd. pp. 52-3.

after monosyllables ending in -m
82, 93, 188, 194-5, 227, 230,
258, 335, 393, 482, 519, 565, 601, 675, 903, 1054, Introd.
p. 52.

after monosyllables ending in a vowel (with shortening)
Arg. 1; 9, 115, 238, 300, 325,
379, 460, 473-4, 502, 513, 578, 618, 651, 744, 786, 789, Introd.
pp. 51-2.

after or before expletives, vocatives, &c. 160, 316, 432-3, 471, 489, 497, 517, 567, 604,
640, 713, 851, 908, 1003, 1004,
Introd. pp. 54-5.

at caesura, but due to other causes 91, 280, 292, 508, 544,
567, 737, Introd. pp. 53-4.

at change of speaker 147, 156, 216, 280, 379, 1003, Introd.
p. 55.

at diaeresis 156, 200, 219, 379, 399, 604, 771, 795, 851, 859,
939 40, 1013, 1028, 1091, 1113,
Introd. p. 53.

at pause, 219, 292, 453, 476, 495, 508, 533, 544, 563, 567, 690,
713, 720, 737, 740, 851, 859,
1088, 1098, 1123, 1125, 1132,
1158, Introd. pp. 55-6.

doubtful, Arg. 2, Arg. 8; 13, 26, 39, 85, 89, 223, 249, 405, 428,
446, 525, 558, 597, 739, 784,
896, 1088, 1115, 1151, 1158,
Introd. pp. 57-8.

due to loss of abl.-ending -d(?) 91, 147, 395, 526, 563, 1115,
1151, Introd. pp. 56-7.

Hiero 409-12, Introd. pp. 12-14.

Hiluri 235.

hinc = a me 359, 790, 799.

Hippolyta 200.

hircosālius (?) 838.

hircus † alus † 838.

hisce, nom. plur. masc. 958 (cf. 997).

Hispani 235.

historia (traveller's tale) 248.

Histri 235.

hoc erat quod ('so that's the meaning of . . .') 1135.

hodie in threats 903, 1013.

Homoeoteleuton 438, 639^a, 1028, 1041-2^a.

hūc 40, 1098 (?).

I.

I, contemptuous 638.

I-stems, various forms of Nom. of in O. Lat. 758.

iam nunc 47.

ignorabitur (disguise) 428, 468.

ille, emphatic 649, 748.

illi (adverb) 308, 996.

illic (dat. of pron.) 304, 841.

illim 799.

immo 535, 954.

Imperfect indic. in -ibam 634.

imperium in aliquem (?) 1030.

in dies (distributive) 896.

in iudicio 587, 590.

in iure 587, 590.

in rem esse, construction after 985.

INDEX

in scirpo nodum quaerere 247.
incedere 888.

Indicative in indirect questions 119,
179-81, 207.

Indicative pluperfect expressing indefinite frequency 483, 717.
pres. 'deliberative' 320; (with
iam) 176; (with quam mox) 153.

indutus with acc. 190.

induitae 191.

Infinitive as verbal noun (in acc.) 842, (in dat.) 233.

in -ier 46, 913, 1004-5.

infinitas ire 396, (with acc.) 1057.

ingratiis 1054.

inlutilis 168.

inpos animi 110.

inpune esse 621.

insanire primulum 916.

insignite 1008.

intercus 891.

interea loci 446.

interim 190.

intrassis 416.

intrōire 662.

inuere (?) 821.

ipsus 100.

istaec = istaece 520.

isti adverb (?) 617.

istic (dat. of pron.) 1011.

istuc = by the by 536.

ita rem esse 737.

ita . . . ut limitative 53.

iubeo with parat. subj. 956.

iungus, -eris (= ἔνγος?) 913.

iusti = iussisti 1146.

J.

Judicial procedure 585, 587, 590, 592, 593 (see also Appendix on ll. 590-5, pp. 211-12).

L.

Lacte (nom.) = lac 1089.

lampadi[bū]s 841.

lana 121.

lārūātus 890.

lembus 442.

'Lengthening' of final syllables 52, 203, 327, 487, 506, 841, 846, 877,

887, 921, 943, 956, 1045, 1101, 1160, Introd. 7. III, pp. 48-9.

leconinum cauom 159.

lepide ut fastidis 169.

leuior quam pluma 488.

liber esto (formula of manumission) 1029, 1148.

liceo 1159.

licet (giving assent) 158.

Liparo 409-12.

liuēre (?) 828.

Locative, temporal 1156 (cf. 1005, 1020).

loculi 691.

locusta 924.

logos 779.

longissume (of past time) 1111.

Loose construction Arg. 1-2; 40-1, 59, 311, 493, 1138-9.

lorarii 990.

luci (abl. of time) 1005.

lūteus)(luteus 917.

M.

-m, wrongly added in MSS. 984.

madidus (boiled) 212.

Madness, symptoms of 828, 829, 909, 960, 961.

mala (abuse) 717.

mala res 496.

malam crucem 66, 328.

malam magnam crucem 849.

male habere = scold 569.

malost = damno est 356; cf. 133.

malum (interjection) 390.

malum (= punishment) 249, 977.

mandare (quasi-legal use) 783.

manifestum teneri 594.

Manumission of slaves 1029, 1031, 1031-2, 1148, 1149-50.

mare superum 236.

maxumam malam crucem (ire) 328.

maxume (giving assent) 430.

maxumo malo uōstro (fertis) =
'you'll rue it if you . . .' 1013.

meā caussā 727, 1029.

mea Commoditas 137.

mea fide 894.

medicina (a surgery) 992.

meliores opus auspicio 1149-50.

INDEX

metuere with acc. and pres. infin.
802, 1091.
metel 1144-5.
metre 1059.
mers 758.
Metres; see Introd. pp. 28-34;
Sch. Metr.; and notes on lines of cantica passim. metuere (show caution) 983^a, (with play on ordinary sense) 983^b.
mihi certius facit 763^a.
nulle passum 177.
miluina (fames) 212.
mina = Greek μῆν 205.
minari with pres. infin. 842.
minime mirum 338.
mira videntur 361.
molae 975.
molestiaest 827.
mōlitum . . . mōlitum 979.
monstrare = praecipere 787-8.
'Mood Attraction' 111, 229, 556, 1045.
mordicus 194-5.
morigera moribus 202.
moror negated with quin-clause 1146.
mortales multi 30.
morus 571.
multo tantā amplius 800.
multus = molestus 316, 572.
munditia 353.

N.

Nam (interrog.) 233.
nasum 168 (cf. nassum 194-5).
nauales pedes 350.
navis 344.
nē asseverative with expletives 160, 604.
nē with past jussive 611.
-nē = nonne 283, 852.
nec adversative, Appendix p. 212.
neque adeo 21.
†neque utrum† 988.
nēquis quin 190.
nesciō quem 406.
nesciōqui 1002.
Nestor 935.
ni = nē 419-20, 881; cf. 912.
nihil hoc confidentius 615.

nihili esse 972.
nihilo esse scilius quam somnia 1047.
nimia mira 1039.
nimio = multo 979.
nimis (= very) 81, 696.
nisi si 248.
nocte hac (= last night) 822.
noctua 653-4.
nomen fecit mihi 1128.
nomen indere 42.
non dicam dolo 228.
non for nonne 283.
non imprudens 419 20.
non longos logos 779.
non patiar quin 725-6.
non satis (= not at all) 622.
non taces? = 'nonsense!' 1026.
nonne in Plautus 283.
noscito 1064.
novi (aorist) 299, 379, 745, 748.
nugas agis 621.
nulla crepitant = non crepitant 926.
num . . . saltem? 624.
numero (adv.) 287.
nummus - didrachmon 219, 290, 542.
numquam (strong neg.) 533, 683, 1010.
numquid vis? (polite leave-taking) 328.
nunciam 47, 1155.
nusquam gentium 262.
nuto)(nicto 613.
nuto with ne-clause 612.

O.

o, pronunciation of, before liquids 170.
ob eam industriam 123; cf. 791.
oboluit huic 384.
occasus quasi-dep. part. 437.
occidis fabulans 922.
occisast haec res 511.
occupo (= φθάνω) 847.
odiosus 884.
odores (= spices) 353.
Omission of est (es) in exclamatory phrases 338, 434, 650, 1024.
of est (sum, sunt, &c.) in dep.
clauses 119, 983^b.
of object 729.
of subject 454, 556.

INDEX

operam dare (two meanings) 1099.
oportebat abreptum 194-5 (cf. 995).
opseco hercle (cry for mercy) 1016.
opserere (pugnos) 1012.
opserva quid dabo 472.
opsignatus 1036.
opsonatu redeo 277.
optinerier 913.
opus est with ablative of past part.
 592 (cf. 753), 955.
ordine 679.
-os after -u- 245.
osse fini 859.
-osus (-ossus) suffix, origin of 918.

P.

Pacatus) (hostilis 1005.
palla 130, 429.
pallium 130, 658.
palpator 260.
papae 918.
parti (ablative) 479.
 Partial apposition 674; cf. 858-9.
patiundum 670; cf. 690.
patria, scansion of, in Plautus 1115.
patronus 574, 585, 1031.
paucis 779.
pectere (slang use) 1017.
pedum pernicitas 867.
pendentem fodiam 951.
penetrare pedem 400, 815-16.
Peniculus 78, 286 (see also Personae, pp. 118-19).
per ego uobis deos dico 990.
per solum 156.
per tempus 139.
percipit 921.
percitus (?) 269.
perditus 269.
perduint 451.
peregrina navis 340.
 Perfect for future indicating certainty 416; cf. 225.
periisti si intrassis 416.
pernonidam 210.
perperam 962.
Personae pp. 118-19.
peruorsus 899.
petere (go to fetch) 1042, 1056.
petere = repetere 1045.
Phintia 409-12.

phrygio 426.
 Physicians at Rome 885-6, 951.
pistrinum 975.
plaudite 1162.
-pleo compounds, cases after 901.
pluerat 63.
 Plural of generalization 739, 796, 803.
 Plural verbs with sing. indef. pron.
 192, 523, 556, 674, 779, 1105, 1119.
pondo duom nummum 542.
pondo unciam 526.
porci 289.
Porthaon 745.
portitor 117.
post combined with abl. of measure or time 1132.
poste 545, 838; (= secondly) 1090.
postillac 685.
postquam, tenses after 24, 34.
postulo with acc. and infin. (= ἀξίω) 443, 767, 794.
pote 605.
potine ut 466.
potior (more important) 971.
praecones 1155.
praeconium (auctioneer's job) 1155.
praecucurristi obuiam 1057.
praedes (litis et uindictiarum) 590, 593, Appendix p. 212.
praehibet 802 (cf. 979).
praesenti pecunia 1159.
praet 376, 935.
 Pregnant construction 51, 865, 1057.
 Prepositions, use of, in O. Lat. 328.
 Present, use of, for future 516, 612, 922, (in condit. clause) 122, 847, 1093.
pretium in bad sense 972.
primulum 916, 1116.
priusquam with historic present 276-7.
 with vivid present indic. 921.
pro (interjection) 473-4.
pro sano 298; cf. 927.
 Proceleusmatics 75, 119, 229, 253, 602, 603, 618, 773-4, 957, 977, 978, 983, 1001.
profiteri 643.
progredi 754.
 Prohibitions in O. Lat. 327.

INDEX

prōin tu 327, 782.
proinde ut 953.
 Prologue p. 119; Introd. pp. 20-1; 6, 7, 48, 55.
promittere ad cenam 794.
prope est quando 984.
properabo ? 754.
proventum est nequiter 964.
promisere 704.
 -pte suffix of pronouns 1059.
pudet, personal use of 642.
 Puns 49, 55, 136, 191, 257, 263-4,
 404, 610, 904, 978, 979, 982, 983^b, 1099.
purpura 121.
purpureus = puniceus 917

Q.

Qua gratia 150.
quae te res agitat ? 710.
quaere (= quaesce ?) 737.
quaere seruum = 'look for a (new slave' 1076.
quaerere = quaerendo 233.
quam mox (with indic. pres.) 153.
 with subj. pres. after verb of expectation 704.
quam potest impersonal 834, 1063.
quam rem agis 685.
quam si (with tam omitted) 968-9.
quam tu mihi nunc nauem narras ?
 402; cf. 321-2.
quam uis = quantumuis 318.
quando (causal) 202, 422; (of indefinite time) 303, 1045.
 Quantity, variation of 643, 754.
quantum potes 435.
quantum potest, fixed phrase 1056.
quasi = quam si 229, 1101.
quemquem aspexerat 717.
qui causal, moods after 309, 495, 806, 852.
 concessive 362, 397.
qui, adverbial ablative (interrog. or exclam.) 161, 396, 428, 1092.
 = aliqui (?) 428, 1092.
 instrumental 304, 452, 636, 743.
 locative (= 'gen. of value') 549
 (cf. 1159).
 - utnam 451, 931-3.

quid agis ? (greeting) 138.
quid ais ? (to draw attention) 162, 319, 487, (aliter) 602.
quid eo uis ? 266.
quid est quod 677 (cf. 1135).
quid id ad me ? 722.
quid me uobis tactios ? 1016.
quid mihi futurum est ? quid me
 futurum est ? 663.
quid si with pres. indic. 844.
quid tibi mecum est rei ? 323.
quidni with potential subjunctive in answers 912.
quidum ? 161.
quin- clause with non patiar 725-6.
quin, corroborative 615, 1051.
 with pres. indic. or imper., in commands 247-8, 382, 416, 561.
quinquagesies (comic form of quin- quagies) = 5 million sesterces 1161.
quingagesimas = 2 % (?) 1161.
quippe qui 586.
quippini ? 948.
quique = quicumque 572.
quiqui, locative (= 'gen. of value') 1159 (cf. 549).
quis following quando 664.
quōad in Plautus 769.
quod sciam 297, (aliter) 1106.
quoi Arg. 1; 362.
quoiatis 341.
quoui 493.
quouis -a -um in Plautus 1138-9.
quōtus modi clueat 577.
quom, causal, moods with 304, 363.
 etymology of 1031-2.
 tenses after 29, 1054, 1136.
 with indic. after gaudeo, 1031-2, 1148; (in 'inverted' construction) 1054.
quom tu liber es gaudeo (formula of congratulation to freed slave) 1031-2, 1148.
quoniam, temporal 481.
quoque etiam 1160.

R.

Raptum oportuit 995 (cf. 194-5).
reddibo 1038.

INDEX

- redimere* 673.
res = intrigue 482.
 = profit 737 (cf. 985).
respondere 621.
rest = res est 587.
rex (of a patronus) 902.
 Rhyming lines 597-600.
ridiculus (active) 318.
 Roman allusions, see Introd. pp. 15-16.
rosa (term of endearment) 191.
- S.
- s final, clision of 293, 1063;
 Introd. pp. 44-6.
s hard and x, confusion of 758.
sacres 290.
salus damni 988.
saluen aduenio ? 776.
salueto and salue, use of 1076.
salueto)(uale 1076.
salutem propitiam nuntio 1, 2.
Samiae (fores) 178.
satin ut — nonne 179-81.
satine = nonne 522; cf. 283.
scibo 386, 808.
scilicet 392.
scitamenta 209.
sei . . . seu 295.
sementem facere (of a thrashing)
 1012.
 Sequence of tenses neglected 785, 1057.
serua me, use of phrase 1114.
seruibo 1101.
seruio (abs.) 985.
seruirin 795.
seruo (= obseruo) 123; (aliter 980.
sescenta sexies (?) 896.
 Shakespeare quoted 49, 59, 154-5, 779, 1162, p. 119; (Comedy of Errors) 558, 782, 1062, 1070, 1085, p. 119, Introd. pp. 22-3.
 Shortening of long syllables :
 (bacchius to anapaest) 89, 114,
 126, 146, 229, 253, 259, 309,
 384, 510, 588, 592, 602, 889,
 978, 983, 983^a, 983^b, 984, 1028,
 1129-30, Introd. pp. 43-4.
 (iambus to pyrrhic) Arg. 4; 16,
 28, 222, 351, 372, 389, 468,
 527, 530, 542, 633, 638, 651,
 673, 675, 732, 773-4, 795, 828,
 860, 982, 1009, 1028, 1072,
 Introd. pp. 42-3.
 (of ille, iste, and the like) 22,
 23, 94, 145, 183, 275, 336,
 344, 604, 651, 782, 789, 791,
 853, 958, Introd. p. 44.
 (of imperative-endings) 179-80.
 197, 291, 416, 517, 603, 638,
 994, Introd. pp. 42-4.
 (owing to slurring of final -s)
 113, 384, 941, 978, 979, 983,
 984, 995, 999, Introd. pp. 44-6.
 (doubtful) 37, 39, 152, 556, 689,
 916, 1022, Introd. p. 46.
si, omission of 249, 983, 1022.
si inuenis = si inueneris 1093.
si possum 'to see if' 418, 1049.
si sapis 122.
si uiuo 903.
sic censeo, use of 569.
sic datur 604, 628 (cf. 472).
sic (deictic) 197, 351, 657, 1028.
sicilicissitat 12.
sies 110, sient 178.
similis, cases after, in Plautus 1088.
similu cum 745.
sincerus 290.
sincipitamenta 211.
sincipit 506 (cf. 633).
sine . . . dum 378.
sit 1045.
 Slave punishments 943, 951, 975-soerus 957.
sodes 545.
-sor (participial) 274.
sospitabo (?) 896.
spectamen 966.
speculum tuom (of a resemblance) 1062.
spes = fulfilment of hope 1081.
spinter 527.
 Spondaic word as 4th foot of iambic line 294, 499. sponsio 587, 590, 591, 592, Appendix, pp. 211-12.
squamossus 918.
 Stage management, details of 109,
 110, 130, 146, 226, 351, 446, 466,

INDEX

169, 533, 555, 558, 562, 567, 609, 627, 670, 700, 753, 754, 807, 831, 868, 870, 875, 879-81, 881, 909, 966, 990, 1010, 1018, 1049; Introd. pp. 16-21.
stalagmia 541.
stare (stand firm) 869.
sternere lectos 353.
stimulum (?) 865.
struces palmariae 102.
 Subject of infinitive omitted 347, 461, 482, 524, 634, 656, 842.
 Subjunctive, generalizing (in rel. clause) 111, 144, 1045, 1106; (in si-clause) 103, 502; use of 2nd pers. sing. in 95, 103; see also 'Mood Attraction'.
 hortatory (?) after quid melius quam (ut) 831.
 imperfect, in past jussive sentences 611; cf. 194-5.
 in clauses dep. on nescio 744.
 in -sim (opt. of S. aorist) 861.
 jussive 89, 249, 611; (paratactic with optimumst, 947, with iubeo) 956.
 of excluded alternative 332, 726.
 perfect, expressing wish 295.
 potential 160, 794, 912 (cf. 1024).
 pres. in -im 90, 267, (= optative) 451; cf. 295.
 use of, with faxo 113.
 when question repeated 299, 912, 1024.
 with ut in indignant qns. 683.
sublimen (adv.) 992, 1052.
sublimis (-em) 992, 1052.
subuenibo 1009.
subus piabo (?) 896.
 Suggestions (chiefly on metrical points) 92, 96, 126, 181, 221, 279, 292, 363, 454, 471, 495, 508, 563, 580, 590, 610, 617, 656, 683, 684, 689, 690, 754, 773-4, 784, 838, 855, 865, 979, 1015, 1088, 1112, 1135, 1158.
sultis 350.
supellex 1158.
supellex pellionis 404.
superas ut 192.

suppetias aduenire 1020, s. ferre 1003.
surrupiticius 60; cf. Arg. 2.
surruplus Arg. 2; 38.
suspico have a presentiment of, 1081.
suspirabo plus sescenta 896.
† sussiri † 432-3.
sussili (?) 432-3.
sycophanta 260.
 Synizesis 16, 35, 59, 81, 188, 221, 327, 344, 372, 376, 393, 428, 514-15, 542, 577, 588, 616, 638, 643, 658, 749, 769, 802, 804, 885, 902, 935, 953, 979, 1013, 1060, 1077, 1113, 1154; Introd. pp. 46-8.
 Syracuse, tyrants of 409-12.

T.

Tabula picta 143.
tam - adco 461.
tam gratias (polite formula) 387.
tam quasi = tamquam si 1101.
tantā (sc. pecuniā?) 680, 800.
temperi modo 1020.
tenere = comprehend 824.
terram conspiciere 228.
tetuli 381.
Tenximarchae 1131.
tibi 302, 323.
-tor, participial 65, 274, 1160.
tremulum Titanum 854.
triduum hoc 376.
tritius 403.
tū istic 651.
tu tu (owl's note) 653-4.

U.

Validus (?) 877.
uassa (baggage) 986.
ubi (?) 280.
ubi, final 152, 560.
uel - for instance 872 3, 873^a, 1041 2^a.
uelitati 778.
uenibit 1160.
uenire aduersum (alicui) 437, 464, 986, 1051.
uerba)(uerbera 978.
 Verbal nouns in io with acc. 1016.
uero . . . non uere (?) 821.
uerum ('yes') 1024.

INDEX

uesania (?) 877, 921.
uesanire (?) 877.
uestis 121 (cf. 801).
ueternus 891.
uetulum edentulum 864.
uiaticati 255.
uidere ἰ - hear 46, (- provide) 220.
uirere 828.
uiscerā 859.
uita in two senses 904.
uiuere = strong esse 202, 908.
Vlixes 902.
ultro 359, 688, 843.
unā operā = unā 525.
unā operā with potential subj. ('just as well') 794.
unguine (?) 913.
uocare 1135.
uolo with past participle 461, 1120.
uolup 677.
nostrorum colloq. gen. (partitive) of nos 1085.
uotas = uetas 848.
usus est with abl. of past part. 753.
ut abii Tarentum 1112.
ut (= ἐφ' ᾧ) 217.
ut, exclamatory 491, 571 (cf. 572).
ut introd. ind. qn. (?) 1112.

ut maxime meminī 1118.
ut ne introd. final clause 434.
ut, quasi-causal 861.
ut ratio redditur 206.
ut, temporal 63, 1112, (= postquam) 635.
ut with subj. in indignant questions 683.
utendam dedi 657.
uter (relative) 187, 1085, (interrog.) 1119.
uti quique 572.

W.

Wives, abuse of, in Plautus 767, Introd. p. 15.
 Word-groups 66, 321-2, 461, 681, &c., Introd. pp. 29 (iii), 38-41.
 W.W.'s Translation 140, 211, 247, 262, 376, 440, 458, 476, 610, 698, 703, 707, 782, 840, 866, 891, 925, 950, 1161, Introd. pp. 23-5.

Y.

y in borrowed Gk. words 11, 854.

Z.

z in borrowed Gk. words 11, 12, 303

PRINTED IN ENGLAND
AT THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

164066

LL P7217mJ
Plautus, Titus Maccius. Menaechmi.
Menaechmi

University of Toronto Library

DO NOT REMOVE THE CARD FROM THIS POCKET

Acme Library Card Pocket
Under Pat. "Ref. Index File" Made by LIBRARY BUREAU

